"Now we know Ralph will be home soon. No one knows what a wonderful Christmas gift this has been."

Amelia Nardella, when told her brother, Lieut. Ralph Nardello, was listed as a prisoner of war.

"I want to make it clear why I have appeared before the Bergen County Grand Jury. I have no axes to grind. I seek no political jobs or favors. I represent no pressure groups. I have no personal animosities.

"However, I think it is high time that the people find out what is going on behind our political curtain. The grand jury of any county is the people of that county. That is why I have felt duty-bound to give the Bergen County Grand Jury all the information that has come to me that might be useful in eradicating crime and corruption in Bergen County."

Clendenin Ryan, wealthy crime prober, after testifying before Grand Jury.

"The Christmas season of 1951 finds more and more of our workers far from home carrying the cargoes to bulwark freedom everywhere. It is fitting that your prime purpose as well as the aim of all of us, is to achieve a true peace modeled after the teaching of the Prince of Peace. It is in this spirit that I extend my heartiest wishes for a Merry Christmas and a New Year of Happiness."

President Truman in message to merchant seamen.

"I don't know why I did it. I must have had a brainstorm."

Joseph Cusmano, assistant deputy collector of Internal Revenue in Brooklyn, when accused of taking a bribe.

"The President asks every news medium to stress as often as possible that the prisoner of war list is entirely unverified."

Joseph Short, White House Press Secretary, on list of POW's submitted by the Communists.

“Joy To The World”

Christmas carols were born in Italy in the thirteenth century. Each year the Christmas season is ushered in by the singing of Christmas carols and hymns, and we hear once more the joyful, ever beautiful, familiar songs of Christmas which have been handed down through the centuries and which have been sung in every tongue by every nation.

This singing of Christmas carols in the streets of our towns and cities, in our homes and churches and schools, is an ancient and lovely custom.

It goes back to the days of old, when carols were sung in the streets by waifs and minstrels, when the Yule log burned on the hearth, holly and mistletoe was hung among the Christmas candles, the bear's head was paraded in grand procession, and songs made glad the festive and joyful Christmastide.

Surviving with all of these picturesque traditions of Christmas are the carols themselves, with their quaint words and delightful melodies. These original Christmas carols are preserved to us, composed in almost every language—simple folk songs, charming in their quaintness and with a reverent gaiety which only suggests the religious. For a carol, in its true meaning, is a song in which a religious theme is treated in a familiar and festive manner. A hymn is essentially devotional. So it is that many of our more familiar Christmas songs, such as “O Little Town of Bethlehem,” “It Came Upon a Midnight Clear,” and others which we commonly call carols, are not in the true sense Christmas carols, but rather Christmas hymns.

Many of us like to believe that the first carol ever sung was by the angel chorus on that first Christmas eve nearly two thousand years ago, when “Glory be to God on high, and on earth peace and good will to men” was caroled over the fields of Bethlehem.

But it is not until the thirteenth century that we find the beginning of the true Christmas carol, and Italy is its birthplace.

Here the friars, gathered around St. Francis of Assisi, tried to humanize the story of the gospel and composed songs about the birth of Christ, which they sang around a tableau depicting the surroundings of the holy manger.

From Italy the carol spread to Spain, France, England and Germany, where it retained its folk song qualities of legendary lore and simplicity, with a mingling of reverence and mirthfulness. The beginning of the eighteenth century marks the transition from the true carol to the more solemn and dignified Christmas hymn. “Hark, the Herald Angels Sing” and Adeste Fideles belong to this period. “Adeste Fideles” or “O Come, All Ye Faithful”, is perhaps best beloved of all Christmas hymns.

The nineteenth century brought the beautiful “Silent Night, Holy Night” and also “O Little Town of Bethlehem” written by Philip Brooks and inspired by a Christmas eve he spent in Bethlehem. Thus the Christmas carols have lived through the centuries. And so, on Christmas eve, as the candles burn in our windows, in remembrance of the Star of Bethlehem, and we hear youthful voices caroling these old familiar songs, let us rejoice that we are preserving ideals and traditions which will be forever the heritage of every Christian nation.

JUST A ... Column of Comment

It is expected that a number of the De Vita appointees will voluntarily remove themselves from their respective commissions. One of these, who will be hardly missed, is Frank Bagolie, business agent of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union and a member of the Industrial Commission.

Speaking of Industrial Commission, Joe Zimel, secretary of that august body, is busily engaged in developing a letter campaign in his behalf if the incumbents try to move him.

One of the Union boys who will bear watching from here on in is Joseph Krause, International Vice President of the United Textile Workers — AFL. Krause is calm and collected and one who weighs each word before he speaks it. An admirable trait.

The police department is really rife these days with no one knowing what the "score" is. It is a foregone conclusion that Jimmy Smith will again head the Detective Bureau with many new faces replacing the old De Vita boys. It's not right but that's the system.

We have been unable to find out what happened to Jim Whitaker. However, we learn that the "big brass" at Watson Machine Co. has finally gotten wise and have unceremoniously dumped Jimmy.

The Community Chest will present Rudolph Halley at its annual meeting during the last week in January, 1952. This affair should draw a packed house.

By the time you read this, Joe Masiello should have been named City Treasurer.

To all our readers . . . those who agree with us and those who do not . . . please accept our best wishes for a very joyous Christmas and a healthy, prosperous New Year.

Frances Langford receives The Morning Call Honor Award for outstanding services rendered to members of our Armed Forces. The presentation was made by Norman M. Logan, special events representative of The Call. Shown above are Miss Langford, Don Ameche and Logan.

LITTLE JIM joyfully looks forward to the happy prospect of living with parents he can truly call his own. Without the help of the Children's Home Society of New Jersey, Jim could have remained a homeless waif. He would have drifted through life helplessly without the needed love and affection only parents can give. Now he is "all washed up and ready to go" to his new home, where he will arrive in time to be a cheerful Christmas package for a fortunate childless couple — his new adoptive parents-to-be. It costs the Children's Home Society almost $900 to process a child for adoption. Even after the new parents have contributed their share, the deficit is over $500. If more thoughtful persons joined those who annually send a contribution to the Children's Home Society of New Jersey at 929 Parkside Avenue in Trenton as a Christmas remembrance in behalf of homeless children, then more tots like Jim could be placed with parents who can give them the protection of an assured future for the important years of childhood, adolescence and youth.

A TRULY HAPPY CHRISTMAS

Each year, when the scent of holly fills the air and the tinkle of bells announces the return of the Christmas season, my thoughts go back to last year and the most memorable Christmas of my life. Here is the story as I recall it.

It was Christmas Eve, just about dusk. Our five children were cutting up around the house thrilled and excited about the anticipated arrival of the jolly old man with the pack. Nothing could still their shrill voices or lessen their enthusiasm.

As I lay on my bed, resting after a very hectic day, I decided that there was no further use of my seeking any peace or quiet. I knew I wouldn't find it here. Suddenly a thought came to me. A thought with an ulterior motive which I was certain would restore tranquility.

Snatching a bright red comforter and calling to my wife, I prepared for the experiment. "You bring the children to the window in a few minutes," I told her, "I'm going to play Santa Claus".

Quickly I donned a Santa mask, wrapped the red comforter around me, tied some sleigh bells around my waist and I hustled down the stairs.

In a very few minutes the sound of the bells penetrated into the house and I could see the little noses pressed against the cold window pane, eager to get a glimpse of their beloved Santa. They were delighted beyond expression—and so were we.

My wife and I remember last Christmas as our most wonderful one because it was the very first Christmas that our children were old enough to enjoy it with us.

When the Fire's Out, There Are Toys To Be Repaired

Fireman Ferd Miller and His Buddies Fix Christmas Playthings For Needy Youngsters

All of us have often heard that it is "more blessed to give than to receive". Many of us have remembered these words and have given . . . little gifts, perhaps a few extra dollars to our favorite charity; small favors to friends and little acts of kindness which have given us that warm feeling of well being.

This is the story of a man who has given not only the worldly and material things but who has given his heart, spirit, mind and the use of his skilled hands to the service and joy of others.

More than 25 years ago, Ferdinand Miller, a member of the Paterson Fire Department, who is stationed at Engine No. 10, began a little project of repairing toys for the children of the neighborhood in which he lived and worked.

He was a skilled craftsman and his spare time hours soon brought happiness to many boys and girls, but more than that, it brought joy to the heart of Ferd Miller for not only was he continuing the skill of his hands but gaining that soul satisfaction which only comes from bringing love to someone else's heart.

Knowledge of his work spread and soon his project grew. The Paterson's Woman's Club asked him to repair toys for them which they could distribute to needy children at Christmas time. Ferd quickly complied and before long other groups throughout the area were bringing toys to mend. Realizing that many children who might otherwise never have any playthings, Ferd worked longer and later to ready his stock of broken and discarded toys.

For years he worked alone, but now he realized that he must have help if all the damaged toys were to be delivered in time for Christmas distribution.

He solicited the spare time help from his associates at the engine company and through the years that followed the small group of men, under the guidance of Ferd, fixed thousands of toys, bringing cheer and gladness into the hearts of hundreds of youngsters.

Many of the local organizations and charitable groups from all quarters of the city began bringing toys in ever increasing numbers. Time was of the essence because in addition to spare time projects the busy firemen had their regular duties to perform which not only consist of fighting fires and saving lives but also includes: maintaining the equipment, drilling, training, learning new methods of fire fighting and prevention and a host of other things which absorb a fireman's time and attention.

With official permission, Ferd began farming out the excess repair work to other engine companies. Repair equipment was forthcoming from many local merchants, who never gave a thought to the loss to toy trade, were only too happy to help along the project. In order to overcome the problems of storage and last minute rushes, Ferd and his boys began requesting toys in the spring and summer of the year.

Today almost every charitable organization in town is the recipient of these gay, newly painted toys which are in excellent working order guaranteed to delight the heart of any youngster.

In the years past, countless thousands of our own local boys and girls have played and passed on the toys which have been repaired by Ferd and his fire-fighting buddies.

Ferd Miller and his crew are to be commended for the excellent job they do in bringing happiness to so many thousands of youngsters each year. Theirs is the true spirit of Christmas giving.

EDITORIALS

Merry Christmas

This issue of THE CHRONICLE is the last before Christmas Day. It is fitting, therefore, that we pay tribute to this holiday that has so much meaning to all Americans and others almost the entire world over.

Besides being a religious holiday, Christmas has come to symbolize one of the finest gestures that man can make to his fellow man. That is the gesture of giving.

We make no finer contribution to a better world than when we unselfishly take something of our own material things to give a gift to someone for the mere joy of giving.

Many of us have come to regard Christmas giving in a cynical fashion, but in reality we are actually making a sacrifice when we spend money, which we could use to buy something for ourselves, to buy a present for someone else. Basically, it is a grand gesture.

But Christmas has many sides to commend it. Many weeks before, we begin to feel an atmosphere of gaiety and joy that lasts until the holiday. It is a force that pervades all of us to the point that for those many weeks life becomes pleasurable despite all our fears for the future. It is a release that all of us need.

There is the side that represents the part that family plays in Christmas. The side that calls for family get-togethers and dinners. The reason for the gathering of the family that happens so infrequently these days.

Christmas has the side, too, that places so much emphasis on children. It is the one holiday in the year that has real meaning to the youngsters for almost everything connected with it is done for them.

Many regard Christmas as the finest and pleasantest holiday of the year, and rightfully so. It is.

Merry Christmas to all from The CHRONICLE staff.

JUDGE JOSEPH A. DELANEY

The death of former Judge Joseph A. Delaney is mourned by many persons in this area.

The former judge, who died Wednesday, was almost a legendary figure in Passaic County and he was treated almost with awe by many attorneys who practiced before him.

During his long years on the bench, the jurist earned the respect of lawyers and laymen alike. He was recognized as a judge whose decisions were just and fair to all regardless of party or wealth or station.

The highest tribute paid to him was the fact that lawyers, who are the best judges of the ability of a jurist, recognized Delaney as a capable member of the bench. His ability, honesty and integrity were unquestioned.

He was a judge in the fullest sense of the word.

Frederick W. Van Blarcom

Frederick W. Van Blarcom, former prominent Paterson attorney, died in Florida at the age of seventy-seven.

Van Blarcom practiced law in Paterson for many years and was president of the Passaic County Bar Association for two years.

Active in the Republican party, he was county leader at one time and was county counsel and a member of the state legislature.

Van Blarcom was very well known in Paterson and had a great number of friends here. His death is a loss.

The Airplane Crash

The tragic death of the fifty-six persons in the Elizabeth airplane crash points up the need for greater safety and more precautions in the operation of our air lines.

Nothing can be done to bring back the lives of those who so tragically lost theirs in this accident. But we can do everything in our power to prevent a recurrence of a similar tragedy.

The three local Selective Service Boards, 36, 37 and 38, sent a total of fifty-nine men to the Armed Services. The contingent left from City Hall Annex.

The annual Christmas party of the Citizens Trust Company was held in the Alexander Hamilton Hotel with directors, officers and members of the staff participating in the festivities.

A huge trailer, containing an exhibit of life-sized figures of the scene depicting the "Lords Last Supper", has been placed on view on the Colt Street side of the City Hall. Sponsored by the Paterson Lions' Club, the exhibit is free to the public but donations will be accepted for the organization's work for the blind. The scene was taken from the famous painting by Leonardo da Vinci.

The Jewish holiday of Chanukah, which lasts for eight days, will start at sundown Sunday night. For the first time a giant Menorah will be lighted at the entrance to Temple Emanuel with ceremonies on each night of the holiday.

County Judge Louis V. Hinchliffe upheld the city ordinance requiring the presence of two motion picture operators in the projection booth in theaters at all times during the showing of films. William Moskowitz, of the M. and M. Amusement Company, of Main Street, had appealed a $25 fine levied in Magistrate's Court.

William R. Gaede, retired silk dyer, of 241 West End Avenue, Ridgewood, died in Paterson General Hospital, where he had been a patient for a week with a heart ailment. Until his retirement he was vice-president and treasurer of the Gaede Silk Dyeing Company.

TELEVISION SERVICE CAN BE RELIABLE

By J. PALMER MURPHY, Executive Secretary, Radio and Television Servicemen of New Jersey

(PART THREE)

There are three general types of service contractors: service departments maintained by some retail stores themselves, servicing only the sets sold in that store; service companies operated by the manufacturers, to service only those sets manufactured by that company; independent service companies.

The independent service companies are the most numerous. They operate in two ways: one can either make a contract with them direct, or have COD work done in lieu of a contract; or they work through retail stores which turn over to them their contract work. The service is the responsibility of the company with whom you have the contract: be it the X Manufacturing Company; the Y Television Retail Store; or the Z Service Company.

Make sure whose responsibility it is. When you want service, call that company direct. You may have purchased your set in Y Store, but Z Company has the service contract; you save time and trouble by calling Z Company direct for service. Unless the dealer holds the contract himself, you save yourself difficulty by calling the service company first.

You may decide to install the set yourself, or have a friend install it. If you or your friend knows what he is doing, well and good. Unless you have a good knowledge of television sets, however, you are better off, and safer, if you have someone trained in the work to do it for you. You may have it installed either by the dealer, or by a service company of your own choice.

Perhaps you just want the set installed, but no service contract. That is permissible too. In that case, when your set needs adjustment you can call a serviceman, and pay him by the call. Usually such calls are on a fixed rate: a flat charge for labor, plus parts.

Suppose your set doesn't work well. You have no contract, so you select a service company, and request service. Assuming that you have called a reliable contractor, he will give you an estimate before starting work. If the estimate is acceptable, he will attempt to do the work in your home if at all possible; if not, he will take it to his shop, and if necessary send it to the factory. One thing he may not be able to tell you, and that is how long the repair job will take.

If parts must be secured from the factory, or if the set has to be returned to the manufacturer, no estimate can be given on how long it will take, and it may take a long time. Manufacturers of TV sets are also working on radar and other electronics devices for the national defense effort.

They consider it, quite rightly, more important to turn out items for the military forces than to repair your set, so your set is perhaps put aside to turn out a rush defense job. This your serviceman cannot tell in advance. He will try to get the set back to you as quickly as he can, but he can't do the impossible.

Another source of delay in the securing of replacement parts lies in the location of the distributors of those parts. First, because of defense needs there is a shortage of parts; second, even though the manufacturer of your set may be located in your home town, the distributor may be located 50 miles away, and the serviceman must get the parts he needs from the distributor, not the manufacturer.

He must either get the parts by mail, which is quite slow, or he must go in person to the distributor. He cannot make a 50 mile trip every day and for every part; he couldn't afford it, nor could you. He has to wait until he has a sufficient order to make the trip worthwhile. If he didn't, the cost of your service would be much greater.

Suppose the serviceman comes to fix your set, and gives you an estimate. You accept it, and he does the job on the spot. Maybe it only takes 15 minutes. Bear in mind that the serviceman usually has a flat rate, minimum. He has to. He may only have worked on your set 15 minutes, but he has had to send a man and a truck to your house, paying for the man's time, the gas, oil, etc., on the truck. He has had to handle your call in his shop, and his overhead must be considered. All things considered, including the value of his technical skill, the charge is reasonable even if the time taken is not great to make the actual repair itself. Your serviceman is a doctor to your set. Your physician charges you a flat rate, too, for a visit.

Television is a delicate instrument, but if it is carefully selected and well cared for, it will give you a great deal of enjoyment. Use care in your selection of your set and in your choice of types of service and in your service contractor, and you should get a maximum of pleasure.

Dear Editor:

I turned on my radio the other evening and was surprised to hear some good programs. After getting our television set last year, we never turned on the radio again. It's strange to turn it on now and discover that there are still some good programs on the air.

In fact, I think the radio programs I heard were lots better than the television shows. And I liked the idea of being able to read while I listened to the program. You can't do that with television.

We're planning to listen to our radio more at our house.

Yours truly,
HERBERT LEWIS.

Dear Editor:

I found your article about the Girl Scouts very interesting. This is the type of thing I like to read in the CHRONICLE. Keep up the good work.

JOSEPH HAMILTON.

Dear Editor:

Some day we're going to be very surprised when the Russians drop an atom bomb on us. All this talk about the atom bomb and how many we have and how many they have will eventually lead to something, I think. We'd better get around to settling up our differences before we have trouble.

Yours truly,
HERMAN KATZ.

Dear Editor:

It is a pleasure to go through the streets of Paterson these days and see all the happy shoppers. The streets are filled with women and children who are having a wonderful time preparing for Christmas.

It's wonderful to see so much happiness at a time when all the world is despairing for the future. Thank God for Christmas with all its joy.

SIMON HANSTEIN.

CHRISTMAS IN HAWAII—There'll be no "white Christmas" in palm-lined islands of Hawaii but the Yuletide message of the Three Wise Men and the birth of the Savior are enacted by the school children there as in other parts of the world. Of varied ancestry themselves, they live together in brotherhood. In the above photo young shepherds of many nationalities surround the manger in traditional Christmas pageant.

Some More Gift Suggestions For Mr. Whiskers No. 2

Santa Claus,
North Pole, 1,
The World.

Dear Santa:

You were nice enough to accept a pack of suggestions forwarded to you in these columns last week as the staff of The Chronicle contributed a list of gifts you might bring to different members of the sports beat hereabouts, when you drop in—chimney and all—Christmas Day.

We had so many requests for more of the same to be forwarded to you that we have compiled another list on which you might be able to work. It's all in your chosen line of duty, of course, so if you don't mind, here are some more names and gift suggestions for them.

The same still goes: Don't take any wooden chimneys. And don't let anybody take you for a sleighride.

You might bring:

Elmer Costa — A nice, fat contract football now that he has Dave Bell — Track moving into position as a major sport in Paterson.

The Paterson Skating Club — Top honors in the annual silver skates meet at Madison Square Garden.

Marion Tomlinson and Marcella Trowse — National skating championships for both of these attractive Paterson stars.

The Paterson Crescents — A Santa Clause to buy the pro basketball franchise.

Fred Brevic — A click in organized baseball for this young pitcher from town.

Hank Ptak — Continued success in his diamond career after a big season last year.

Mickey Connolly — More winning fighters.

Tony Pasquale and George Mingin — A turn-back of the calendar to the days when they were having a lot of fun, with headaches to match, as baseball and basketball managers here.

Johnny Campana — More annuities, less meetings.

Johnny Lane — A request to sing "Four Walls" in his own inimitable fashion.

Nick Harvey — The return of the net to basketball.

John J. O'Brien — Four more clubs to keep the American pro basketball league active.

Cardy Gemma — A big season on the Muhlenberg College quintet, now that he's made such a good start.

Technical High School — A varsity football team.

Gene Woodling — An established job in the New York Yankees' outfield from the start of the season to the end. (The Fair Lawn player has to keep fighting to prove at the finish what was known at the beginning—he belongs!)

Television-Set Owners — All the sports events of importance, coming over the screen into their living rooms.

Mike Putz — Fifty years of running leagues in South Paterson.

Gary Voorman — Return of winning football to West Point as in the days b.c. (before cribbing).

Duke Leddy — Some more fight-announcing jobs, such as he used to do years ago when he was known as Paterson's Joe Humphries.

Paul Cavaliere — An assistant to referee the world's heavyweight championship bout.

All of you—A Merry Christmas, a Happy New Year, and many of them!

Sincerely,

THE CHRONICLE.

P.S.—Just by way of making a funny, Santa, did you ever stop to think that there are two famous "Mr. Whiskers"? There's Uncle Sam (who wears the sparspangled suit and lives in Washington), and you, both equally famous. But there are two differences:

One arrives March 15th, the other on December 25th.

One takes—the other gives!

Santa Will Have To Handle Things Himself This Christmas

By CARL HUNTER

They won't get me to play the role of Santa Claus for the kids this year if they have to call off Christmas. I'm still available for Hamlet, but old Saint Nick is out. At least until we move into a one-family house with one chimney and one fireplace to its name.

It so happens we live in an apartment house, with each apartment having its own fireplace and chimney. Normally, this set-up wouldn't stop anyone with brains, which I happen to have. I simply marked our chimney with a red chalk mark so I could find it without any trouble on Christmas eve.

The next step was to make myself a Santa Claus suit out of one of my pairs of red flannels. I planned on a nice, white fur trim but was stymied until I noticed the white hair on our combination pedigreed collie-airdale-boyer-huskie dog. Rover doesn't know this but he is here today because I happened to remember the polar bear rug up in the attic.

For a time I thought of borrowing the deer from Eastside Park or dressing up Rover as a reindeer to make my appearance more authentic, but I decided against this. I'm the type that gets seasick on the Hudson River ferry boat so I was sure flying through the air in my sled would have the same effect on me.

Christmas eve was cold and not clear; in fact, everything was piled with snow that was still falling heavily. I grabbed my laundry bag of toys and Joseph's two-wheel bicycle and took the elevator to the top floor from where I climbed to the roof.

Happy in the thought that my two boys and their mother were sitting happily in front of the fireplace awaiting my descent through the chimney, I opened the door to the roof. The snow was a little higher than I had anticipated and it toppled down upon me with a great whoosh, covering me to the hat brim so that I looked like a badly designed snow man.

Laughingly fighting my way out of the snow, I climbed onto the roof. I was thunderstruck. There wasn't a chimney in sight. The red chalk mark I had so cleverly put on my chimney was for naught. But it takes more than that to stop me. I determined to find the chimney if it took all night, and I must say I came pretty darn close to that time limit.

I was getting along fine when I happened to trip upon one of the many television wires strung along the roof. The next few minutes were spent in wrestling with a television wire entanglement and the rear wheel of the bicycle into which my foot got jammed. I got out all right but I had to spend the rest of the evening with my right arm strapped to my side by television wire which encircled my body.

Fortunately, in thrashing around in the snow I exposed a chimney and, by gosh, if it didn't have a red chalk mark on it. It looked a bit different from the way in which I remembered drawing it, but it was a red chalk mark all right.

In no time at all I was sitting on the edge of it with my feet dangling inside, ready to descend. The laundry bag of toys and the bicycle were safely grasped in my free left hand. I started down and had gotten my head into the chimney when I discovered the bicycle would not fit. Dragging myself out again, I found that I could just make it by deflating the tires. This I did quickly.

Starting down again, I was doing splendidly except that I was getting completely covered with soot so that my red flannel underwear and face and hands were turning black. This was caused by the pillow under my coat, placed there to make me look fatter, making me so wide that I was pressing against the sides of the chimney.

This I easily remedied by slitting the pillow and letting the feathers fly out. Unfortunately, the feathers stuck to the sticky soot so that I was completely covered with them. This wasn't the effect I was after but it would certainly make me look different and interesting.

I kept descending until I could hear the soft murmur of voices that told me I was almost there. Just at that instant gusts of smoke began to rise from the fireplace and I could see the fire only about three feet away from me. I was amazed that my wife had chosen this moment to light a fire. We didn't get along but I never thought she would resort to this method for getting rid of me.

Well, if she wanted to play this way, I wasn't having any of it. I'm pretty dauntless but principle is principle. I tried to pull myself up again but in the struggle I lost one of my rubber boots. It fell into the fire and compared with the smell the burning rubber gave off, the gusts of smoke were like eau de cologne.

I struggled desperately with all my might to crawl out, but all I did was slide downward. Then I fell into the fire with a crash. The room was filled with smoke so I couldn't see the faces of the several people in it who were coughing and sneezing. Luckily, they were cursing, too, so I knew immediately by their voices that I wasn't in the right apartment. My knowledge of Emily Post is as keen as anyone's but I wasted no time in greetings.

I was out of the fireplace, out the front door and into my apartment before you could say, "Your pants are on fire." It wasn't the entrance I had planned to make but I'd made it.

Spitting some of the feathers and soot out of my mouth, I shouted in happy glee: "Merry Christmas."

It was then I noticed that the room was empty. I went into the bedroom. Everyone was sleeping contentedly. The note on the dresser said: "Got tired waiting. See you in the morning. Merry Christmas."

The Woman's Viewpoint

By DEE GREENE

Christmas is just around the corner and we have failed to take the time to figure out the gifts that women as a group would like to receive in their lifetimes. In addition, there are many gifts that women would like to see handed out to the men at Christmas time.

Of course, I'm not speaking of material things which are always nice to have. I am speaking of the things that really make for better living in the intangible sense.

Herewith is a list of gifts of this sort that, I think, women would like to receive:

A real leader among men who can actually bring "Peace On Earth" and to all mankind.

The elimination of all hatreds for other nationalities, races and creeds.

Enough food, clothing and shelter for all who dwell on this earth.

Jobs for each man and woman of the kind that he or she enjoys working at rather than that he takes because he can't obtain anything better.

Fair and living wages for all regardless of what type of work they perform.

Really equal opportunity for all children to grow up to go to college if they desire without concern for finances for tuition or living expenses.

A chance for everyone to own his own home if he prefers it to renting an apartment or flat.

A method for providing a living wage for our musicians, composers, artists and writers who must live in poverty while they make America greater through their contributions to our culture.

A knowledge and interest of all the people in our political welfare so that they get out to vote for the right candidates.

More concern by drivers for safety on the highway so that this Christmas does not see the millionth motor vehicle fatality in our history.

Less desire and greed and calousness on the part of business in dealing with their employees and more concern for their welfare.

If we could obtain these gifts for Christmas, there would be little else needed in the world. Under these circumstances you might even be able to get people to forget their desire for material things.

To this list, however, might be added some gifts that women would like to see others given. For example:

President Truman: the ability to pick appointees who will have the interest of their country at heart and not prove an embarrassment for him because of their derelictions.

Mayor-elect Titus: the opportunity to make Paterson a city that we shall all be proud of.

Franchot Tone: a successful marriage with Barbara Peyton.

Judy Garland: the health to continue her career as an actress.

Joe Stalin: the ability to realize that his determination to force communism on all the world can create a world of chaos which no type of government will be able to resurrect.

HOW TO BROIL A SMALL TURKEY

There is a steadily growing interest in young tender turkeys averaging 2 to 8 pounds, ready-to-cook weight. These delicately-flavored small birds give new variety in turkey—broiled, fried or roasted.

For broiling, use a young turkey weighing 2 to 4 pounds. Have turkey split in half lengthwise for broiling. Break drumstick, hip and wing joints to keep bird flat during broiling.

Flatten halves—Skewer leg to body. Fold wing tip back under wing. Skewer wing flat against cut edge of backbone.

Season each half turkey with about 1/4 teaspoon salt and sprinkle of pepper.

Place turkey in broiler pan (not on rack). Brush with melted fat and then place skin side down.

Broil slowly—Place in broiler 5 to 7 inches under heat source. Regulate heat or pan position so that turkey just begins to brown lightly in 10 minutes. Cook slowly. Turn and brush with fat two or three times during broiling to brown and cook evenly. Total cooking time, 50 to 60 minutes for 2 1/2 pound ready-to-cook turkey.

Test for doneness—the turkey is done when meat on the thickest part of the drumstick cuts easily and there is no pink color visible.

Serve on warm platter with pan drippings poured over turkey.

OFTEN I've thought it. Women are two-faced! And there, I've said it. And about time, too, because for years women have been telling me that all other members of their sex are without scruples... especially when in the presence of men.

But first I must assure you that the above statement is not the snarling assertion of a misogynist, that quaint species of man who thinks of parachutes whenever he comes across the word "nylons." Now when my eyes stray across nylons, I can guarantee you that... however, let's work this subject right from the top down.

One of my latest experiences in finding women two-faced concerns the deception of an attractive morsel named Joanne as related to me, by her friend Christine. Christine, incidentally, was later described as two-faced by none other than my own landlady. You can well imagine my shock.

For years I had been one to accept as sterling the fluting of every female voice. So much so that my social life was just a loose-leaf diary of one-night dates until Joanne drifted into it.

I here use the word "drifted" loosely because actually Joanne took my arm first at a church picnic. She had a well-studied air of coyness, although I was often conscious of an awareness that I wasn't among the first thirty trains on her timetable.

It was Joanne who told me that girls weren't sincere when they said they would just as soon spend the evening at home listening to the radio instead of going nightclubbing. Up to that time, I had thought my trouble in getting a repeat date was due to denture breath. Even though it cost a lot of money going steady with Joanne for two weeks, I didn't mind until I discovered she was two-faced.

You see, I got a lot of information from her about pleasing girls which I stored away in my mind. Probably, if I'd sent away for that book, "The Complete Lover," I could have come by the inside dope a lot cheaper. But even if the book arrived in a plain wrapper like the ads say, it still would be of no help because every package that is large enough to contain a pint of liquor is opened by my landlady before she delivers it.

Even when she is stone sober, my landlady is death on words like sex.

Anyway to get back to Joanne, I know she felt the same way as I did about many things. She had real feelings and passion, I know, because once I very nearly kissed her throat. At the last minute, however, she discovered some chocolate around my mouth from the hot fudge sundae I'd been eating. Things went from bad to worse shortly after that and it wasn't much later that I met her friend, Christine, who told me over the lunch table that the man Joanne was working nights with wasn't her boss at all.

Women are two-faced

BY JOHN T. CAVANAUGH

As a matter of fact I soon found out that Joanne and that man did not even work together days in the same building.

That really hurt me because I thought I could trust Joanne; she had never called another girl two-faced, that is, excepting her friend, Christine.

After this heartbreak, I soon found myself going steady with Christine. I got the first intimation of her feelings for me when, on our third date, she started to cry and sob, "What will my mother think about my marrying an older man?" Since Christine must have been in kindergarten around the time my folks decided to get married along with the fact that she and I had merely been talking about the $300 I had saved to buy a car, I was a bit puzzled about her outburst. I remember saying something about hoping that she would be happy but now I know I should have realized what was on her mind when she said, "Of course we will," and then insisted I meet her mother.

Christine's mother didn't look older than her daughter, only more alert and tired. She said: "I'll never forgive you for taking my daughter away from me." But I noticed she didn't let go of my hand when I started for the door. My fingers were still sore the next day when I signed the marriage license.

The night before the wedding, I came home to find my landlady staring at Christine's picture on the top of my dresser. At first I thought there was furniture polish in the bottle in her hand until she murmured thickly:

"And what's her husband got to say about all this?"

"Whose husband?" I shouted. I felt weak, it was too much to find Christine two-faced like all the rest.

"Christine's husband that's who," my landlady snarled back at the dresser mirror as she sidled out of the room.

Well, I got back all my presents from Christine and her mother—that is, all the ones that landed on the lawn, because all the stuff they threw on the sidewalk either broke or got too banged up to bother with. I missed out on my bankbook also, probably because it was too light to throw. There wasn't much more than $10 left in it anyway, what with Christine's trousseau and everything.

I still had a headache when my landlady called me early the next morning. She didn't seem to notice Christine's presents heaped all over the floor, instead her eyes roved the room to see if there was anything left in the wedding present bottle some pal had thoughtfully sent the night before.

Suddenly, she spied it and beat me to the dresser. When I started to protest, she brushed me off with, "But this is your wedding day, dearie."

I felt like a straphanger on a familiar subway ride. "What about her husband?" I muttered hollowly.

My landlady was patiently stuffing the bottle into her apron and moving cautiously toward the door.

"Whose husband, dearie?" she replied vacantly. And suddenly there was a quicker move in her step.

I must have answered, "Christine's husband," because she called back through the door, "Silly boy, you know she won't have a husband until you marry her this noon!"

I feel pretty safe at my new rooming house because it's run by a man who feels the same way I do about women being two-faced. "Every last one of them is alike," he says over and over.

Every last one except his niece, who is coming for a visit next week.

I can hardly wait.

It is Christmas—

It is Christmas and he is far from home. Defending your security and that of your family.

Will you do something for him this Christmas?
Will you promise yourself, right here and now, to make defense your job, too?

That may sound like an awfully big part for you to play But there's really an easy way to do it . . . by buying United States Defense Bonds regularly.

When you buy bonds to build up your own backlog of financial security you're helping maintain your country's economic strength . . . the strength necessary to back up young men like this. For your bonds and other forms of saving can make America strong.
And peace is for the strong!

So sign up for bonds today—through the Payroll
Savings Plan where you work or the Bond-A-Month Plan where you bank. For your security and your country's too, buy U. S. Defense Bonds regularly!
