A Newark newspaper carried a story that Mayor De Vita was helped toward defeat by money-wise state Republicans who wanted to end his threat as a candidate for governor.

Though Paterson will have a Republican mayor after January 1, 1952, the Board of Aldermen will remain Democratic by returning four out of five incumbents. The board will number eight Democrats to three Republicans.

Grant W. Titus, son of the newly-elected mayor, who is a reporter for the Morning Call, was one of his father's leading campaigners. Grant rigged up his car with a loud speaker and signs and toured the city night and day to help his dad.

East Paterson went Republican but West Paterson and Pompton Lakes remained on the Democratic side. Both West Paterson and Pompton Lakes became Democratic strongholds in recent years.

Despite the indictments and charges in connection with gambling, the GOP swept most candidates into office in Bergen County.

Angelo Migino, 51, of 553 River Street, suffered a heart attack while riding on a bus bound for downtown.

Mrs. June Shapiro, of 345 Van Houten Street, and her baby son, Ray, were injured when they were struck by a car whose driver did not stop. Mrs. Shapiro was wheeling her baby in his carriage while walking with her husband, Emanuel, when they attempted to cross Graham Avenue at the corner of Broadway. The automobile sped around the corner and struck the carriage knocking it over with Mrs. Shapiro. Neither the child nor mother were injured seriously. The husband escaped any injury.

Edward Schweizer, 25, of 9 Garfield Avenue, was carried out of his gas-filled apartment in the middle of the night when he was discovered by his father-in-law, Joseph Wehrer. Wehrer, who is a bus driver, smelled the gas upon returning home from work. Schweizer, who was unconscious, was revived by police.

Naumow Afansaij, of 210 Mill Street, informed police that he was robbed of $200 which he had hidden in his bedroom. Detectives are investigating.

The Dee Twins Dance Band, a local group, won first prize on the Paul Whiteman Teen Club television show. The six members of the band are: Jimmy and Joe Dee, Bruce Rosenberg, Sammy Sturm, Tony Luciano, and Harold Weinberg.

Dear Editor:

The return of General Eisenhower has raised a lot of new speculation concerning the possibility that he plans to announce or, at least, hint about his readiness to run for president.

I don't know why we persist in thinking that just because a man has been a great military man he will be a great president. Being a military man par excellence, doesn't give him any more knowledge of the problems of running the country than he would gain by being a great chemist.

The problems of the military are mostly technical while the

Dear Editor:

One of the forgotten things about our city is its parks. We seem to take them for granted. Nobody really ever gets excited about them.

Yet I think that Paterson has some beautiful parks where lots and lots of people enjoy a day's outing every Sunday. Also, you can go to the parks for all sorts of recreation, or just to sit, or in the biggest parks to see all kinds of sports played.

The men, who were responsible for our parks, deserve a great deal of credit. They certainly have my thanks.

A family is shown being evacuated when we took Richmond Avenue after the recent flash flood. Street scenes like this were typical of the area.

TITUS PLANS MANY IMPROVEMENTS FOR CITY

New Mayor Also Pledged To Reduce Taxes Through Economy

MAYOR-ELECT LESTER F. TITUS

The election of Lester F. Titus as mayor of Paterson will see many changes in Paterson in the next two years as he has pledged himself to an ambitious program.

His most important pledge was, of course, to reduce taxes.

Titus plans to reduce taxes by waging an aggressive campaign against "unnecessary waste" and loose spending of tax money," the "elimination of the abuse of reckless spending under the guise of emergencies," and the elimination of unnecessary jobs. Above all, Titus will conduct an economical program of tax reduction without the curtailment of essential services.

Titus plans to have a woman represented on every board in the city and promises to allow all board members freedom of action.

Titus also pledged himself to expand the vocational education program to include courses for girls, to establish a reading clinic for all of Paterson's school children with a staff of specialists equipped with the latest mechanical aids, to improve the school recreation program and to modernize school equipment and teaching aids.

The new mayor also plans to institute a program of modernization of the city's streets and to equalize street-cleaning services.

Titus favors open and impartial hearings on all major questions of controversy and he plans to shun any "closed-door" policy.

He expects to have the Board of Public Works assume the burden of local merchants in the daily removal of refuse and to supervise carefully the present garbage contract to guarantee performance.

Titus' plans for the recreational program include establishment of facilities for handicapped children, adding more playgrounds and the purchase of additional equipment.

He expects immediately to formulate plans for a war memorial. The new mayor also pledged himself to return the operation of the stadium to the Board of Education.

Basically, these are the plans that we shall see executed by the new mayor within the next two years. Paterson should be a better city for it.

THOUGHTS ON THE ELECTION

Well, the election is over. By now everyone knows that Lester F. Titus, the Republican candidate, defeated incumbent Michael U. De Vita in a surprising upset.

Two things stand out in this connection. Firstly, it proved once again that no man can predict the temper of the people; and, secondly, that America's system of the secret ballot guarantees a free and honest election.

The majority of the people have voiced their preference for Titus and now all of us must forget pre-election differences to get behind the man who will lead us all.

Titus has set for himself a course which should lead to a better city for every citizen.

The Chronicle, may we say, is pleased that we were able, through our "The Battle for Mayor" series, to bring the issues of the campaign to many of the voters. In all modesty, we wish to take credit for helping to clarify many of the differences between De Vita and Titus.

By and large, the campaign was conducted on a high plane by both candidates. Both stuck to the issues, fought cleanly and never once hit below the belt. Both can be proud of the manner in which they conducted themselves.

Titus' surprising victory should mark the beginning of a long and successful career in political life. His name already is being mentioned in political circles as a candidate for higher office.

De Vita, on the other hand, though a loser, remains an important power in the Democratic party and as a candidate for office because of the narrow margin by which he lost. The present mayor may go on to greater political heights.

Titus will take office on January 1, 1952. The best wishes of the Chronicle go with him.

CONSERVATIVE GOVERNMENT

The term of the office of the Conservative government in Great Britain will be short-lived.

This prediction is based on sound reasoning.

Firstly, we believe the Laborites were defeated because most Britishers fell for that old cliché—"time for a change." The Laborites also lost because their followers were tired of the austerity program.

The most important fact to remember is that Labor was NOT put out of office because the people were opposed to their program of socialism. In reality, the truth is that this part of their program was responsible for keeping the government in power for a long time.

And as a matter of fact, the Conservatives won after they convinced the Britishers they would continue socialized medicine and would not disturb industries already nationalized.

Now, present conditions within the British Empire will not permit the Conservatives to change much of the austerity program. The same problems that balked the Laborites will balk the Conservatives.

Additionally, the Conservatives, by their nature, "do-nothings", will offer no new solutions for any of the larger problems confronting Great Britain's wage earners.

When the Britishers realize they have inherited this type of government, plus the same austerity program, they will vote for a return of the Laborites. And inasmuch as Churchill's victory was so close, this cannot be far off.

Professor Gaetano Dittamo

The passing of Professor Gaetano Dittamo removes from the Paterson scene a figure whose name was synonymous with band music.

Everybody knew the name of Dittamo. His band was in every parade. The band concerts in Eastside Park and Dittamo were one.

His passing represents, in a way, the passing of an era when band music was so popular. Patersonians will be reminded of him with each parade and every band concert.

Congratulations

Frankie and Ava finally got married.

With this historical undertaking out of the way, we can now put our minds to the improvement of the atom bomb.

Anyone who cares might like to know that the New York Post's Earl Wilson revealed after the marriage that the couple had a violent quarrel thirty-six hours before the wedding. This was quarrel No. 432.

Nevertheless, we wish them good luck.

Republican candidates were a happy crowd at headquarters when the returns showed they had swept the city and county election. In the photograph are John Junda, new assemblyman; G. Moe Di Gangi, assistant city leader; Harry J. Donahue, re-elected freeholder; Floyd E. Jones, re-elected county clerk; Frank Shershin, re-elected assemblyman; Lester F. Titus, mayor elect; Lloyd B. Marsh, county leader; Charles J. Scanlan, campaign manager for Titus; Vincent Perneti, new freeholder; Joseph Masiello, city leader; Leo Morris and Don Kerr, of Radio Station WPAT.

Visiting Nurses Work For Stricken

Reporter On Daily Calls With Board of Health Nurse

Every morning before 9 o'clock, five young women carrying black bags, leave the Board of Health building, enter their cars and drive away. These are home visiting nurses employed by the City of Paterson to attend the bed-ridden and chronically ill. They are beginning their day's work.

This service is rendered by the city through the Board of Health and is available to all. This is not a charity service and the patient is required to pay a small fee. However, when the patient is dependent and in poor circumstances, no payment is made.

The Board of Health nurses go wherever their help is needed and in many instances make daily visits to patients. Just as in the hospitals, however, they perform only the services that the doctor, who is attending the patient, has ordered. When required, they will administer medication which must be provided by the patient.

The five women, all of whom are graduate nurses, have districts within the city which they are required to service. This means a rigorous schedule that must be adhered to rather strictly in order to enable each one to make all her visits. In this connection, parking presents a problem and many times the nurses are delayed by being unable to obtain parking space for their cars.

Accompanying a nurse as she makes her daily rounds to the ill and disabled is an interesting and enlightening experience. To most of us who enjoy good health, who grumble when we have a head cold and groan when someone steps on our corn, it would be a revelation to see the patience and sweet temper displayed by those who must spend a great portion of their lives on a bed of pain.

With your reporter's charming escort, Nurse Marie Lombardi, a graduate of St. Joseph's Hospital School of Nursing, I climbed up the attic stairs to the home of her first patient. There we were greeted by a cheerful little man, past 70, who is diabetic and was waiting for his injection of insulin. Without a family and living alone with no one to administer to him, the arrival of the visiting nurse makes him very happy. The nurse told me he can't eat until he receives his dose of insulin. He chatted with us, talking about the customs of his native Italy.

Our next visit was made to the home of a lady past sixty, who receives old age social security. We found her in bed, and after exchanging welcome greetings, Nurse Lombardi went about the business of giving her a bed bath. This sweet lady lives alone, too, and except for the monthly visits from her daughter, looks to the people with whom she boards for assistance and company.

She suffered from arthritis for the past several years and has spent some time in the hospitals. Medication for the relief of her pain is very expensive and she has become reconciled to her illness. She is house-confined and spends much of her time in bed.

While the nurse bathed and dressed her we carried on a lively conversation. "Do you have many visitors?" I asked her.

"Oh, yes," she said. "I am a member of the Park Avenue Church and only last September a group of ladies called on me. They do that quite often."

No one answered the door when we called on Nurse Lombardi's next patient. And as we stood at the top of the attic stairs to his home, Miss Lombardi tried to figure out what might have happened to him. A neighbor who saw us arrive approached with the news that his son had taken him to the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor. He would be much better off there they both agreed. A cardiac patient, he was not receiving the proper care at home.

We found our next patient a woman lying in bed. Her three-room attic apartment sparkled with cleanliness. As the nurse prepared to bathe her she told me something about the woman's illness. I learned she was suffering from an almost complete lack of speech, the result of a cerebral hemorrhage type of stroke. Except for yes or no, she writes her messages on a slate.

Our next visit brought us to the apartment of a lady in much better circumstances. As she talked nervously of her troubles the nurse prepared and administered an injection. They made an appointment for the nurse's next visit, the fee was paid and we left.

Miss Flora Parks is supervisor of nurses at the Board of Health. The Nurses Home Visiting group includes: Miss Marie Lombardi, Miss Rhoda Harris, Miss Margaret Draper, Miss Grace McCauley and Miss Mildred Martin. They prefer this type of nursing to hospital nursing as they feel a much closer bond is formed between nurse and patient.

DAUGHTERS OF MIRIAM

Institution In Clifton Manor

A harmless game of cards helps to kill an evening. The winners gain no money but only the right to kid the losers.

This is the house that humanity built.

This is the house that has been home for the Jewish aged and infirm for thirty years and until 1948 housed children made dependent by death and broken homes. The Daughters of Miriam Home caters to the needs of Paterson, Passaic, Clifton and Englewood and is the fruit of the labors of the men and women who founded and sustain it.

Situated on 160 Hazel Road in Clifton, the home is a handsome, sprawling two-storied building of brick on a large acreage. A charming cottage nearby is the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Solomon Geld, superintendents.

On entering the building, one sees first a huge wall-sized electrified candelabra which is used for the Friday Evening Sabbath services. A traditional hall for prayer is nearby.

A Florida style solarium provides a cheery place for indoor sunning. A library of books, television, radio, newspaper and movies afford a varied program of recreation. "The shop", or occupational therapy room, is a busy place where the more active residents can weave or sew. If the ladies wish to bake a cake or help with the cooking preparations, the downstairs kitchen is at their disposal. The entire home is geared to their needs.

At the present time one hundred and eight residents occupy the building. An attending physician and a nursing staff of more than twenty are in attendance in the infirmary. A medical staff of consulting physicians, psychiatrists, dentists and chiropodists attend their illnesses. The infirmary rooms are furnished in bedroom rather than hospital style and the infirmary corridor is a quiet yet cheerful place.

The utilities of the kitchen, a magnificent gift from the Paterson Auxiliary, are all of stainless steel. Wearing apparel and linens are washed and ironed in a basement laundry, the size of a small commercial laundry. The whole building shines and gleams with cleanliness.

A group of Paterson social workers began the campaign thirty years ago to aid the poorer families of the Jewish faith. They worked untiringly. With a home for the aged and dependent children in mind they gained the interest and assistance of the late Honorable Nathan Barnert, former Mayor of Paterson. Mr. Barnert shared their enthusiasm and in 1920 presented them with the house and grounds at 496 River Street. He deeded the property to the Daughters of Miriam—Miriam after the name of his wife.

The Home was soon filled and with its needs growing larger. A membership drive and a subsequent building fund campaign brought this plan to a successful fruition. In 1927 the new Home was dedicated, and since then more rooms have been added as has been a cottage for the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Geld and the nurses.

As the management went about its daily tasks, the difficulties of housing the old people and the young children under one roof became very evident to them. Separate housing was the answer and this problem was solved with the help of the Jewish Social Service Bureau of Paterson. Until they could be returned to their own homes, placed in foster homes or given for adoption, the children were given shelter in the cottage. By 1948 the children had been discharged and the first infirmity residents were admitted.

Sabbath services are conducted by one of the residents. All the old men and women at the home are very religious.

HOME CARES FOR AGED

ged By Dr. and Mrs. Geld

Philanthropic-minded men and women of Paterson, Passaic, Clifton and Englewood have joined hands in supporting the home of the Daughters of Miriam. Because of their combined efforts what was once an ambition is now an actuality.

Proud of the home and its contributions, and happy with the job they are performing are Dr. and Mrs. Solomon Geld. Their contributions to the community are familiar to all. As "spiritual leader" of the home Dr. Geld performs his duties with kindness and grace. He knows and greets the residents by their first names and he knows the names of their children and grandchildren. Their job makes many demands of Dr. and Mrs. Geld but they have much to give.

Officers of the Daughters of Miriam include: Charles Rosenstein, President; Raymond Kramer, First Vice-President; Irvin Salzberg, Second Vice-President; Mrs. Abraham J. Maskowitz, Secretary; Samuel Schwartz, Treasurer; Irving K. Ruttenburg, Recording Secretary and Dr. and Mrs. Solomon Geld, Superintendents.

Auxiliary Presidents include: Mrs. Joseph Nalanbogen, Paterson Auxiliary; Mrs. Samuel Weisenfeld, Passaic Auxiliary; Mrs. Samuel Kamens, Clifton Auxiliary and Mrs. Jules Levinsohn, Englewood Auxiliary.

The Bad Guy Does Good

Paterson Wrestler Abe Kashey Hits the Jackpot

As every youngster (7 to 10) who watches television cowboy movies knows, there's always a good guy and a bad guy. And the good guy always wins!

In professional wrestling, the script is different though. The Bad Guy often wins and in addition, usually winds up reaping richer rewards. He hauls in the shekels without having to hold up the stagecoach, rob a bank, rustle any cattle, or even foreclose on the Bar-Double-X ranch.

The grunt-and-groan mayhem expert, using his facile talent, winds up with the dough by getting the customers so irate that they break down the doors in order to boo him to a frazzle every time he wrestles. It's a sure-fire prescription and a man who has made the thing work is Abe Kashey, the hulking hunk of Paterson man who graduated from amateur mats to international gold and glory.

Known in the trade by the cute cognomen of "The Syrian Assassin," Kashey actually hasn't assassinated anybody. He just comes close. With fancy little didoes such as dropping his opponent out of the ring, mauling said opponent in various portions of his anatomy, and mopping up the mat at the drop of a foe, Abe has been making pro wrestling pay off for many years now.

With an extremely comfortable income, Kashey has brought up his family in the sort of style to which he was not accustomed when he was a silk weaver in Paterson as a youth. In those days, he wrestled for the YMCA here and brought amateur mat honors to the organization.

He decided to take the big plunge and turn profesional, no simple decision for a young man with a growing family. He made a few skimpy-retuned appearances and wondered if maybe he shouldn't let his former employers keep his old job open. But the turning point came when a promoter advised him to turn "villain."

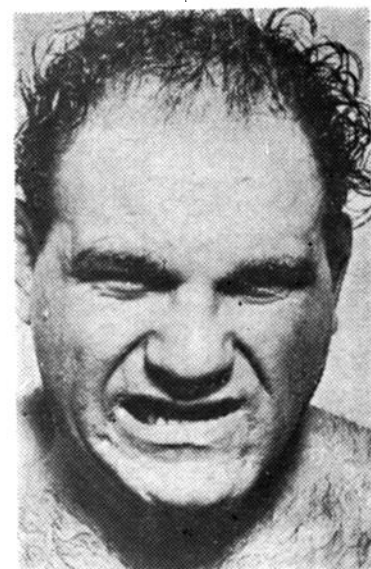

"Look," he told Abe, "you're a good wrestler but we have a lot of good wrestlers. You could make a strong box-office draw by getting rough. I'll guarantee that you would click as a wrestler who throws out all the rules."

Kashey lost no time taking his advice. He watched other mat "villains" in action, learned a few tricks through close observation and then added a few of his own. He became a spectacular success. In the midwest, particularly in Minneapolis, Abe was a red-hot draw at the box-office even though he couldn't win any popularity contests.

Abe didn't care though. The only man he wants to like him is the fellow who handles his bank account.

Heading for California, the Paterson grappler continued to attract big crowds when he performed his mat mayhem. He bought a home on the Coast and settled down there with his family, still owns the home but makes frequent trips around the country for his wrestling dates, driving the big car which is his chief means of transportation.

He's very grateful to the sport for making it possible to become a notable, not only in this country but also in other countries where he was an instant hit, especially Australia and New Zealand. He now is preparing two other members of the Kashey family — his son, Albert, and his nephew, George, for careers in the wrestling ranks.

The objective: the Kasheys as a wrestling family. Abe has started training the youngsters who have a natural aptitude for the game and who are looking forward to making their debut on one big show in the near future.

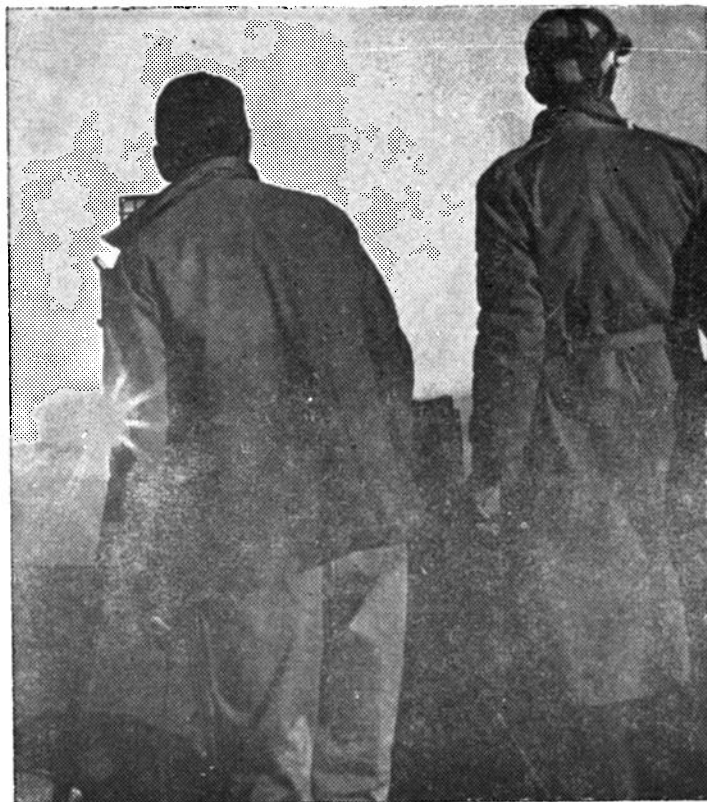

The senior Kashey thinks wrestling is the greatest sport there is, pays tribute to the game as a body-builder and a strength-developing medium. "There's nothing like it," Abe enthuses. "After all, I'm no kid and yet I am able to compete in wrestling matches three and four times a week. I can go into action more than that, if I want a heavy schedule.

"For that, I thank wrestling. It's been good to me and I hope to stay at it for a few more years. There's no reason for me to retire yet. First, I'd like to wind up with the world's title. Even as an independent competitor, I'm hoping to get the chance."

With Abe, it's possible. He invented the Atomic Drop and opponents who have been on the receiving end of this package in the ring with him, have expressed the opinion that they'd prefer the Atomic bomb.

Loaded down with magazines, a semi-trailer crashes into a Los Angeles drugstore and collapses the front of the brick building. The driver and a patron were injured slightly.

HOT TIPS ON BEING A POLITICIAN

Lessons for Those Who Wish to Be Among the Elected

By CARL HUNTER

Now that the election is over, I feel at liberty to let politicians in on some hot tips on how to run an election campaign. I waited until after the election as I did not want to give any one candidate an unfair advantage over his opponent.

I held back on the bare possibility that one of the candidates—in the midst of the campaign rush—might neglect to read my article that particular week so that he would be floundering around while his opponent, benefiting from my advice, would be soaring on to victory.

To begin with, being a politician isn't easy. Most people think you just go out to be a politician. This is far from the truth. If I had my way, people would study to become politicians just like dentists and lawyers. Then they would be required to take examinations.

Following this pattern, the first step is to have entrance requirements in order to get into a politician's school. Prospective students would be tested on their knowledge of international, national and local affairs.

All those who passed with a mark higher than forty percent would be automatically prevented from entering the school. This is to eliminate anyone with any knowledge so that his mind is not muddled with facts when he is eventually elected to office.

Next comes a physical examination. We must test each prospective student's handshake for firmness of grip. Every politician must have a firm grip. Next comes a test of his right arm. Politicians must have strong right arms for back slapping purposes.

With these tests out of the way, classes can begin. The first lesson is in cigar smoking. No politician, worth his salt, would be caught even sleeping without a cigar. And there is more to smoking a cigar, for a politician that is, than meets the eye. First, the cigar must be held on the side of the mouth, either the right side or left side, depending upon your want. Under no circumstances can it be held in the center of the mouth.

When the cigar is removed from the mouth, it must be held between the forefinger and the thumb. Then it should be held about a foot from the face, while the politician studies the ash and twirls the cigar in his fingers. At the same time, the eyes should be narrowed to thin slits to give a thoughtful appearance.

The next lesson is in greeting people so that they think the politician knows exactly who they are, who their parents were, how many kids they have and what they ate for dinner last night.

The best way to do this is to wave the arm in greeting, give a firm handshake, slap the greetee on the back soundly and mumble something under your breath. This mumbling should consist of, "How you doing, kid?", "How's the world treating you, fella?", or "Glad to see you, boy." Notice, that at no time is the name used. This avoids revealing that you don't know the man's name.

If the politician is not sure whether or not the greetee has any children, he merely asks about the family. This covers everybody from second and third cousins on down.

The next lesson concerns attending political dinners which are too numerous to mention. If the student doesn't like chicken, which is always served unless the chicken is ever exterminated from the face of the earth, he should forget about becoming a politician.

The only time when chicken is not served is when it is a beef steak dinner. The student should learn to skip breakfast and lunch in planning for these dinners. Guests are required to stuff themselves until they feel slightly ill, at which point they should stop eating the bread and concentrate on the beef steak only.

The student must now learn to make a political speech. This is more difficult than it appears. It is no problem to get up in front of an audience and say something that has meaning, but it is a little harder to speak for two hours without saying anything that anybody can be for or against. When the speaker sits down, the audience must have the feeling that the politician is on everybody's side and at the same time is against nothing and nobody.

The opening of the speech should start with greetings to everyone. He should start by saying "Mr. Chairman" and work on down through the third assistant secretary to the substitute janitor, ending up with "Ladies and Gentlemen" if any happen to be present or anybody is left after the opening greeting.

When he gets into the body of the speech, he must resort to lots of good, meaningless phrases like "whereas," "I point with pride," and "and furthermore."

With this as a beginning of his career, the student should go on to assume high office. He'll be a ward heeler before he knows it.

The Woman's Viewpoint

By DEE GREENE

Keeping up with the Jones's is one of the biggest problems for married couples in America today. I imagine that it is the cause of more divorces than any other reason despite the reasons cited in court.

This problem of money is causing more heartaches in most homes today more than ever before because of the high cost of living. Daddy, who works hard all day long, day in and day out, earns just so much money and can't afford to buy all the things that his family wants.

This is true of the man who earns fifty dollars a week and of the man who earns three hundred dollars a week. The amount of money needed to support your family — after the actual basic cost of just living — depends upon your tastes and desires.

The family that is living on fifty dollars a week — assuming that this amount can buy the basic necessities — may be happier than the family that is living on three hundred dollars a week.

By this statement, I don't mean that I subscribe to that old baloney about the rich man being unhappy because he has so many problems. The picture I am drawing is this: If you are happy riding your old 1937 Ford then you are happier than the person who is miserable because his car is a 1950 Cadillac and he can't afford a 1951.

And many times, the basis for this desire is nothing more than envy of your neighbor, who does have a 1951 Cadillac. Otherwise, you would be very happy with your 1950 Cadillac which you really think is a nice car with many more miles for fine service left in it.

Normally, therefore, you would live very comfortably on your three hundred dollars a week, but you are going into debt because the fellow next door, who earns four hundred dollars a week, is causing you to spend more than your income.

In other words, your income can never really be adequate if you persist in keeping up with the Jones's. There is someone, always, who is earning more than you are, regardless of what your income totals.

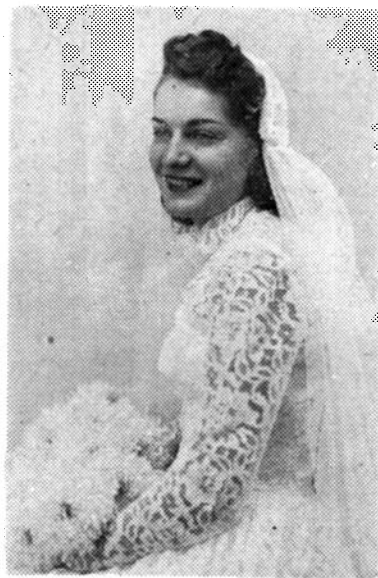

The fellow next door, with the four hundred dollar income, is probably running into debt because he is trying to keep up with his friend who owns a 1951 Cadillac plus another car.

Unless we learn to be satisfied with our income, we shall continue to suffer for it with a high divorce rate and other problems.

Money is the root of all evil, they say, and it certainly makes for an unhappy marriage when it is lacking in the amount desired.

It isn't a question of deciding to live on the same level with someone else, but rather a decision to live within your means. You may desire this and that, but you must repress these desires if the funds to pay for them are not available. Only the very rich can determine what standards they wish to live by without determining the cost.

A Woman's Place

BY JOHN T. CAVANAUGH

"SO, SALUSTRI is back," Managing Editor Pepper Drislane exclaimed as he clicked down the receiver. Excitedly, Police Chief Lawton had just shouted into the telephone, "This guy is looking for blood—don't take any unnecessary risks."

In the editorial room of the Hartfield Herald, Drislane sat with his head in his hands and mournfully looked over his city staff—two old men and seven girls. "Thirty years in newspapers and this has to happen to me—a chance to make headline history and here I am saddled with a bunch of sob sisters."

The Salustri case had been spectacular from the start. The self-styled big shot of the numbers racket had challenged repeatedly, "There ain't nobody going to pin a rap on me. This gazabo's got protection all the way to the state house and back and don't forget it."

But Jerry Cowan, erstwhile reportorial star of the Herald, and Managing Editor Drislane chose to forget it to the tune of pinning a 20-year federal sentence on the numbers king. Then the slipup; while waiting for the train that would carry him to prison, Salustri outwitted the guards, slugged the marshal and was on his way.

With the news of his escape, Jerry and Drislane knew Salustri would be back. The Herald's constant and merciless headlines had galled the gangster, bored right into his pride.

"Sure, he'll be back," the reporter told his editor, "and when he does, he'll head for our office first."

That was two years ago. Now Jerry was with the Army somewhere in the Pacific. Meanwhile, the managing editor waited. Of course, he was jumpy; who wouldn't be when each corner might turn into a hall of hot lead? And now the chief of police had passed the word that Salustri had been spotted in Bayside, just 11 miles this side of Hartfield.

The managing editor was dismally fingering the last cigarette in his squashed pack of Camels when Publisher Jim Geldhorn came into the room. Drislane blinked his eyes and dropped the cigarette—damn, if it wasn't another girl. Attractive and well built but still another girl.

Geldhorn knew his managing editor's theories on the manpower shortage and women substitutes, for he hustled the young woman over to an empty desk and hurriedly started to leave.

"On a newspaper a girl reporter isn't worth the powder it takes to—camouflage her nose," Drislane had exploded when the publisher unobtrusively attempted to install the last girl in the dwindled city staff.

"All I hear these days is 'I've got an appointment with the hairdresser, the dress-maker, the butcher, the baker—' These girls have an appointment with everyone but me and their work," he ranted. "Is this a newspaper office or a sorority house?"

"Chief," said thin-pated, fiftyish Mike Bales, the paper's only bachelor, coming to the managing editor's desk, "I'm going to hop down to Nick's for a shave." Generally, Mike shaved every second day and today was a first.

"Damn," muttered Drislane, "we're off again and it'll take another three weeks to see who is really queen bee of this hive."

The managing editor's head was poked under his desk in search of his lost cigarette when a pair of shapely legs approached. Forgetting his search, Drislane turned to appraise the view, visible from just below the knees down as the legs stopped short at his desk.

"Mr. Drislane," he heard a feminine voice say, "I'd like to be assigned to the Salustri case."

Abruptly, a hush fell over the Herald editorial room and light expectant reportorial heads poised over their typewriters as the managing editor took several seconds to come up from under the desk.

In the face of the gathering editorial clouds, the new girl bravely continued with her request and began to fumble with a gold locket which was looped around her neck. "The picture I have—" she offered but got no further.

The thunder broke loose and Drislane hissed, his face purple, "On a newspaper, a woman"—he didn't finish but resignedly collapsed in his chair.

With effort he continued feebly, "Miss Whatever-your-name-is, go get a manicure—get a cup of coffee—get anything. But for right now, just get."

As the girl hastily traced Mike Bales' rapidly retreating footsteps, Drislane sighed, "even Jerry Cowan away out in the Pacific is getting balmy. On top of all this, imagine his wanting to saddle me with his fiancée, some up-country jane who probably doesn't know a dateline from a clothesline." Glee-fully, he pictured himself setting up ambush for the next time the publisher came in with another girl.

After an hour of planting imaginary booby traps all over the newspaper plant, the managing editor had mentally destroyed the publisher and all the girls on the staff a dozen times over. Just when he was halfway through his masterpiece of Stuffing Geldhorn and the girls through the news press to be delivered as supplements to the five o'clock edition, Mike Bales with a face full of lather tore into the room.

"Chief, Chief," the reporter panted, "they just got him."

"Just got who—when—where?" Drislane roared.

"Salustri, at the barber shop," said Mike, furiously shoving a piece of copy paper into his typewriter. "I'll have the story written for the last edition in a jiffy."

Downstairs the presses were silent and waiting as the managing editor's pencil poised over the reporter's scoop.

"Nat Salustri, former numbers czar who escaped local police two years ago, today was captured in Nick's barber and beauty shop on Main Street through the efforts of Miss Loretta Hewes, a member of The Herald's staff," the story read.

"The gangster, who has hidden from the police since his spectacular escape from the United States Marshal's office, was recognized by the reporter as he walked through the barber shop to the beauty salon at the rear of the building. Miss Hewes, upon seeing Salustri, continued through the shop and left by a rear exit and soon returned with a squad of police officers."

"The reporter said that she had identified the gangster through his picture which she had carried in a gold locket given to her by her fiancé, Jerry Cowan, formerly police reporter on The Herald and now serving with the armed forces in the Pacific."

"Having threatened the life of my fiancé, Salustri was a potential threat to my coming marriage, so I carried his picture, knowing that I would run into him some day," Miss Hewes said. "Now that he is captured, I know that I can plan to marry Jerry as soon as he returns."

Speechless, the managing editor scanned the copy. Then, poised his pencil, he added to the message: "In the meantime, I will continue working at The Herald as police reporter."

"Let's show our faith in Freedom now—"

SAYS CLARK GABLE

"Defense is our job, too!"

REMEMBER how we all went to bat for this country in World War II? We did it because when our way of life was threatened, we suddenly realized that it was worth fighting for.

Well, that way of life is still threatened. By people who don't believe in every little guy having a chance. America needs defending now, and not by our armed services alone. Defense is our job, too!

That's the reason for our government's big Defense Bond Drive.

To help you build your financial independence through Bonds and other forms of saving. Because America's strength is in the personal financial security of her citizens. And remember, peace is for the strong!

So during this Defense Bond Drive sign up to buy an extra bond. Buy your bond today—through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work or the Bond-A-Month Plan where you bank. Then buy bonds regularly. Join the 83,000,000 Americans who already hold over $57 billion worth of U. S. Defense Bonds as their share in America.

*U. S. Savings Bonds are Defense Bonds
Buy them regularly!
