COVER PICTURE:

The "Haledon Thistles" of 1907 are reproduced on our cover this week. The original picture will be on display at the Haledon Library. We are anxious to identify each person on the photograph. Read the contest column on this page to see how you can win a $25.00 Bond.

CONTEST

and Win a Twenty-five Dollar Bond!

In conjunction with Haledon's Fiftieth Anniversary, the Chronicle will award a $25 bond to the first person who can provide the most correct names on this week's cover.

The contest will be limited to Haledon residents. The closing date will be May 3.

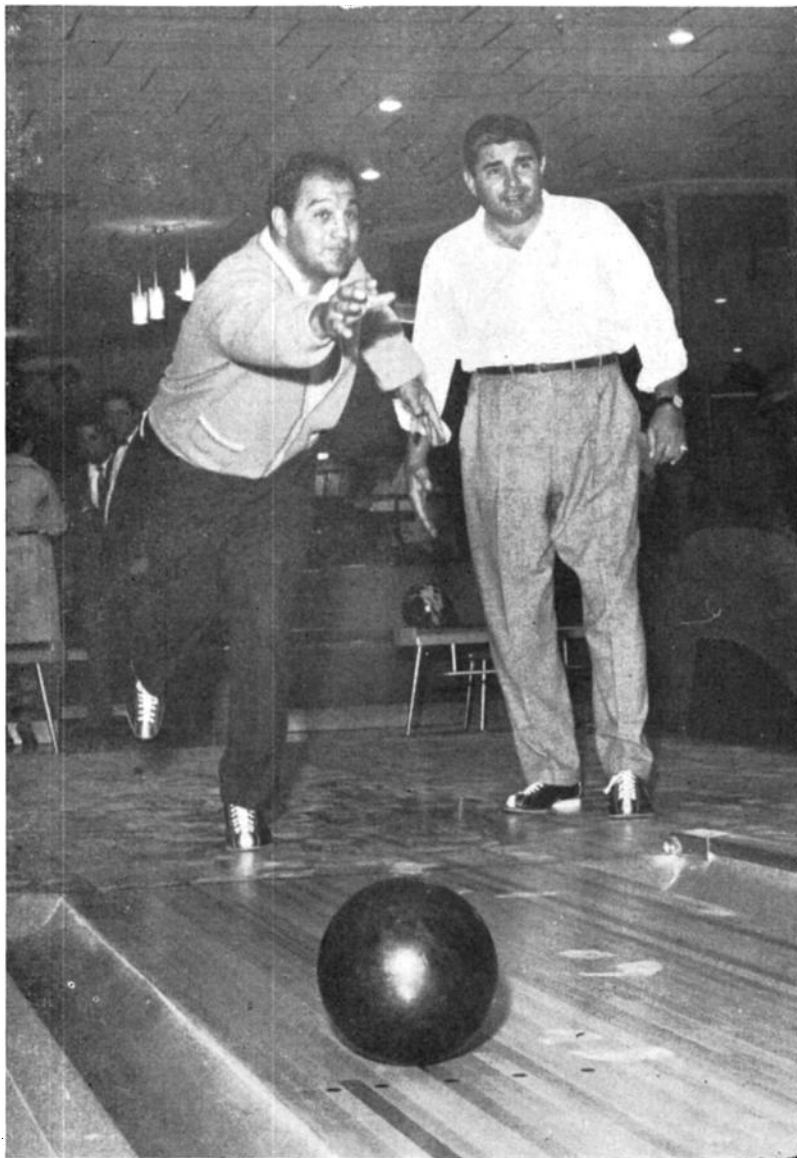

Even if you can't name them all, maybe you'll have the longest correct list, which may make you the winner.

The owner of the picture is the only one who knows the complete correct list of names. This list is safely locked up at the borough office. Entries must be mailed to the Haledon Library, 387 Belmont Avenue, along with your name and address.

Entries must be enclosed in an envelope and be sure to write "contest" in the lower left hand corner, so all envelopes can be opened at once, before a committee. The longest correct list, with the earliest postmark will win the bond. Chronicle subscription blanks are available at the Library and at the Parker Studio, 391 Belmont Avenue. Any subscriptions to this weekly magazine sold during this three week period, will have One Dollar deducted and donated to the Fiftieth Anniversary Committee for use during this year's celebration.

Members of the Fiftieth Anniversary Committee and their families are not eligible to enter the contest.

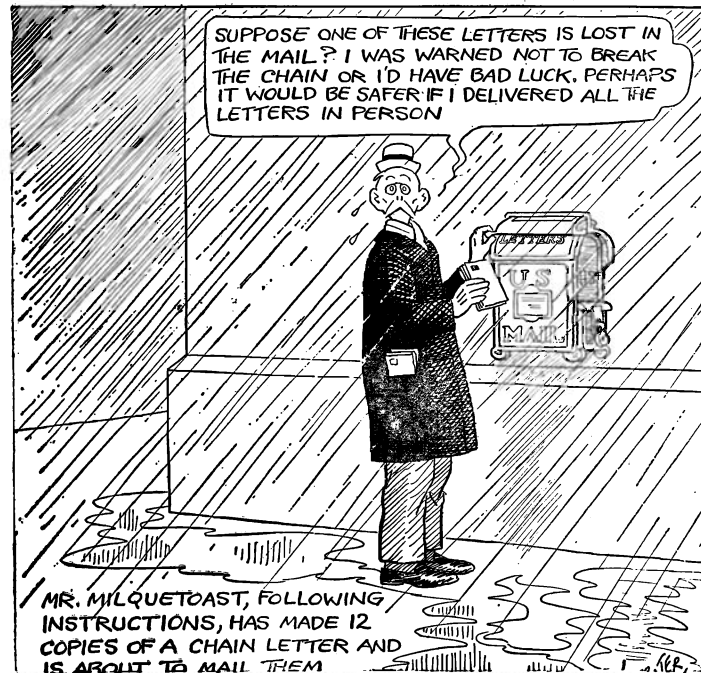

For more information contact Frances Molendyke or James Parker, Jr., co-chairmen of the contest.

A report by Rutgers University economists, under a contract with the State Department of Conservation and Economic Development, sees the population of New Jersey reaching the 7 million mark by 1975.

In other words, in 17 years they forecast approximately 720 persons, per square mile, will make ours one of the most densely populated states in the nation.

Among other aspects of the report they say: total personal income will rise 84 per cent; there will be a work force of 2,480,000; dwelling units will increase 32 per cent, and high school enrollment will increase 90 per cent.

In the report the economists say, "New Jersey is cheating its children and cheating itself" at present. One of every two persons between 18 and 21 will go to college, compared to 9 out of 25 today.

Looks like we started our Regional program just in time. But now our problems continue because there will not be college facilities available unless the state gets busy NOW!

TRIBOROUGH

The fashion show sponsored by the North Haledon American Legion Auxiliary Tuesday night, at the headquarters of Haledon Fire Co. No. 3 was a riotous success. "Summertime Fashions" from Chris's Big and Little Shop on Belmont Ave., Haledon were featured, along with Vernon Philport and his three Legion comrades, who stole the show by modeling some women's fashions from years ago, in the "roaring 20's". Some of the models who wore summer styles were Greta Zwacki, Margo Kearns, "Boots" Philport, Jean Tester, Irene Holscher, Betty Block, Betty Bracigliano and Agnes Oppek. The youngsters who modeled were Phyllis Kerberg, Judy Willmann, Jane and Dot Devlin, Jackie De Virgilio Beverly Kearns and the twin Eisele boys.

Members of Scout Troop No. 2 of St. Paul's R. C. Church, under the leadership of Sgt. Arthur Fox, are selling first aid kits throughout Haledon, North Haledon, Prospect Park and the nearby districts of Paterson. Hunt's Drug Store is the agent for the kits and the headquarters for supplies for the boys. Vincent Parrillo, Jr., is in charge of the boys who are canvassing the area for these sales.

HALEDON

I "goofed" last week and didn't include the rest of the list of ex-fire chiefs of Haledon. So here they are now, from 1932 to the present time: Sidney Olrich, Jacob Yennie, James Acker, Edmund J. Buschmann, Nicholas Amos, Thomas Maskery, Thomas Reardon, Nicholas Finamore, Charles Heinrichs, Carl Wicky, Walter Lindsey, William Sondermeyer, Libero Faletto, Edward Koces and Peter Van Der Jagt.

All these men will be honored, some posthumously, at the Smorgasbord dinner dance Saturday, May 31 at Jos. Pipp's. There will be music and entertainment besides all you can eat and drink. Tickets will be available from the firemen.

Two local girls became engaged recently. Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Kranich of 32 Mangold Street, announced the engagement of their daughter Marilyn to Malcolm Valentine, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Valentine, Sr., of Paterson.

Marilyn attended Central High and is presently attending Sherwood Secretarial School. Mr. Valentine graduated from Central High, and is employed with Totowa Fabricators. The ring was blessed by Rev. Harris E. Baldwin of St. Mary's Episcopal Church. No date has been set for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Riccardo, 342 W. Clinton Street, announced the engagement of their daughter Carole, to Dale Hendee, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Hendee of Hornell, New York.

Carole attended Central High and is now at Sherwood Secretarial School. Mr. Hendee is serving in the U. S. Air Force, and no date has been set for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. James White, of 8 Geyer Street, became the parents of a girl at St. Joseph's Hospital and Mr. and Mrs. Herman Ver Voorn, 554 West Broadway, became the parents of a girl at Paterson General.

PROSPECT PARK

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. John Wieggers of 97 Struyk Avenue, who observed their 45th wedding anniversary Wednesday with open house. The couple were married on April 16, 1913, and have always lived in the borough. They have three children, Mrs. Leon Schlossman of Hawthorne, Mrs. Abram Smith of Prospect Park and Henry Wieggers of North Haledon, and seven grandchildren.

Tuesday night a supperware demonstration was held at the Auxiliary meeting of the Volunteer Hose Company. The members are presently accepting reservations for a dinner to be held Saturday, May 3, at the Brownstone House on West Broadway.

Funeral services were held Tuesday for Tunis De Roo of 8 North 13th Street, Hawthorne. He was the father of Mrs. James (Jessie) Van Ness and the brother of Mrs. William (Sadie) Rosendale of this borough.

George Williams of 376 North 7th Street, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Sytsma became engaged to Arlene Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Miller, 49 Benson Avenue, Westwood, over the Easter holidays. Miss Miller is employed by the General Insurance Company of America, and Mr. Williams is employed by Franklin Lake Dairy. A fall wedding is planned.

NORTH HALEDON

Miss Judith Edsall has been chosen as one of 24 Fairleigh Dickinson University students who made her debut at the Tenth Annual Presentation Cotillion. It was held in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Plaza in New York City. The students were chosen from both the Rutherford and Teaneck campuses on the basis of class seniority and scholarship. Miss Edsall is a Rutherford campus freshman, majoring in nursing. Proceeds from the Cotillion will augment the scholarship fund for students from foreign countries.

New arrivals in the borough include, a boy at Barnert Hospital for Mr. and Mrs. William Lang, 15 De Roos Avenue; another boy at the Barnert for Mr. and Mrs. Robert Witten, 148 Oakwood Avenue; a girl at Paterson General for Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Miller, 65 Doorn Avenue; a boy at Barnert for Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Pacelli, 326 Squaw Brook Road, and a girl at Paterson General for Mr. and Mrs. Roger Veenstra, 40 Oakwood Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick James, Sr., 891 Belmont Avenue, announced the engagement of their daughter Lois to Garry Butterworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Butterworth, 15 North 9th Street, at a dinner held at the Casino de Charlz. The wedding is planned for October 18.

Condolences are extended to Arthur Vervaeke, Jr., upon the death of his father, Arthur Sr., 58, of 103 Putnam Street, who died suddenly last Monday night in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Van Grouw, Sr., of 37 Kuiken Court, will observe their 25th wedding anniversary with an open house at the Prospect Park Fire House on Fairview Avenue, from 7 to 10 p.m. Monday night.

They have two children, Albert Jr. of Prospect Park and Mrs. Peter (Marie) Drost of Clifton. There are three grandchildren, twins, Albert III and Janet Van Grouw, and Nancy Lynn Drost.

Harold Pomper, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pomper of 67 Hillside Drive, Thomas Fleischer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Fleischer of 6 Messerve Place, and Robert Vogel, son of Mrs. Victor Vogel of 169 Terrace Ave, are three Hawthorne High juniors who have been named as delegates to Jersey Boys' State at Rutgers University, June 22-29. The boys will be sponsored by Memorial Post 428 American Legion.

SUBURBAN

West Paterson Republicans are a little concerned over the showing the Democratic organization made in the Primary. Apparently, GOP leaders didn't expect so many Democrats to turn out.

* * * *

Mayor David Brown scored an impressive and decisive victory in Haledon. It demonstrates that citizens are weary of the constant bickering going on at councilmanic meetings. Brown's victory appears to be a repudiation of the tactics used by the opposing faction. There may be some changes on the council in November.

* * * *

Maurice Metzler conducted a good, hard campaign in an attempt to replace Brown as Haledon's mayor. However, he did not deserve the treatment he received from the very ones who pledged him their support. The evidence of "bullet voting" indicates he was double-crossed.

* * * *

Despite bitter opposition, a split decision in Little Falls returned Mayor Jacob DeYoung and Councilman James Stokes as GOP candidates for the November election. Dr. Stokes, stormy petrel of the Township Committee, has great support in the municipality. While voters want to keep him in office, they are a bit wary of his having any power. Hence the division. People know that Dr. Stokes' presence on the board will have a "watchdog" effect on activities.

James Campbell and Ray Cingale were easy victors in the Primary in East Paterson. It practically assures their re-election in November. Both have performed dedicated service to the borough.

* * * *

Totowa Borough voters gave the Democratic mayoralty nod to Councilman Felix Liberti. Indications are that complete harmony for a November victory will be effected. The campaign, while hard fought, was clean and without needless recriminations. A great deal of credit goes to Councilman Joseph Fitzpatrick for his gentlemanly conduct in defeat and to Mayor Joseph Ryan for his steadying hand in keeping the campaign on an even "keel".

* * * *

In all of the outlying boroughs and municipalities GOP U.S. Senate nominee Robert Kean piled up an impressive number of votes. Reports are that Kean had the area flooded with the favorite American green.

* * * *

The brochure to be issued relative to Hawthorne's proposed new junior high school referendum has not yet been printed. Recent economic conditions forecast a defeat for the referendum when borough residents vote the question on June 10.

Tax Reduction or Increased Spending, That Is the Pressing Question?

The general expectation in Washington this week was that members of Congress would return from Easter vacations determined to push through an income tax reduction. The consensus appears to be that Congress will delay final action on tax reduction until May, or June.

In the ranks of both parties there are reported to be many members who question the wisdom of cutting taxes and producing a deep deficit. These lawmakers are hopeful that under the stimulus of increased appropriations for housing, highway-building, etc., the economy will turn upward in time to take some of the steam out of the demand for lower tax rates. In these circles it is reasoned that if recovery comes without a tax reduction it will achieve enough natural momentum so tax rates may be cut, in 1959 or 1960, out of a Federal surplus. Against this reasoning Congress has to weigh the strong pressures from organized labor and other quarters for immediate tax reduction.

Within the Administration, Labor Secretary Mitchell has said he prefers tax reduction to public works. The Council of State Chambers of Commerce has appealed for "wise tax reduction" instead of big Federal public works spending. The National Planning Association has called for both lower taxes and big Government outlays.

A New Hobby

Do you want a new hobby? One that costs practically nothing, yet you can become a collector.

Be a meeting collector!

Have you attended your local borough council meeting lately? School board? Board of adjustment? Recreation commission? Planning board?

You think they're uninteresting? Maybe they might have been because the members felt their fellow townsmen didn't care enough to come out to see what was going on. But if you're interested, the meetings will be interesting!

Now you say, what can you collect? One thing of course is information on the various aspects of your local government.

Another thing is an awareness of your town and your neighbors. But best of all, you'll collect a very good feeling inside yourself that you are actively participating in your own community's activities.

Try it for a month. It could become habit forming and you'll probably find yourself enjoying your town and the people in it much more.

The Editor Speaks

VINCENT S. PARRILLO

A College professor said recently that the United States is becoming a woman's world.

"Diaper changing, dish washing, cooking, cleaning, laundering, shopping all tend to become duties shared with the wife," said the professor, "and the only task now left solely to the wife seems to be child-bearing."

It seems a shame that we men are becoming as sissified as the good professor says, but there's a redeeming feature about this so-called sad state of affairs.

"If both partners share the work load, regardless of whose job is being done, the husbands of today will be able to share more leisure time with his wife than ever before."

He went on to say, "If a wife has a talent for painting, writing, selling, or office work, and feels she could help the family in that way, why can't a husband be proud of her for that? It never has been clear to me why any man should expect his wife to be the perfect cook, the perfect dishwasher, the perfect housecleaner, the perfect nursemaid, the perfect business manager, and nothing else."

We're inclined to agree with the professor. Women are getting better education today, and they like to put their well-trained minds to work!

Husbands can share more of their wives' leisure time, even if she "goes to business" if they'll pitch in with the household chores occasionally. Then there will be a lively, interesting companion for each to share, rather than two tired frustrated humans rigidly sticking to their prescribed limitations.

Marriage should be a partnership not limited only to the living room but including the kitchen and the office too.

Let's Talk

Politics

—by O JAY

The opinions expressed in this column are exclusively those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the policy and opinion of The Chronicle.

If it wasn't known before, and we're sure it was, the tide of the recent Primary establishes State Sen. Anthony J. Grossi as top Democratic leader in the state. Grossi's direct handling of the Harrison Williams campaign for the U.S. senatorial nod produced a better than 6 to 1 majority in a county where Grogan presumably had strong labor backing. Somehow, it didn't materialize. The state senator, handicapped by the absence of an ailing county chairman, Edward J. O'Byrne, managed to develop a unity which has been seriously lacking the past several years.

Grossi

In Trenton, however, Gov. Meyner attributes Williams' victory to himself. He feels that his conduct of state government has won approbation. Despite this feeling, it would seem that without Sen. Grossi's leadership, in this highly industrialized area, Governor Meyner would have suffered a setback. It was Grossi's efforts which neutralized a number of strong labor unions in the county on the verge of joining the swing to Hoboken Mayor John J. Grogan, a labor leader of 30 years' standing.

As recently as this week, the governor's position on proposed changes in the prosecutor's office remained adamant. His statement was that he would continue to conduct the affairs of the state in the same manner he has been during the past four years. This can be interpreted to mean that there will be no changes. And the faithful continue to stand and wait and "champ at the bit."

While the local Democratic organization piled up an impressive Primary score, the apparent paradox of the Third Ward can be explained simply by pointing to the quality of leadership offered by Sam Bruno. Bruno is a likeable fellow who has been in the forefront of many scrapes. He is without a doubt a "stand-up guy". Added to this is the fact that the loss of his job as advertising manager of a weekly newspaper made him a political martyr . . . Another cheerful spot is the reception given to Congressional Candidate Joseph R. Brumale. With almost 9,000 votes, a feat seldom achieved in any Primary, Brumale can face the November election fearlessly. The GOP leaders are in a rout. It will be months before any semblance of a reapproachment is effected. It will take a good deal longer for rank and file members to patch up the differences . . .

Brumale

With the kind of leadership Sen. Grossi has given the county and with the acceptance accorded Brumale, the Democrats can sweep the offices from top to bottom . . .

Sen. Grossi and Mayor O'Byrne were renamed county leaders respectively. It would seem a wise move for both men to relinquish these posts in the light of other arduous duties. However, reports indicate some major changes are in the immediate offing.

Warner Bros.' long search for an actor to play Auntie Mame's nephew in "Auntie Mame," starring Rosalind Russell, has ended with the signing of Universal-International contractee Roger Smith.

Coral Browne, a leading star of England's famous Old Vic Theatre, was also set for "Auntie Mame." She will play the frivolous actress friend of Auntie Mame. This will be her American film debut.

Morton DaCosta, who directed the stage "Auntie Mame," is directing the screen version.

With her sensational recording of WHO'S SORRY NOW still making sales history, winsome Connie Francis serves up another hit-bidder waxing. I'M SORRY I MADE YOU CRY is a familiar "oldie" all decked-out prettily in new styling the inimitable Francis way. Sounds like the stuff hits are made of to our ears. LOCK UP YOUR HEART, on the flip side, is a delightful novelty with a really catchy lyric.

Tab Hunter faced the world with a startling three-inch scar below his right eye for an entire week to learn the subconscious feeling of a man with such a blemish.

The makeup scar was put on Hunter for his role in Warner Bros.' "Lafayette Escadrille," but director William Wellman suggested he keep it on even after leaving the studio.

"See how passers-by react," said Wellman, "and how you react to their glances. Actors having to don unusual makeup often wear it outwardly only, but do not adjust their characterization to it. A scar can change a person's attitude toward the world."

When Philip Silvers was 11, he was a singer at the Supreme Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. His job was to keep the audience amused during projection trouble with the movie feature.

Ben Hecht wants to write and direct "Mr. Pygmalion," a series dealing with a plastic surgeon . . . A new five-year agreement has been signed between Loretta Young and her sponsor. She is also negotiating with NBC regarding syndication of the films produced since her show started five years ago.

Natalie Wood's wardrobe in Warner Bros.' "Marjorie Morningstar" comes in 24 different colors.

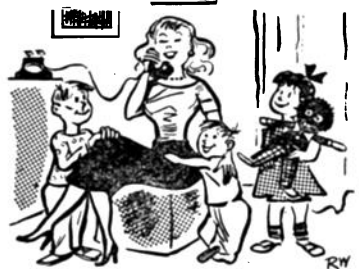

A clergyman received a phone call from the local income-tax man inquiring about a $535 contribution listed as having been paid his church by a parishioner. "Did he make this donation?" the tax man asked. The clergyman hesitated, then replied: "No—but he will, he will."

The seventh grade class which my brother teaches was holding a magazine-subscription sale. The morning after the sale started one boy reported that he had already sold $20 worth.

"How did you manage to sell so many so quickly?" my brother asked. "I sold them all to one family," the boy replied. "Their dog bit me!"

The Hollywood Columnist telephoned the movie star. "Is it true," she asked, "that you are divorcing your fourth husband?" "Don't be silly," giggled the star. "Why should I divorce him? I barely know the man!"

Editor: "Did the play you saw tonight have a happy ending?" Critic: "Oh, yes. Everybody was happy when it ended."

Terry: "Why did they hang that picture?" Mary: "Probably couldn't find the artist."

"Watch your fingers."

INGRID RELIES ON TALENT IN NEW FILM — London, England — Devoid of the customary Hollywood glamor, actress Ingrid Bergman is shown dressed for the role of a Missionary which she portrays in a new MGM film now being shot, "The Inn of the Seventh Happiness". Miss Bergman was photographed in The Mall, London where location scenes were being made.

HIGH FASHION ON THE FARM — Phoenix, Ariz. — While most of the nation is buried under a blanket of snow or pelted by rain, Sue Mitchel, "Valley of the Sun Lettuce Queen" takes time out to bask in the sun. Sue is dressed in what looks like a good tossed salad.

IMPORT FROM MERRIE ENGLAND — New York — This, Gents, is Sabrina — all of her. She's here from England for a two-weeks stay to fill television engagements and, incidentally, to bring up between the inevitable comparisons her Sleek-As-A-Fish architecture and the facades of La Monroe and La Manafiel.

PRETTY PRINCESS—Sue England will portray Princess Silverbud of Samarkand on Friday, April 18 in NBC-TV's presentation of a fantasy, "The Land of Green Ginger," one of the "Shirley Temple's Storybook" series.

Elsa had seen me. She was coming toward me. I drew in my breath. Her gown was blue, simple, strapless. It had to be simple. The glow in her eyes, the sweeping luxury of coppery hair almost touching the gleaming shoulders, the easy grace with which she moved — it all made the very idea of decoration adding to her ridiculous. The years had changed her. The smouldering intensity of her had burst into flame. She held both hands out to me. "Duncan! You! How wonderful!"

Her fingers were warm, their pressure urgent. I had intended to be aloof . . . indifferent, but my blood raced. I kept my voice low. "Got in yesterday. Business. Carlotta said you'd be here. I wanted to see you again."

"And I you! I'm so glad you came. I've missed you, Duncan."

"I've missed more than that." My voice shook. "You Elsa. Five years of you." It wasn't what I'd intended to say. The reserves against her, the fight to build up a cushion for myself to fall back on were gone. The first sight of her had swept them away. I wanted her . . . wanted her as I had five years before. I was nothing, she'd said then. Nice to be with, but . . . well . . . just nothing to her. I'd hated her since, fiercely. It was impossible that she shouldn't know flaunting her indifference was the cruelest thing she could have done to me. I'd gone away, the acid eating me, and I'd been lucky, successful, attained almost a measure of fame as an architect. I'd come back to show her it didn't matter about her any more . . . that I didn't need her. And it was all that had happened in between that didn't matter instead. She did. She was all that did. My voice was thick. "You're married, Elsa. I've read about you. This newspaperman. Is he here?"

Her eyes changed. It was funny how they changed. They'd been shining, confident, deeply interested in me. Something stirred way back in them, restless and unhappy. There was just a tinge of bitterness in her voice as she moved her head. "Paul's over there. In the corner."

I looked, almost avidly. He was sipping a cocktail, talking rather listlessly to a tall girl with dark hair. I stole a quick glance at Elsa. Her lips were turned in, pressed together. I looked back at him, exultation rising in me. I began to understand.

He was big, this Paul of hers . . . big, but with a pulpy sort of bigness — big-bodied, almost fat. He looked over at Elsa, smiled at me, then turned back to his companion. Queer eyes, he had, light blue, buried in the bulging face. I knew of him. Eccentric, they said, with flashes of brilliance. The strange glamor that surrounds eccentricity was what had probably attracted Elsa to him. But the perfection of Elsa married to anyone quite that Falstaffian was almost ludicrous . . . Must have seemed that way to Elsa as soon as the glamor had worn thin. That quick, irritated jerk of her shoulders and the almost angry glint in her eyes as she watched him told me enough.

"Things turn out strangely sometimes, don't they?" I murmured.

Her eyes, flashing at me, were startled. "How did you know that?"

"I should. They have for me, Elsa. I couldn't forget you. Everything is still nothing without you."

She glanced quickly at her husband, then back at me. Her eyes were brilliantly deep. "We aren't dead yet, Duncan. Or are we?"

"Elsa!" I leaned toward her, my fingers tightening on hers.

"Careful," she breathed. Her head inclined slightly in the direction of her husband, but her eyes held mine. "Suppose we go out on the terrace."

I followed her, a pulse in my throat throbbing. That she was married didn't matter. She had looked at me as though I were really important to her, and it had an almost dizzying effect. The lights of the city gleamed radiantly below me. They didn't seem impersonal, minding their own business any more. Elsa's nearness had stripped clean the barriers I had erected between myself and life. I was a part of it, a part of the warmth, hate, fear and love; a part of the rich emotional, pulsating current.

I glanced quickly at Elsa's face. Her lower lip was pushed out, petulant and unsatisfied, as though the flame in her was burning low for lack of fuel. Life hadn't been fulfilling for her, I knew, and the thought that I might be the means of making it so sent a tremor through me. "Look at me, Elsa."

Her face turned up. Her eyes were strange. They were very deep yet I couldn't see into them. She moved toward me slightly, her lips barely parting.

I drew her to me. There was something almost desperately intense about the way she responded to my kiss. Yet her mouth was cool . . . disturbingly so.

The French doors opened suddenly. I started, lifting my head. Elsa was staring past me, her eyes wide and expectant. Her husband was standing there, smiling, I thought, almost grotesquely. I gritted my teeth. There wasn't going to be a scene, if I could help it. One word, and I'd hit, smash and smash that uncouth face into quiet.

There wasn't a scene. "Sorry," he said. And there was no sneer on his face. He looked honestly regretful that he'd disturbed us. "Warm inside. Just came out for some air." He went back in closing the doors behind him apologetically.

There was an overwrought gasp from Elsa. I looked at her. She was staring at the closed doors, her teeth digging into her lower lip, her face strangely white. My hand tightened on her arm. "Don't worry, Elsa. He won't do anything to hurt you. I'll see to that."

She didn't seem to have heard. Her breath was coming in quick short, gasping bursts.

"The beast!" She gritted. The intensity in her voice shocked me. "The beast!"

I stared. "But he didn't do anything. He didn't even say anything."

"No," she breathed. "No, he wouldn't. He doesn't care. Nothing will make him care. Nothing I can do. I'm outside of him. I can't even prick his thick, insensible skin." Her voice almost hissed. "Sometimes I think how wonderful it would be to take a knife, a long, sharp knife, and slide it deep inside him. But then he'd just die . . . he'd never notice it was I who had done it."

I swallowed. "But you surely don't care about that — that —"

"I hate him! — I hate everything about him! He married me because he thought there was beauty in me . . . and he wanted to know what a beautiful woman thought about. He turned me inside out . . . made me think, breathe, live, love. And then, when he was all I needed for life, he came to the end of the book and shut it. Now he'd like to be rid of me. But he never will. I'll hang on until he dies, the beast! I hoped with all my heart he'd come out when I was kissing you. He did. It didn't matter. He has no pride in possessing me. He just wants to know about things. But I'll think of something. I'll get inside of him again . . . somehow." Her nails were digging sharply into my arm. She didn't know I was there. That was the way it always had been.

I looked at her. All I wanted out of life was to get under her skin. And I never will. I knew that. But I didn't feel so lonely about it any more. "It's the darkest hell, isn't it?" I observed quietly. I felt sorry for her. It is.

PAUL REVERE'S MIDNIGHT RIDE

In Boston on the night of April 18, 1775 hundreds of British troops marched silently across the Commons toward the inner bay. Sharp eyes and ears discovered the secret of the mysterious troop movements.

About ten o'clock that night Dr. Joseph Warren, chairman of the Massachusetts Committee of Safety, summoned Paul Revere and told him to cross the Charles River and ride in warning to Lexington and Concord. Samuel Adams and John Hancock were hiding in Lexington, and a few miles farther on, in Concord, military stores had been collected. Warren said that he was also sending William Dawes, another express rider, over the land route to Concord by way of Boston Neck and Roxbury.

Paul Revere, a forty-year-old silversmith, goldsmith and copper engraver, was a trusted messenger in the patriot cause. Tonight he was called for a task that was to bring him everlasting fame. He arranged with friends to be ready to signal him by lantern from the tower of Old North Church on the direction of the British movements. "One light if by land, and two if by sea, while I on the opposite shore will be."

Accompanied by two friends, Joshua Bentley and Thomas Richardson, Paul Revere reached a hidden skiff and was rowed across the Charles River. There is a legend that the oars were muffled by the still warm flannel petticoat of a girl patriot. The skiff glided, apparently unseen, under the very stern of His Majesty's Ship Somerset anchored in mid-stream.

Reaching the Charleston shore, Revere waited, a borrowed horse by his side, while his companions returned to Boston. About eleven o'clock his straining eyes saw one lantern, then another, glimmering in Old North's steeple. That meant that the British were crossing in boats to Lechmere Point at the Cambridge shore.

Revere swung into the saddle and galloped off on his famous "midnight ride." He had three hours start on the main British force. The Cambridge road being blocked by patrols, he raced off through Medford, arousing the countryside as he went. Here he stopped to pound on a door, there to chuck gravel at a window, and at every house he shouted, "The British are coming!" Each halt was brief. The man he had awakened would be alert.

By midnight Paul Revere reached Lexington and came to the house of the Rev. Jonas Clark where Hancock and Adams were sleeping. Guards at the door warned him not to disturb the sleeping men with his noise. "Noise!" cried Paul Revere. "You'll soon have noise enough! The regulars are coming!" Warned in time, the two patriot leaders made their escape.

William Dawes arrived in Lexington about a half hour later and joined Revere. After a hasty snack they both pushed on to Concord, accompanied by young Dr. Samuel Prescott of Concord who had been courting a Lexington girl that evening. In a field near Concord the three were stopped by a British patrol. Dawes and Prescott escaped and dashed on to Concord, but Revere was cornered and held.

He managed to talk his captors into releasing him and they sent him back to Lexington on foot. So ended Paul Revere's famous ride. He had accomplished his mission ably. By dawn, grim-faced men, musket in hand, were assembling, ready to resist and fire the shots that were to usher in the American Revolution.
