COVER PICTURE:

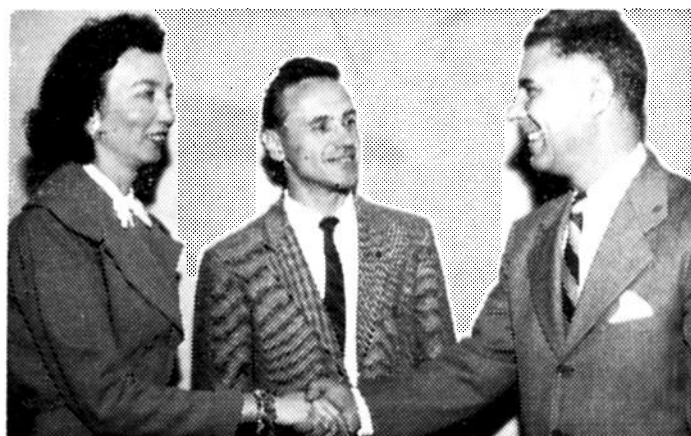

May 11 is Mother's Day! We doubt whether anyone needs to be told. To most of us Mother's Day means a recollection of thoughts of her teachings and guiding hand. To those who are fortunate enough to still have Mom, remember her, by spending the day with her and bring Mom some flowers. There are many whose mothers have long since departed this earth — honor her memory in prayer. Not just May 11, but make every day MOTHER'S DAY!

GOD BLESS ALL MOTHERS!

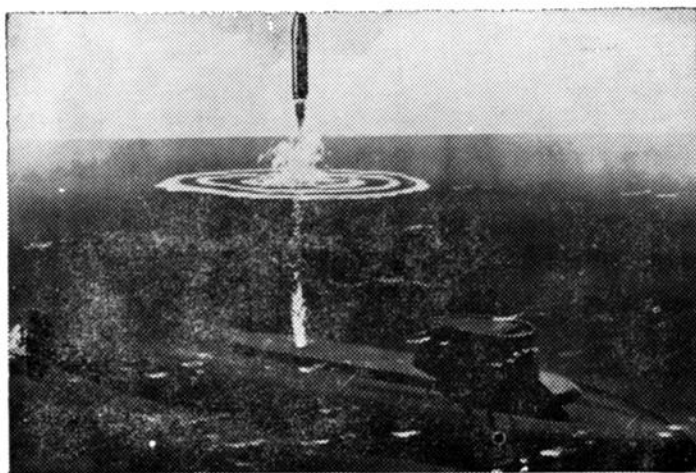

The CHRONICLE

RECEIVES TROPHY — Miss Elaine Hartman, 17, left, receives a trophy from William Carmen after capturing the "Miss East Paterson VFW" crown. Looking on is Mrs. Petrie.

SOCIAL SECURITY SERVICE AWARDS — Stanley J. Fiori, right, district manager of the Paterson social security office, congratulates two employees, winners of cash awards for outstanding performance at Governor's Island, New York City. The two are Madge A. Nessle and Roy J. Spadaro.

SKETCH OF UNDERWATER MISSILE LAUNCHING — Washington, D.C. — Here's an artist's concept of the Navy's new class of guided missile submarine, the SSG (N):FBM, scheduled for construction as part of the Navy's 1959 shipbuilding program. The nuclear-powered sub will be designed to carry the Fleet Ballistic Missile which can be fired from a submerged position.

Hawthorne GOP Leaders Named

HAWTHORNE — Norman W. Hopper was named borough Republican leader at the organization meeting of the Republican county committee of Hawthorne. Hopper, who is president of the Hawthorne Unit of the Passaic County Republican Club, was elected chairman. The complete slate elected to serve with him includes: Mrs. Catherine Gloor, vice chairman; Edward C. Latta, secretary and Mrs. Jennie Armour, treasurer.

Tri-Borough Notebook

September 20th of this year the Haledon Emergency Ambulance Association will celebrate its 25th anniversary.

This volunteer organization is made up of members from the three boroughs to serve all of the residents of Haledon, North Haledon and Prospect Park.

When I started to look back over the years of service rendered by these good citizens, I found so much fascinating material, I'll need more than one column to record it. So — we'll start this week with the very beginning.

Back in 1933, a Haledon man nearly died when he suffered a burst appendix, and it took so long for his family to get him to a hospital. His friends, alarmed at the near fatality, decided to try to form an ambulance service locally. A businessman in the borough heard of these aspirations and donated an old hearse. This was fitted up with stretchers, blankets and first aid kits, to put the vehicle in shape to help the living, instead of for its original purpose.

A few men who would be available for driving and with a knowledge of first aid formed a working squad. Others formed the association, which merged with the workers to form an incorporated ambulance service.

Fourteen men formed the original group. The charter members were: Edward Pries, the first president; John Philport, vice president; Walter Ormezzano, secretary; William Abrams, treasurer; and Andrew Van Ripper, Charles Cona, Robert Spinner, George Bernascone, C. Horace Frignoca, Sam Abrams, Albert Rountree, Abram McDonald, Fred Siegel and Harold Tortoiseshell. Two of these men, Walt Ormezzano and Bill Abrams are still in the association.

The membership has grown to its present strength of 40 members, men and women.

Monthly meetings are held the first Monday of every month at headquarters on Morrissee Ave., across the street from the municipal building. Sunday mornings, the men of the corps congregate to clean the ambulance, check equipment or make repairs.

The early meetings of the association were held in vacant garages on Morrissee Avenue, with the girls sitting with blankets around their knees to keep warm, in spite of the pot stove burning nearby.

In time a new headquarters for the Ambulance Association was built and dedicated. Downstairs, is the garage for the "rig", (as the ambulance is called). Closets filled with blankets, sheets, pillow, towels, pads, masks, bandages, splints, and every conceivable first aid necessity. A supply room holds the oxygen tanks, litters and stretchers for emergency calls, as well as hospital beds, crutches, splints, wheel chairs, a walker for rehabilitation of a fractured leg, and even a wooden leg for temporary use for an amputee.

In the ambulance, which can carry four patients at a time if necessary, they also carry a maternity kit, a fracture pillow, heating pads, sand bags, thermoses, handcuffs and a straight jacket, beside the regulation first aid supplies. Oxygen is always ready in the 1951 Cadillac Ambulance which is radio equipped, and carries blood plasma and a resuscitator for smoke poisoning or asphyxiation cases.

Upstairs, you find a big modern meeting room, kitchen, storage closets, as well as rest rooms equipped with showers. These showers were installed in case squad members should become contaminated while on a case or just need a clean up after a messy accident.

The workers are all volunteers and their building was paid for by the grateful citizens of the three boroughs through fund drives and donations.

All members must hold valid First Aid cards sanctioned by the Red Cross. Instructors associated

During the year, members are called out to "surprise" emergencies, to test their reactions and their aptitudes in handling themselves, and the equipment during an emergency. They are judged impartially and graded on these tests.

The Haledon Emergency Ambulance Association also belongs to the New Jersey State Gold Cross Association. This is a unit comprised of 280 volunteer corps. They meet once a month at alternate headquarters. This unit also calls emergency training tests in case of disasters, especially in conjunction with mobilization training.

Also, if there should be a catastrophe, where one or more units could not handle the call, the Gold Cross members would all be called in to send volunteers to help.

For instance, our Ambulance Association has a citation from the "citizens and the First Aid and Safety Squad of South Amboy," for our assistance at the explosion, May 19, 1950.

Our unit was on its way to South Amboy to help rescue explosion victims, and had to help at a roadside accident on the way down. After they deposited the accident victims at the nearest hospital, they continued on to do the job they'd been asked to help with. It's comforting to know that there are such a large number of unselfish neighbors in our state who will give their time and energy, not only to their immediate vicinity, but to establish a network of assistance in case of disaster.

The main object of the corps is to give free service to all the residents of the three boroughs. Besides emergency calls, and transporting to and from hospitals, these services include free use of hospital beds, wheel chairs, canes, crutches, and bedside oxygen. These items can be borrowed from the corps for temporary use and then returned to pass them on to other victims later on. There are male and female attendants on all emergency calls; twenty-four hour service. No fee is charged, the equipment is supplied and maintained by donations only. A fund drive is usually sponsored by the association in the fall of the year.

Next week we'll continue the story of this Tri-Boro service, and show some instances where national recognition has been made of our local corps.

with the Paterson Chapter train new members, and twice a year refresher courses are held for all members to renew their knowledge on up-to-date methods and emergency ambulance work. This includes splinting, artificial respiration, birth, use of resuscitation equipment, burns, drownings, assistance at fires and police emergencies.

Also some details of rescue missions and life-saving adventures that are all the more fascinating because they are true.

Battle lines are clearly drawn for the Hawthorne Junior High School referendum scheduled for June 10. PTA groups, educators and those generally interested in the school are working tooth and nail while those who fear an undue tax burden are making inroads and progress in a different manner. There will be surprises in store before the last tally is taken.

* * * *

Mayor Joseph Ryan's blast against state highway engineers for their "autocratic" handling of Totowa Borough's public hearing on the expressway will bear fruit. There will be citizen action against arbitrary methods used in ignoring the peoples' voice.

* * * *

Totowa Borough Attorney Francis R. Giardiello doesn't seem to be smiling as much or as well dispositioned as he used to be. Is there anything amiss with him?

* * * *

Up-county residents are saying it REALLY is time for a change in the congressional representation. Several "Joseph Brumale Booster Clubs" are in the process of blossoming in areas formerly considered GOP strongholds. Don't say we didn't tell you.

* * * *

The Haledon Ex-Fire Chiefs dinner for which all arrangements had been completed including the sale of some tickets and scheduled for May 31, has been called off. What happened?

* * * *

Unless something happens real soon, Haledon's 50th anniversary celebration will be a big bust. The borough is certainly entitled to greater citizen participation than has developed in the past few months.

* * * *

Indictments or no indictments the tenor of council meetings in Fair Lawn is still sparkling, controversial and you-never-know-what's going to happen. It won't be long now. The end is in sight for several of the boys.

* * * *

The "Continentials", a four piece combo featured at Tony Manzella's Pink Elephant, Lodi, one of north Jersey's finer eating places, really play up a storm. Their arrangements are unique and are 'packing the house' weekends.

* * * *

North Haledon's School Board will fete former president Herman Gionti at a dinner Thursday night at the Cedar Cliff Hotel. The affair promises to be a complete sell-out for this outstanding citizen. Former Magistrate Edward G. Weiss will be toastmaster.

Random Thoughts About Mother's Day

M—Mother's magic makes miscreants manageable.
O—Open-hearted offspring observed occasion. Ordered orchids.
T—Time takes toll. Tell thanks tenderly; take trip; telephone.
H—Her haven holds happy husband, helping handle hearty, healthy, housewreckers.
E—Engagement; espousal; eventually expectant. Each experience enriching everyone, echoing endlessly.
R—Responsibilities richly rewarded. Restful respite received reverently.
RED LETTER DAY!

Russia's Strategy

Russia's announcement that she is now stopping all tests of nuclear weapons (with the proviso that she will feel free to resume them unless other powers follow suit) is one more step in a long series of propaganda moves designed to persuade worried and bewildered peoples that the Soviet Union stands for peace and world progress while the U. S. and her allies stand for war and ruin. There is no doubt that this propaganda campaign has produced big dividends in some areas, at heavy cost to the power and prestige of the West. There is also no doubt that the elimination of nuclear weapons would serve the Kremlin well. She has, in Europe, great superiority of the conventional weapons and forces.

In this connection, it is and long has been obvious that a major Soviet goal is the undermining and the eventual destruction of NATO — the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

There is good reason for this Soviet attitude — for NATO is a force in being that stands squarely in the way of Soviet ambitions in Europe. And, at this time, a review of the significance of NATO's is in order.

NATO's membership is now made up of 15 nations, which have formally approved the principle that an armed attack against one will be considered an armed attack against all. The line which NATO exists to defend runs halfway across the world, from the Aleutians to the Middle East, and 4,000 miles of it is in Europe. A belligerent crossing that line will be at war with all the NATO nations.

Some people still ask why we need Europe — why we should not pull out, retire to our own borders, and let her fend for herself. There are many answers. For one thing, Europe is one of the best customers for American goods and a supplier of vital raw materials. For another, if Russia overran Europe we would be overwhelmingly outnumbered — 630 million people to 170 million. For still another, Russia and Western Europe together would substantially exceed us in industrial capacity. For still another, we need the brains, the ideas, and the inventions of Europe's scientists. Finally, as the writers of the pamphlet see it: "Western Europeans and Americans are fundamentally the same kind of people. If our friends overseas go down into the darkness of Communist slavery, our isolation will be not only political, economic and industrial. It will be the most terrible of all isolation, that of the heart and mind."

Waiting For The Water To Go Down

The Editor Speaks

MOTHER'S DAY

The children were dressed and off to Sunday School. Dad was doing the breakfast dishes, and the lady of the house was sitting in the living room, with her new housecoat wrapped about her. Her feet, in their new slippers, were propped on the hassock. A steaming cup of coffee waited near a vase of fresh flowers on the end table near a small box of chocolates and a fresh pack of cigarettes.

With the papers on her lap, the lady rested her head against the back of the chair and smiled. Wonderful Thought! No Sunday dinner to plan or prepare. When the kids came home from Sunday School, and when she felt like dressing, they were going out to dinner.

Afterwards, with a short ride in the country to soothe everyone's nerves they'd come home and while she puttered at her favorite hobby, Dad and the kids would make a snack for Sunday night supper, do the dishes, take their baths and put themselves to bed.

Doesn't sound very exciting you say? Quite a few mothers might think this sounds like an ideal way to spend Mother's Day, you know.

Then again, some Mom's go into a mild state of shock just resting while her kitchen is invaded by alien hands. She clenches her teeth while the rattling and crashing goes on in the kitchen. For the one hundredth time she answers the questions like, "Where's the frying pan?" or "Do you always hide the butter?" or "Do you use two or three cups of coffee in the pot?"

When she can stand it no longer, she dashes to the kitchen, but is met by father who says, "No, this is YOUR day and we'll wait on you!"

After breakfast, she has help with the dishes and surreptitiously puts things back where she can find them again; although she'll never find her grapefruit knife, because Johnny was prying open a can with it when it broke, and it's hidden in the garbage.

Or maybe you have a Mom that loves having the married children with their children over for dinner. Her face gets flushed from the oven, and from rushing. But as Dad carves the roast, she smiles happily.

This is really HER day. Her family's all together, healthy, happy and she is serving them.

Let's Talk

Politics

—by OJAY

The opinions expressed in this column are exclusively those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the policy and opinion of The Chronicle.

Things are beginning to move with respect to the patronage picture. This week, Passaic City leader Joseph V. McGuire, who also serves as Democratic State Committeeman, was elected chairman of the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commission. Although Joe has not yet been confirmed, a holdover since 1953, his confirmation is merely a formality to happen within the next several days . . . Dominic Cuccinello, who has been "sweating out" appointment to the same board is also slated to be named this week. The Senate Judiciary committee has consistently refused to okay him for the spot. However, the issue is virtually settled. He will succeed John White, lone Republican on the commission, who has been a holdover the same as McGuire — since 1953.

JOSEPH V. MCGUIRE

Democratic activities have moved in another direction this week. Michael Notorgiacomo's Motor Vehicle Agency No. 1 has been ordered closed for "failure to comply with regulations of the Motor Vehicle division. Auditors are already on the scene checking the office. Nevertheless, they will find no discrepancies. Mike's major fault is that he has tried to be kind to too many friends. The favors he has done for people have now come back to haunt him.

James Alois, former leader of the Ninth Ward, has to vacate the office of Welfare Director because local Democratic leaders have been told he does not possess the necessary academic requirements and the experience. But it is common knowledge that since Alois assumed the post he has performed admirably. State authorities admit this fact yet, insist a more qualified man must be named. What we cannot understand is how much more work could a qualified person actually do? Or could it be done in a more efficient manner? State authorities have found no fault with the administration of the department. It is extremely difficult to figure out. Perhaps the more qualified man will not be the type who can get along with people or understand the problems of the little guy as well as Alois does. Then what?

John Sciro, brother of City Clerk Frank Sciro, is prominently being mentioned as a successor to Alois. However, it is doubtful whether party leaders will go along on his qualifications. There have been too many others who have done more for the party in the past who measure up to state requirements.

State Racing Commission Chairman, Thomas Brogan, is getting set for another season of racing activity. He has been okayed for another term in the important berth.

Joseph Brumale's campaign for congress was keynoted Wednesday when he was feted at a beefsteak dinner. The campaign theme appears to be a return to "full employment and security" brought about by more decisive action at the federal level.

TV Viewers Are Polled On Habits

HAWTHORNE — Harold J. Heitmann of 85 Buena Vista Avenue, has completed a poll of fifty borough residents concerning their television habits. The survey was made in connection with a public relations course at Fairleigh Dickinson.

Heitman, a senior at the university, polled the borough on nine points. The questions and Heitmann's findings were: 1. "How many hours a week do you watch television?" The survey indicates the average TV hours watched by residents in the community amounted to 16.3 per week.

2: "What is your favorite TV night?" — 26 per cent favored Saturday night while 18 per cent picked Wednesday.

3. "What is your favorite western?" — Gunsmoke was the favorite of 22 per cent and Wagon Train was favored by 14 per cent.

4. "What is your favorite variety show?" — Perry Como led with 28 per cent. Ed Sullivan was second with 18 per cent.

5. "What is your favorite educational program?" Many different answers were received. 20th Century was chosen by 14 per cent of the viewers with Walt Disney a close second with 12 per cent.

6. "What is your favorite program of all shows?" — A variety of answers were received here, too. Lawrence Welk with 12 per cent of the pool led.

7. "What is your favorite musical program?" Here Lawrence Welk had no competition, polling 42 per cent. The Firestone Hour polled 33 per cent.

8. "Are the TV programs today better than they were five years ago?" — 70 per cent were of the opinion the quality of programs had improved. 26 per cent voted 'no' and four per cent were undecided.

9. "What detective program would you consider to be the best to set a good example?" — 20 per cent picked Dragnet and 20 per cent chose Perry Mason. Highway Patrol finished high with 16 per cent.

Heitmann's survey indicates, "The majority of people polled were highly fond of westerns. The survey showed most of the resident watched more westerns than any other type of program. The tales of yesterday, regarding the West, seem to bring a stimulating appeal."

"The poll did indicate the average resident in Hawthorne was culture minded as musical and educational programs were also big favorites. A number of polled viewers mentioned they like to watch programs dealing with science, certainly a good thing to to in this day and age. There were also a number of good comments regarding the NBC Opera presentations," concludes Heitmann's synopsis.

Two men, neither very bright, were helping to build a house. One kept picking up nails, looking at them, keeping some, and throwing others away.

"Why are you throwing away so many nails?" asked his companion.

"Because they have the head on the wrong end."

"You fool, those are for the other side of the house!"

A Paris shopkeeper wrote to one of his customers as follows: "I am able to offer you cloth like the enclosed sample at nine francs the meter. In case I do not hear from you, I shall conclude that you wish to pay only eight francs. In order to lose no time, I accept the last mentioned offer."

TODAY'S CHUCKLE: A grumpy husband told yours truly, "There's nothing new about frozen foods—I've been eating cold suppers for years."

THE MISSUS

"It's been exactly nineteen years, three months and two days since you last said you loved me!"

YOU TASTE SWEET AND SALT FOODS MOSTLY TOWARDS THE TIP OF YOUR TONGUE, SOUR ON THE SIDES -- AND BITTER FOODS TOWARD THE BACK!

QUEEN'S AIDE — Suzanne Ames is one of several attractive models who act as attendants to the winner on NBC-TV's "Queen for a Day." The Monday-through-Friday show is now celebrating its 13th anniversary.

It had been a small window to start and the strips pasted across it to prevent shattering had cut down the show space. In the square that was left the little man looking so like a gnome, with his spectacles, was deftly setting out his display of clocks and watches. He paid no attention to the Londoners hurrying by to begin another day.

When he finished fussing with his wares, the little man came out of the shop and stared in the window. He had placed the merchandise with care — the clock in a row at the back, and in front of them, lying flat on velvet, a semi-circle of watches. All the clocks had their faces neatly divided in the middle by hand and registered six o'clock. All the watches, thin or fat, had their hands at the right angle of three o'clock.

"Yes," said the jeweler, with a satisfied nod. "Very nice."

About an hour later a passenger dismounted from a bus at the corner. He was a tall man with a blonde moustache, and he wore an ulster and a black bowler. He limped along on a cane, and smiled when the constable on patrol put a finger to his helmet in greeting. The limping man's name was Gebhardt, and the constable's superiors would have given a great deal to know that.

Gebhardt walked slowly, leaning heavily on his cane. The encounter with the policeman never failed to amuse him, and he chuckled at the stupidity of the English. Gebhardt glanced into the jewelry shop window.

There was no expression on his face as he gazed from the clocks that said six to the watches that said three. He had passed the shop faithfully for a fortnight, but had never gone in. Gebhardt set his wrist watch and pushed open the door.

A salesman was arguing with the jeweler at the far end of the counter, but they turned as the door shut. The jeweler walked toward Gebhardt and peered at him. "Yes?" asked the little man.

"My watch," said Gebhardt. "Seems to have stopped. An hour or so ago." He unbuckled the strap and laid his wrist watch on the counter.

The luminous dial shone dimly in the half light of the shop; the watch's hands indicated nine o'clock. "I see," said the jeweler. "Stopped."

Gebhardt thought that the watch's tick was unusually loud. He glanced at the salesman but the man was thumbing through a catalogue. The jeweler picked up the watch, muffling it in his hand.

Gebhardt said: "And you might change the strap. That one's nearly shot."

He lounged against the counter and waited. Once he looked into the back room where the jeweler had taken his watch. He could see the man, a lens fixed to his spectacles, bent over a desk. Gebhardt lit a cigarette.

It was less than five minutes when the little man came back. He held out the watch with its new strap and Gebhardt put it on. "You should be careful," said the jeweler. His gaze was steady. "That is a fine watch."

"Yes, I know," Gebhardt sounded casual. "And I'm sure it will work perfectly now." He paid the jeweler and left the shop.

All the way back to his lodgings Gebhardt was conscious of the strap on his wrist. He refrained from looking at the time. After all, in his business you couldn't be too careful.

Once inside the tiny room where he'd lived since he first came to London, Gebhardt threw aside all semblance of his limp. He moved about with quick sureness, locking the door, drawing the blackout curtains. Finally, he lit the droplight over a desk, and took off the wrist watch.

Working swiftly, he removed the straps from both ends of the watch. Gebhardt counted the holes punched in the leather. There were seven. Seven was the cipher number then. He slit the buckle end of the new strap, drew out a rolled tissue sheet, spread it and with a glass began to decode the message.

The message was brief and to the point. It read: "Trucks K.C. Court Transport Regiment 55 S Tomorrow A.M. Act Heil."

"So," said Gebhardt. He burned the paper in the ash tray. He knew the lorries parked in King Charles Court would be used to carry troops to the coast and somewhere on the route trucks and troops will be destroyed.

Gebhardt opened his suitcase and from its nest of cotton he picked one of the bombs. Wired beneath an automobile engine the bomb was deadly when the motor heated.

He packed the bombs carefully in a container. He had information on all the lots and garages and all the data on King Charles Court. By midnight the soldiers and mechanics were gone; at 2 a policeman looked in to check up.

Thinking of the time element reminded him, and he put a new strap on his watch, and buckled it into place. Then, he sat very still, gazing into space, mentally checking every detail of the plan.

Gebhardt chuckled. Of course. Outside the jewelry shop he had set his watch back 64 minutes for the signal. He grinned as he moved the minute hand precisely 64 minutes ahead.

When the time came Gebhardt moved carefully through the darkness of blacked out streets.

In the alley behind King Charles Court he stopped and looked at his watch. Twelve exactly. Gebhardt smiled. The whole thing was going like clockwork.

He moved over to the nearest truck. He set down his container, took a roll of wire and a cutter, slid under the truck and felt along the bottom of the engine. Lying flat on his back, working blindly, he began to wire the bomb to the exact place he wanted it.

Somebody stepped on his ankle.

Pain shot up Gebhardt's leg and he bit his lip, not breathing. No, he thought, there can't be anyone here. There never is at this hour. But that weight kept digging into his foot.

"Hall right, bub," said a cockney voice. "Roll hout of there."

Gebhardt froze. Hands grabbed at his legs. He kicked loose and ran.

A man shouted. Someone blew a whistle. A shape dove from nowhere smashing him to the ground. Gebhardt drove his fist into a face, tugged free, ran on. He blundered into a wall. The white beam of a flashlight focused on him. He spun back, but too late.

Gebhardt drew his revolver. As he ran, he heard them yell as they closed in.

There was a quick thunder of gun fire and something struck him in the back. No, Gebhardt thought, the plan was perfect. There was a spasm of pain. He said weakly: "No." He was dead when the soldiers reached him.

"Imagine the guy's nerve," said a young volunteer. "He walks in here as if we didn't exist." He added puzzled. "What was it to give him away as he came through the passage? That thing that gleamed."

"His watch," said a soldier, examining the body. "And here's a funny thing. It busted when he fell. But it's fast."

The little jeweler was even more surprised when he read about Gebhardt's death. "I can't understand it," he thought. "The man must have been careless. Nothing went wrong at my end."

BY WILLIAM BRODIE

SINKING OF THE LUSITANIA

Ten miles off Old Head of Kinsale on the southern coast of Ireland, the German submarine U-20 was lurking on the clear afternoon of Friday, May 7, 1915. Captain Schwioger, the submarine commander, was peering through his periscope when, a few minutes after two o'clock the bulk of a great ocean liner moved into sight. A moment later and from the deck of the Lusitania a watcher shouted, "Torpedo coming — starboard side!"

There had been no warning. Twenty minutes later the Cunard liner had vanished beneath the waves of the Irish Channel. With her went down 1154 lives, including 144 Americans. Among the drowned were 35 infants. The submarine commander wrote in his log:

"Right ahead appeared four funnels and then two masts of a steamer. Clean bow shot from 700 meter range. Shot hits starboard side right behind the bridge. An unusually heavy detonation follows . . . Life-boats being cleared and lowered to water. Many boats crowded, come down bow first or stern first in the water and immediately fill and sink. The ship blows off. In the front appears the name Lusitania in gold letters."

Such was the sad end of one of the finest ocean liners of that time. The Lusitania, launched in 1906, was 785 feet long, 88 feet wide, with a gross tonnage of 40,000. During the early months of World War I she had kept up her regular voyages between Europe and America under British registry. In February of 1915 Germany proclaimed a submarine blockade of England. Our government protested this action and informed Germany that she would be held to a "strict accountability" in case American vessels were attacked or American lives lost.

The Lusitania was scheduled to sail from New York on May 1. On that day the following notice appeared in many American morning newspapers. It was placed next to the Cunard Line's advertisement and it read as follows:

"Notice! Travelers intending to embark on the Atlantic cruise are reminded that a state of war exists between Germany and her allies and Great Britain and her allies; that the zone of war includes the waters adjacent to the British Isles; that, in accordance with formal notice given by the Imperial German government, vessels flying the flag of Great Britain, or of any of her allies, are liable to destruction in those waters, and that travelers sailing in the war zone on ships of Great Britain or her allies do so at their own risk. Imperial Germany Embassy, Washington, D. C."

Fair warning or not, those who were willing to risk the accepted hazards of traveling to a war-torn continent were not impressed by this newspaper notice, assuming they read it. The Lusitania sailed on scheduled time. On board were 1250 passengers, of whom 188 were Americans.

There was tense feeling about the sailing of this big vessel. It was rumored that she carried war supplies. But according to the report of Dudley F. Malone, Collector of the Port of New York, the Lusitania carried no troops, guns, or high explosives. There were 5400 cases of small arms cartridges on board, carried by permission of the U. S. Dept. of Commerce. These were not classified as explosives.

And so the Lusitania sailed. She was flying no flag on her sixth day out, nearing the end of her voyage, and steaming along at 22 knots through the Irish Channel, when the torpedo struck her midships.

Americans who read about the tragedy the next day in excited newspaper "extras" were shocked and furious with a sense of outrage. The sinking of the Lusitania hardened American public opinion against Germany with whom we were to be at war two years later.
