Stray Vacationer Found In South Amboy

HALEDON — Mr. and Mrs. James K. Grayson, 90 Cliff Street, returned home last week end from their vacation at the shore with their children, Jim, Johnny and Lynn, but without their pet black and white dog. Seems they had a blowout on the Parkway, and afterwards decided to stop at a Howard Johnson restaurant to eat and rest up a bit from the ordeal.

When it came time to leave it was discovered that their pet had gotten out of the car and wandered off. After a prolonged search, it was decided to be a hopeless case, but they notified the employees of the restaurant, just in case the dog should return.

Happy ending! Bright and early Monday morning the Grayson's received word from the restaurant that a slightly bedraggled dog, fitting the description they left, had turned up.

Fair Lawn Residents Oppose Street Plan

FAIR LAWN — A petition opposing the proposed designation of Prospect Avenue as a through street is expected to be presented by residents at the August 12 council meeting.

The petition, being circulated at present, opposes the change on grounds the area is heavily populated and children must use Prospect Avenue to reach the Edison School.

"DOTTO" HOSTESS — Carol Christensen is the lovely miss who hands questions to emcee Jack Narz on the NBC-TV Network's "Dotto" show each Tuesday night.

Walter Porter, Jr., (center) County Commander-elect is being congratulated by Hawthorne Mayor Louis Bay as he prepares to head the parade which was held at the culmination of the 36th Annual Convention of the Passaic County American Legion. Oscar Auslander (left), past commander, Seagram Post 1283, New York, followed in the congratulations. Commander-elect Porter of Paterson is a purple heart veteran. He will succeed Douglas Beckwith, of Little Falls. The automobile in the picture is one of the four automobiles donated by the Seagram Post to be awarded to lucky legionnaires at the national convention to be held in Chicago August 31.

Jack Narz is the host of the popular CBS Television Network daytime quiz program, "Dotto," which turns dots into pictures and then pictures into dollars every Monday thru Friday.

ANNIVERSARY TIME — "The Jack Paar Show" this month begins its second year on the NBC-TV Network, to the applause of the "night people" who watch the late-night merriment five times a week. Here, with Paar (center), are Parisian chanteuse Genevieve, a frequent guest on the show, and pianist-orchestra leader Jose Melis.

Little Falls Township Committee Changes Proposed Oiling Ordinance

LITTLE FALLS — The introduction of an ordinance at the township committee this week to provide for the oiling or surfacing of commercial driveways, touched off a wave of discussion which resulted in the dropping of the ordinance and the reintroduction of a new one for first reading.

The original ordinance, aimed at halting the dirt-carting operations of D. Stomato & Co., contained provisions which would have jeopardized the operations of the Public Service, Consolidated Sand & Stone Co., and other quarries in the area.

The confusion began at the reading of the original ordinance which stated that all temporary private area-ways and driveways had to be oiled every 48 hours, and similar driveways of a more permanent nature had to be surfaced with a more permanent substance. Principal objection came from the Consolidated Sand & Stone Co. represented by attorney Howard Stern. Stern said the quarry had been in operation for 80 years. He pointed out that it would be virtually impossible for his client to abide by the provisions of the ordinance. He indicated that if the ordinance was passed his client would attack it in the courts immediately.

Russell Sigler, owner of several trucks also objected on the grounds that the words "temporary" and "permanent" were confusing and sought to have a time limit to describe "temporary".

Borough Attorney Mitchell Donato said that the altering of the ordinance would lose its effect and the intent of its purpose. Committeeman John Fritts read a request from the Public Service asking that it be permitted to use three-inch cracked stone in its work area.

Sigler said that if an exception was made of the Public Service the same exception could apply to others in the area.

The matter was finally resolved by the dropping of the ordinance and the reintroduction of one eliminating any reference to "temporary" and "permanent." The ordinance will be readvertised.

Auditions To Be Held For Valley Opera Company

The newly organized Valley Opera Company announces that it is looking for trained voices to fill a limited number of openings in their chorus, for the fall opera production.

Applicants will be asked to sight read and sing an aria or concert song. Auditions will be held on Monday, August 11 and Tuesday, August 12, at 8 p.m. at 119 Richmond Avenue, Ridge-wood.

New Ambulance To Be Dedicated September 20

HALEDON — The new Miller Cadillac Ambulance recently purchased by the Haledon Emergency Ambulance Association will be dedicated at the 25th anniversary ceremonies to be held September 20. The dedication will take place at the conclusion of the parade at the Roe Street Recreation field in Haledon.

The ambulance is presently being housed in the municipal garage in North Haledon until it is completely equipped and dedicated. It will be used only in extreme emergencies until then. After the dedication, when the ambulance is officially put into service, it will be housed at headquarters on Morrissee Avenue.

Two trophies have already been received by the association to be awarded on the anniversary. A beautiful gold cup on a mahogany base has been donated by Governor Meyner and another trophy donated by the Paterson

Paterson Bank Promotes Frank P. Hastings

Frank P. Hastings will be promoted from assistant cashier to assistant vice president of First National Bank and Trust Company of Paterson effective August 13. This announcement has been made by F. Raymond Peterson, chairman of the Board of the bank, as a result of action of the Board of Directors.

Hastings was born in Hawthorne and has been in banking for thirty-five years. Starting as a bookkeeper, his work has carried him through many of the bank departments and his responsibilities now include supervision of the first floor of the Market Street Office of the bank.

Hastings graduated from Drake's Business College, Paterson, and took many special courses at New York University School of Commerce and the American Institute of Banking. He is attending the New Jersey Bankers Public Relations School in Princeton.

Evening News. As the trophies come in they will be put on display in the Prospect Park and Haledon banks.

Congressman Gordon Canfield has notified the corps that he plans to attend the parade and ceremonies on September 20

Rep. Canfield Announces Coast Guard Exams

The annual competitive examinations for appointment to cadet-ships in the United States Coast Guard Academy will be held next February 24 and 25, Rep. Gordon Canfield announced today.

Candidates for appointment in 1959 must be high school graduates or high school seniors. They must have reached their seventeenth but not their 22nd birthday by July 1, 1959.

Students interested in participating in the competitive examination are urged to write to Hon. Gordon Canfield, M.C., Room 326 Old House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Full information and the Academy brochure, "Take a Look at Your Future", will be sent to boys who apply.

KOOREMAN'S WELCOME SON

HALEDON — Mr. and Mrs. John Kooreman welcomed their third child, a boy, Scott Douglas at Valley Hospital on Sunday. They have a daughter Kathleen and a son, Kenneth, 5. The family lives at 107 Barbour St. Mr. Kooreman is employee New Jersey Bell Telephone and is a member of the Haledon Board of Education.

Fran Molendyke's

Tri-Borough Notebook

The unlighted car veered toward the police car, on the dimly lit street. As the policeman behind the wheel yanked the car out of the way, the other car's driver belatedly put on his lights, and sped off, picking up speed. The police car turned quickly, and followed the badly swaying car and forced it to the side of the road. After interrogation and investigation the policeman saw that the elderly driver was ill; not drunk as they had supposed. A volunteer marshal who had been riding in the police car drove the sick man home in his car and made sure some one was there to care for him. The police car followed and picked up the marshal and continued on its nightly rounds.

Sound like the start of a fictional story? Well, it isn't. It happened in this vicinity just the other night.

Something of the kind could happen any night in any of the small towns or boroughs around us, and usually does. Being curious as to just what does make up an evening's work in a patrol car, I got permission from the police commissioner and rode in the police car for a few hours.

There isn't a big crime wave going on, in fact most of the night was relatively quiet, but it was an interesting evening and an informative one.

For instance, I hadn't realized that a local police car is on the road the biggest part of every twenty-four hours. In fact, the Haledon police car has only been in service for eight months and already has forty thousand miles on it.

It's necessary for the car to keep moving to check known trouble spots, to check on each neighborhood. After awhile a cop gets to know which cars belong to which houses and probably knows most of the owners. If he sees someone standing near or hanging around a car that is known to belong to someone else, he can stop and check and possibly avert damage or theft.

The other evening we just missed seeing a convertible with four young "gentlemen" in it, who for "fun" were heaving rocks out of their vehicle and had just broken a window in a parked car. This was about one o'clock in the morning. A pedestrian called for attention to it and we gave chase with Prospect Park and Paterson helping, but they had gotten too far ahead.

The biggest part of the time was given over to radio calls from and to various areas to check speeders; kids with mufflers racing along quiet residential streets and just generally spoiling a nice summer evening. Luckily no children or other cars were involved in any accidents in the short period I was tagging along, but what keeps more accidents from happening must just be sheer luck.

Regular sweeps are made past schools, in playgrounds, (where about 9:30 we found two girls under 14, and four boys about the same age, just standing around, so we chased them home) in back of factories, stores and other buildings where dark corners might hide a would-be thief.

As we traveled along a note was made of a street light out, and later in the evening we stopped a "trouble shooter's truck" to notify him of the repairs to be made.

Escorts were made from stores to banks, owners of illegally parked cars were warned, and rechecked later, and once in one of the more countrified areas we waited respectfully while a skunk made his way across the road. We didn't hurry him; we didn't want him to get mad.

A car parked on Gaede's hill with smoke coming from under the hood, got some attention from our courteous patrolman, too. After stopping the immediate danger, the driver and his passengers got back in and returned home for a more thorough overhaul job.

With usually only one man on a night patrol, if any serious investigation is needed the car calls in that it is out of service, and the other nearby towns cover the area. Of course, they are spread pretty thin, but at least they are aware that the regular coverage cannot be given.

If a policeman has to make an investigation that takes him out of town, that investigation is made on his own time, with his own car, and at his own expense. They couldn't take the car out of service for such a long period of time.

I was impressed by the courtesy and genuine feeling of responsibility to their community that these men feel. It isn't "just a job". They worry more about the teenagers that gather at dark corners, or that whiz through each town, than the kids do themselves. When an arrest is made, there must be charges made and records kept at the police station. But no real interrogation can be made except in the little public room, or in the big courtroom, as no other place is available. If someone becomes ill, they must be sent to a hospital or wait until a member of their family can be reached to come get them for there is no place for them to stay. They cannot be placed in a jail cell unless they have actually committed a crime.

Most of the patrolmen in the vicinity would like to see a speed timer installed. So many complaints are raised regarding streets that are used as "raceways" and "dragstrips", but without the proper equipment it is extremely difficult to pin down any charges unless the police car happens to be in the right place, at the right time to actually catch and pass a speeder.

We covered every street no matter how big or small in the borough. No set pattern is laid down, as certain areas are always fairly quiet and too much time could be wasted in continually going over the same ground, while leaving potential trouble spots unchecked, for too great a period of time.

The cooperation between the three boroughs and the Paterson and Hawthorne police is complete. The radio crackles with reports of speeders headed in a certain direction, or descriptions of stolen cars or missing persons. Residents who go away for vacation can notify police and a regular check of their property and homes is made.

In cases of fire or emergencies of any kind the police are always ready to be of assistance. A recommendation for the purchase of a Scott Air Pack has been made.

Many times at a fire the police arrive before or with the fire companies and could and do help. Being nearly overcome with smoke, should not be a part of their job. They feel they should have proper equipment to do a proper job.

Whenever a marshal is selected by the mayor and council, he must invest a goodly sum in his uniform, gun, holster, hats and any other equipment they feel necessary. There is no guarantee that this money will ever be made up in the course of their time as marshal, but most of them just love the work and are willing to make the investment in order to be of service. In order to learn to do their job well they travel as often as they can with the regular policeman on duty in the car to learn the ropes.

Their company makes a night easier, as the car never has to go out of service except at supper time. If the policeman on duty eats at home he has portable receiver he takes with him into the house so he can keep track of the calls. Many a meal has grown cold when a call comes in and he goes off on a run to his job. If they eat at a diner, the car is called out of service and the other cars cover for the short period involved.

Most policemen in our community and our neighboring communities don't like to make trouble for anyone, in fact they go out of their way to prevent trouble from happening if warnings and reminders are enough. We chased several car loads of teenagers from one corner, came back about fifteen minutes later and they're all back again. Of course, we realize that there isn't too much for the young people to do for fun, but is it the sole responsibility of the police force to see that they're kept out of trouble?

As I say, this was a comparatively quiet night, that I traveled with your policemen. Downtown in Paterson a man had his head split open with an ax; several calls of family arguments, and suspicious characters loitering about and of course, the inevitable speeders came over the radio. We are a family group of communities and luckily we have a clean reputation. After seeing all three boroughs' policemen in action I'm sure a lot of the credit goes to them.

By cooperating with the police and paying attention to our laws which were enacted to protect us, I'm sure we'll keep this reputation.

We can all sleep better nights, just knowing they're on their appointed rounds.

Opportunities Unlimited:

She Found Happiness in a Job That Had to Do With Children

By ANNE HEYWOOD

"I KNOW that you say that every woman who gets a job should specialize in doing the thing she loves to do. But, in my case, it's absolutely impossible."

Mrs. E. M. fidgeted with her handbag and went on nervously: "I can't go into details about it, but I just want you to know that I want a part-time job in decorating, that's all."

She was a young woman in her middle twenties, with a warmth and sweetness about her that contrasted oddly with her announced desire to be reticent. I noticed that, as she came up to my desk, she had taken a quick look at my little boy's picture, and swiftly turned in the other direction

Had Rehearsed the Act

I let Mrs. E. M. go on about decorating for a little while, since she had obviously rehearsed the act rather carefully. I suspected she wasn't really interested in it, but it loosened her up to discuss it. She had had no business experience, and her husband was a young professional man struggling to get a foothold. They lived with his parents, and there wasn't enough for Mrs. E. M. to do. That's why she wanted to get a part-time job. "Plus, of course," she admitted hastily, "the fact that we could use the money." "I know," I agreed, "most young couples want a nest egg for starting a family."

That did it. Mrs. E. M. started to weep, and told me they could never have children. Both she and her husband adored children. "At first," she said, "we thought of adopting some. But it isn't possible because we don't have our own home, and it will be quite a few years before we can afford one, since my husband is still getting established and is doing expensive studying."

Mrs. E. M. was vehement about not wanting to work with children. "It would only break my heart," she declared, "and I might as well save myself that." I pointed out that, probably within the next ten years, they would be in a position to adopt children and there was no sense of going in for a decade of unnecessary despair. Working with children might be tantalizing in the beginning, but rewarding as she went along.

Reluctantly, Mrs. E. M. agreed. But then she came out with her final excuse "I have no training. How could I possibly get a job working with children?"

Mrs. E. M. got a part-time sales job in the children's section of a local department store. Although it was difficult in the beginning, her love of children made a tremendous hit both with the kids and their mothers. It wasn't long before the management asked her to come in full time, and now she is assistant buyer. She is happy; she is making money; and soon she and her husband will be able to adopt a child of their own.

When faced with tragedy, we can do one of two things. We can go in for a lifetime career of despair, or we can put that tragedy to work to make our lives happier and more profitable.

United States and Canada Strive For Mutual Good

Canada has been much in the news of late, and not only because of the state visit of Princess Margaret. Canadian-American friendship is a great tradition, with 3,000 miles of totally undefended border lying between the two nations. Yet troubles, some deep and difficult, have been arising between these old friends. And they have been arising at a time when their need for each other is greater than it has ever been.

Canada lies between the old 48 states and the new 49th state, Alaska. The Distant Early Warning System (DEW Line) is in Canada, and was a joint U. S. - Canadian achievement. And Canada, like Alaska, is, so to speak, a gold mine of unexploited raw materials of many kinds.

One of the difficulties arising between the U. S. and Canada is the fact that more than 12 billion American dollars are invested there — more than half of it in industry and resources. As a consequence, Americans dominate many basic Canadian industries through ownership. This ownership, amounts to 51 per cent in chemicals, 68 per cent in oil, 45 per cent in pulp and paper and an overwhelming 95 per cent in automobiles. Canada could never have been developed without that investment — yet, as Canada's Prime Minister has asked, "how can a country remain independent when so much of its wealth is owned by people outside its borders."

Both countries have a tremendous stake in trade with each other. Canada, last year, bought some $4 billion worth of U. S.-produced goods and we bought about $2.9 billion worth of hers. But the trade situation has produced problems too. Canada is concerned about the fact that she sells less than she buys and has a trade deficit. She is opposed to certain of our tariff and quota policies, affecting such products as aluminum and oil. She is a major producer and exporter of wheat and objects strongly to the U. S. policy of disposing of surplus wheat at low prices abroad.

These problems, naturally enough, are not easily solved. The President defended our policies when he was in Canada, saying, in effect, that they would work to the long-run benefit of both countries. At the same time, he took steps to iron out certain frictions. Most important of these was he agreed to set up a Joint Cabinet Committee on Defense, including our Secretaries of State, Defense and Treasury and their Canadian opposite numbers.

One thing is certainly true and notable. The difficulties between the U. S. and Canada are dealt with in an atmosphere of respect, friendship and confidence in the agreements that are made. That is just about unique in this disordered world.

Watched the Senate crime hearings on television. Watched the UN debates with Russia ruining all the hopes of the free world of a quick and easy peaceful solution of the Middle East crises. Read about crime on the increase during the hot summer months. Watched movies showing sadistic teenagers taunting and hurting adults. Read of murders and brutal happenings all over the world

Then I noticed a small article noting the one hundredth anniversary of the Darwinian theory. You remember Charles Darwin, the great naturalist, who strove to prove that man was descended from apes.

Also studied a little about the habits of apes and after checking have decided I'd like (if I knew how) to get Mr Darwin back here for a few days. Then I'd like to ask him he thinks we're coming or going. You know coming, from ape-like animalistic creatures, or have we done the best we could, and now we're returning to the old ways.

Remember when an ape man decided he'd like a wife, he just konked her on the noggin and dragged her off to his cave. Don't you see a little resemblance in some of the methods being used by small groups of hoodlums, just knocking over an innocent traveler to get a little loot. Some wives and husbands have been written about as having settled their problems quickly if not legally, by using strong arm methods.

It's interesting to think about on a hot summer night, with a glass of iced tea in my hand while I read the newspapers.

Revolutionary Motion Picture Service Introduced For Family and Club Use

How would you like to see Tyrone Power, Marlon Brando, Kirk Douglas, Kim Novak, Glenn Ford, Viveca Lindfors, Joan Tetzl or Coleen Gray right in your playroom, living room or club room?

Well, it's a possibility to see these film greats in some of their latest and greatest film roles, right in your own home, or in your club's rooms or your organization's meetings.

A unique new film service has just started called Vistarama. (You'll see the advertisement on this page.)

If you're planning a party and would like to do something different, or if your club would like to have a really interesting evening's entertainment, or would like to raise a little money, look up Vistarama.

a phone call to choose the type of film, or perhaps you have a special one in mind. Maybe it's one you've wanted to see, but missed. Maybe it's one you've seen but like to see again with your family and friends.

Arrange a time and date, pick your picture and your evening's fun is about to begin.

The operator will bring his 16 mm. sound movie equipment with a six foot screen to your home and will present a full length, Hollywood film, with the biggest and best stars. Films like Caine Mutiny, Long Gray Line, My Sister Eileen, The Wild One, On the Waterfront, Solid Gold Cadillac, Flight to Mars, Flying Missile, Hell Below Zero, Sabre Jet.

Along with this film you get a 12 minute sports film or cartoon comedy for the children. In case you'd like a really different children's party a whole hour or two hours of cartoon comedies can be made up to suit you.

But this is just half of the story. How would you like to BE in pictures. On your wedding day, at your engagement, parties and showers, or when you bring the baby from the hospital or on a birthday or anniversary, graduation or the day you open your own business or go into your own new home. These moments will be professionally recorded with you in the pictures with your family and friends by Vistarama!

At any affair where the joyful hours of that day can be re-lived by the touch of a button, the dimming of the lights and presto, Vistarama brings it all back.

Remember, for motion pictures in your home, or motion pictures of you and your home, taken and shown by professional projectionists, with the latest equipment, and filmed records of your happiest hours at your convenience, just call Vistarama.

Anthony Andolina Host To Lions Club

HALEDON — An executive meeting of the Haledon Lions Club was held Tuesday evening at the summer home of Anthony Andolina, owner of the Family Shoe Store, at Greenwood Lake. On Thursday evening, the regular meeting of the Lions was held jointly with the Hawthorne Lions at Karl's Restaurant.

The Lions, who usually meet on the second and fourth Tuesdays at the New Cedar Cliff Hotel, met with the Hawthorne group as the Cedar Cliff was closed for the summer vacation.

THROWING A PARTY — Rome — Getting into the swim of things, 18-year-old Therese Carolus tries hard not to be a wet blanket at a party. She is getting tossed into the swimming pool at what started out to be a swank teenage party. Therese, whose father is a noted professor at the French Institute in Rome, doesn't mind too much that the drink's on her — she's already been thrown in once before.

FAWN FORLORN — Bregenz, Austria — Recuperating after an operation for severe leg injuries, "Hansi" the fawn is comforted by next-bed neighbor Ingeborg Spiegel, one-year-old, in the Bregenz, Austria, Children's Hospital. The tiny fawn has its own hospital bed and is a favorite of all the other little patients.

Presenting

FOR YOU — Hollywood Movies shown in your home. Film, 16 mm, Sound Equipment, plus Sport, Short or Comedy. Enjoyable, entertaining for homes, clubs or church groups.

OF YOU — Films taken at your Shower, Engagement Party, Wedding or Anniversary.

Post Cover Picture Not For New Jersey

TRENTON — A leading national magazine, famous for its true to life covers, has committed a full sized boner in color, as far as the State of New Jersey is concerned. On the July 26 cover of the Saturday Evening Post, a boat towing an eye-stopping blonde on water skis, sets anchored craft rocking in their wake, fishermen gaping and bait tins flying.

In New Jersey, that simply isn't allowed.

"We have no rules against attractive blondes — or brunettes either — skiing on New Jersey waterways," Joseph E. McLean, Commissioner of the New Jersey Department of Conservation and Economic Development points out to Post Editor Ben Hibbs. "For the sake of safety thought," he continues, "our State insists that there should be a second individual with the boat operator."

"You may well imagine the greater havoc which would result," he adds, "if that shapely skier ran afoul of an anchor rope or fishing line. The operator of the boat, threading his way among the bobbing craft, would have a difficult choice in stopping his boat where it might endanger others or leaving the girl behind to be rescued by one of the fishing boats."

Mental Health Survey Made In 14 Counties

A survey of how each county in New Jersey determines who should pay for the hospitalized mental patient will be made by the County Affiliates of the New Jersey Association for Mental Health.

The affiliates are in the following counties: Atlantic, Bergen, Burlington, Essex, Gloucester, Hudson, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Morris, Ocean, Passaic, Somerset and Union.

Mrs. Walter Reare, Jr., of Red Bank, Public Mental Health Services chairman, explained that the survey will help her committee to formulate recommendations for the New Jersey State Commission on Mental Health.

She said that the Association has been asked to present its findings and recommendations October 1 on the practices and procedures of determining financial responsibility and of making collections for treatment of the hospitalized mentally ill.

"New Jersey waterways are among the safest in America," Commissioner McLean concluded. "We hope to keep them that way so that fishermen as well as water sports enthusiasts may have the greatest possible pleasure in this favorite vacation land."

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime

A WEBSTER CLASSIC

A proud 16-year-old turned into the family driveway at the wheel of the family car. His father sat beside him. Several younger brothers converged on the scene.

"I passed my driving test," shouted the happy driver. "You guy-can all move up one bike."

Six prominent Chicago men were named as pallbearers in the will of a man who died penniless and owing them considerable sums. "They have been wonderful creditors," the will said, "and I would like to have them carry me to the end."

Lovelorn advice to a young woman in a Wisconsin paper: "The story that nice men are hard to find is completely untrue. Every city has many of them. The only reason you are single is because you haven't exposed yourself in the right places."

"I thought you were going to your lodge meeting?"

"It was postponed. The wife of the Grand Exalted Invincible Supreme Potentate wouldn't let him out to-"

Governor Meyner Invited To Annual Miniature Golf Tournament In Asbury

TRENTON — Robert B. Meyner, Governor of New Jersey, has been invited to send the first ball down the greens at the tee-off of the First Annual International Miniature Golf Tournament which is to be held in Asbury Park.

Joseph McLean, Commissioner of the New Jersey State Department of Conservation and Economic Development, announced the Miniature Golf Tournament will be staged September 6 and 7, and is sponsored by the City of Asbury Park. He added that qualifying play is now underway at more than 40 miniature courses throughout the United States and Canada.

It is estimated that some 60,000 contestants are competing in elimination matches for a total of 40 champions to be entered in the two-day "World Series" of miniature golf.

The popularity of miniature golf is evidenced by the fact that in the last five years, the number of miniature courses in the United States has tripled. In Asbury Park alone, five courses are operating successfully within a five block area on the beach-front.

The game is increasing greatly in popularity, attracting millions of devotees, of all ages, who play the game regularly. Meanwhile some major industrial firms are adding the game to their employee recreation activities and programs.

Information on how to qualify for the first annual international miniature golf tournament may be obtained from the following New Jersey courses: Ufans Boardwalk Miniature Golf, Atlantic City; Hunt's Skyline Boardwalk miniature Golf, Wildwood; Golfland, Asbury Park; Fourth Avenue Boardwalk Golf, Asbury Park; Applegate's Boardwalk Golf, Asbury Park; Bob's Golf Range, Livingston Avenue, New Brunswick; Golfland Promenade, Seaside Park and Bowcraft Playland, Scotch Plains, N. J.

In the Groove

By SETH BABITS

It took Matt 2 minutes to fall in love — but Jive rears its rhythmic head in his charming short story

Matt Barry's browned hands showed white spots as they pressed against the train window. He felt the reverberating shock of locking brakes and looked out upon a sea of faces. For the second time in his twenty-odd years he was back in New York. And somewhere, in this fableland, lay Long Island, Richmond Avenue . . . where a girl with green eyes and a warm smile lived.

A girl named Rose Haven, whom he'd seen only two minutes and dreamed of for ten months.

Matt pushed his way through the crowd and reached the stairs. He felt pressure of an arm against his shoulder.

"Hey, Matt, whatsa rush?" demanded a ruddy, aggressive face from which two blackberry eyes glistened.

"Have to make a phone call," Matt mumbled.

"Folla me," Ted Hunter linked his arm around Matt's elbow and jostled him forward. "Maybe she's got a sister?" Ted grinned.

"Okay by me. A soldier oughta meet home folks. Here's a telephone booth."

Matt called information. He tried his coin again and a voice, sweet, with a depth of maturity answered.

"I'm Rose's mother," he heard. "Yes . . . she'll be home soon. Come right over."

Ted crowed. "She gave us the okay?"

"Not us. Me. Say, Ted," Matt pointed out. "New York's a big town. Lots of things you ought to do."

"Are you kiddin'? You think I'm gonna wear myself out the first day. C'mon."

They entered the subway.

Matt sat back and thought of Rose. He'd been at the USO writing letters. She had mailed them for him. Then he had had to run for the train. But through the night he remembered her shining eyes and sweet mouth. Then she sent him the cookies. And after that they corresponded . . .

"Say, Matt," Ted shattered his reverie. "Here, take part of my paper."

Matt scanned pages. A modest notice at the bottom of a sheet caught his eye. Doctor Kingsley, the Wisconsin naturalist, would speak on Burbank tonight. In Yancey, Matt had attended many of the Doctor's lectures on general science. He would like to hear him again.

Above the rumble of the speeding train, Ted screeched. "The Palace tonight — two bands. Buddy Benson. Wow!! . . ."

The train roared out of dimness and into already darkening skies. Matt reached into his breast pocket and took out a well thumbed note.

They hurried up a wide street phalanxed by low buildings.

"This is it," Ted sang out. He rapped twice on the outside door.

Deep in the hall Matt could see an oblong of light. A girl, still and slender, watched them advance.

Upon Matt's ears was borne the syncopation of a rhythm band. The music came from a lighted doorway.

Then it happened; the dizzying sensation he'd known in their first meeting. The feeling was so intense . . . he trembled.

She was even more beautiful than he remembered. Her hair, of some delicate, wind-blown goldness, cascaded down upon even shoulders. Above her pert nose shone emerald eyes framed in the most amazingly long lashes. Her softly turned arms were pink and bare against a frock of light green hue. Matt was beside her. His hands, like two carressing leaves, reached out and enfolded hers.

"How have you been, Matt?"

He laughed happily. "It's good to see you," he managed. "This is Ted Hunter—he's in my company."

"How very nice. Won't you come in?"

A cornet solo soared out of the radio.

Ted raved. "That's Buddy Benson . . . boy-ohboyohboy!" and Matt felt his delight dissipate.

She smiled and looked up. "My mother will be out in a moment," she said. "I was just going to have tea. Won't you join me?"

"That's for me, Rosie," Ted chuckled. The familiar note irritated Matt.

Ted leaned toward the girl. "I got Buddy Benson's autograph," he announced. "Used to know him back home. Did you ever hear him give out with 'Stardust'?"

"We have the record—"

"I used to have 'em all. How'd you like to see him tonight? At the Palace?"

Matt's heart sank. He felt uneasy and stupid. The girl was interesting herself in Ted, not him. She was probably a jitterbug like Ted. Matt liked to dance, too, but on a jive floor he was as much at home as a deep sea fish in a mountain stream. He shifted awkwardly in his seat. The ten-month bubble was bursting dismally.

The door opposite Matt opened. A tall, wholesome woman came into the room.

"You're Matt Barry," she smiled into his eyes. "I spoke to you on the telephone."

"Yes, ma'am," he acknowledged.

"How long are you staying?"

"Two days in New York."

"You should have a good time, see things."

"That's right," Ted bubbled up. "Bud Benson over at the Palace . . . tonight—"

Matt said, "Thanks for those swell cookies. I was popular for a while."

Mrs. Haven laughed. "Rose made them." Her bright blue eyes were fixed upon Matt. "You don't sound like a New York boy," she said.

"I'm from a farm in Yancey—Wisconsin."

"Rose was born on a farm," Mrs. Haven nodded. "We lived on it for a few years."

Matt smiled at the news.

"You ought to see ours," animation quickened Matt's words. "It's small, but up-to-date. And our apple orchard—" his voiced took on depth and pride as he continued.

"Right now the trees are pink-white with apple blossoms. If you see them from a hill it looks like the whole valley is covered with snow . . . and after, when the blossoms bud the white drops to the ground. It's like no other place can be . . . It's that way," he hesitated.

"You're homesick," the mother said.

Matt flushed. "It's been a long time. I just read that one of our local teachers is giving a lecture tonight. Would be swell to go to it. I'd like to see him."

"It should be very interesting. But I thought everyone was going to see Buddy Benson," Mrs. Haven said.

"I'm not," Matt's reply brought a hush to the room. He was painfully aware that all eyes were centered upon him. Ted's voice jarred the silence.

"Aw, who wants to hear an old fogey talk about bugs and flowers. That's kid stuff. I'm taking Rose to the dance. That's the place to go."

"Really, Mr. Hunter," Rose's tone was frigid, yet Matt could feel a deep warmth well up with him. "Aren't you taking too much for granted? I didn't say I was going to the dance."

"I'll tell you what," Mrs. Haven beamed at Ted. "I'll go with you."

"That's fine," Rose shook her lovely head. "Mother's the jitterbug in this family. Besides," her eyes twinkled and Matt's heart thumped, "I'm a farm worker . . . with ambitions."

FIRST ATOMIC BOMB DROPPED

The sun shone brightly over Hiroshima, a city of 350,000 people and an army base on Japan's island of Honshu, on Monday morning, August 6, 1945. Soon after eight o'clock a high-flying B-29 Superfortress droned over the city. People in Hiroshima below did not look up with much dread. It was mass raids by American bombers, rather than single planes, they had learned to fear.

They could not know — no one knew, not even the crew of the B-29, the Enola Gay — what horrible destruction was to be released upon them in a few moments. The plane with its crew of ten headed by Colonel Paul W. Tibbets, made a straight run over target Hiroshima. At 8:15 Major Thomas Ferebee pressed the toggle of the bomb release and a parachute fell from the B-29 with a 400-pound bomb swinging from the chute.

Colonel Tibbets at the control swung the plane away. The eyes of the crew strained through the plexiglass windows. A few seconds — then came a terrible flash of explosive light like lightning stabbing through the bright sunlight. The air seemed to flame. The eyes of the crewmen were stung although they all wore sun glasses.

The blast that came with the flash reached the Enola Gay and rocked it like a chip, although it was several miles away now. "My God!" exclaimed the crewmen. Far below, the city was swallowed in boiling dust, and a mushroom column of smoke spilling into a great, billowy cloud, rose up swiftly to a height of 40,000 feet. The first atomic bomb had been dropped on a city!

For hours a dense cloud of smoke and dust hung over Hiroshima. When it cleared it was seen that in less than a second more than half the city had been churned into rubble, dust and ashes. Later count by a dazed city showed 78,150 of its inhabitants killed, and many thousands more burned, injured and missing. About 14,000 persons simply disappeared without trace. Of those who survived the hellish blast many were turned into twisted, half-crazed humans.

Sixteen hours after the bombing President Truman disclosed to the world the nature of the bomb, which had been the war's best kept secret. "It is an atomic bomb," said the President. "It is a harnessing of the basic power of the universe. The force from which the sun draws its power has been loosed against those who brought war to the Far East."

We have spent two billion dollars on the greatest scientific gamble in history — and won."

It was revealed that this first atomic bomb, weighing 400 pounds, packed more power than 20,000 tons of TNT. It would have required 2,000 B-29s to carry 20,000 tons of TNT.

On August 8, two days after the first bomb fell, a second and improved atomic bomb was dropped on Nagasaki. And a week later the Japanese agreed to surrender.
