HALEDON

Haledon schools will reopen on Thursday, September 4. All former students will report to their last year's classrooms at 9 a.m. on that day. All students from the Absalom Grundy school who are eligible to enter the seventh grade in the Kossuth Street school will report no later than 9:05, September 4, to the auditorium of the Kossuth Street School.

Children who have not as yet been registered for kindergarten or those who have recently moved into Haledon and must be transferred from another school may register any week day from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the office of the Kossuth Street School before September 4.

Once schools are in session no registers will be taken until September 8. Birth certificates and proof of vaccination are requisite documents at registration.

There will be a teachers' meeting on Wednesday, September 3, at 10:30 a.m. at the Kossuth Street School.

New teachers who have been added to the staff include: John Kostisin, who will teach eighth grade; Mrs. Emma Rosazza, a former Haledon resident and former teacher in borough schools, has returned and will teach seventh grade; Mrs. Irene Boeren, will teach third grade; Mrs. Lililan Sterngart, teaching seventh grade; Miss Helen Stefanisko teaching second grade in the Absalom Grundy School; Mr. Herbert Henderson, Industrial Arts teacher and Mrs. Isabelle Pabian, who will be a full time music teacher for both schools.

The special class for trainable mentally retarded children will also start on September 4, at 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The Absalom Grundy School has had all outside windows painted, and just after school recessed in June, 23 broken windows were replaced. During the summer some vandalism has occurred, requiring another replacement of windows. If only the children could be made to realize that damage to school property means money out of their own parents' pockets, through taxes to keep up the schools, maybe then they'd be more careful of school property.

Under a new ruling of the board of education it will become mandatory for all children entering school to be vaccinated and immunized against polio. Of course, as this means a series of shots over several months, children who have not yet been immunized will not be kept from school, but their parents must see that they start on their shots immediately. If the series is not completed by the end of this coming school year, they will not be permitted to return the following year.

New arrivals in town are: twin daughters, Ruth and Deborah, to Mr. and Mrs. James Hannah, 278 Belmont Avenue, on August 9, and a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Bruce, 68 John Ryle Avenue, Friday, August 22, at Paterson General Hospital.

Picnics will be popping all over this weekend, especially if the weather is fair. The Frisian Society "U.T.Y." Inc., will play host to members and friends at "Keatsen" on Labor Day. The outings are well known to the Frieslanders in this area. The outing will begin 1 p.m. at Leonard's Field. In the evening members and friends are invited to Guild Hall for dancing and refreshments. John Sieswerda and Tunis De Young are in charge of the affair.

Also on Labor Day the Haledon Fire Company No. 1 will hold its 66th annual picnic. It seems the fireladdies got going sixteen years before Haledon became an incorporated borough. Fire Company No. 1 has always been famous for its clam chowder and Charles Diamond has been put in charge again this year, so it should live up to its reputation. Other refreshments include corn on the cob, roast beef sandwiches, hot dogs, hamburgers, pizza, clams, and, of course, beer, soda and ice cream. There will also be amplified music and games and a lot of family fun.

PROSPECT PARK

This borough's one elementary school will also open on September 4, with an expected enrollment of about 50 pupils.

Students will report at 8:55 in the morning for the 8:45 classes. The first day will be a regular full class day, with dismissal at 12 noon for a one hour lunch period. Classes will resume at 1 p.m. continued to 3 p.m.

The fourteen teachers on the staff have not been supplemented with new teachers. There are 10 home room teachers, two kindergarten teachers and one manual training and one sewing teacher.

The two kindergarten classes held daily, are only half sessions with one class coming in the morning and one in the afternoon.

All new students will register at the school on Tuesday, September 2, between 9 a.m. and 12 and from 1:30 p.m. to 3 p.m. Registration will also be held on Wednesday just during the afternoon hours. New students must present birth certificates and records of inoculations. Anyone not registering on the above two days, may not register until the following Monday.

Pupils who attended summer school must report to the office with their summer school records on Tuesday or Wednesday preceding the opening day of school.

Principal, Miss Amelia Berdan, will meet with members of the Junior Patrol at 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday, September 3, and will preside at a teachers' meeting at 10:30 a.m.

The Eastern Christian School Association will observe the Fiftieth Anniversary of the building of the North Fourth Street Christian School on Labor Day with a great celebration at Terrace Lake, Route 23, Butler. Chairman of the outing, which will make the 59th annual school outing of the group, is Henry De Jonge of 172 Prescott Avenue.

Officers are as follows: Vice president Bert Hartog, Secretary Garry A. Hoogerhyde and Treasurer Al Nyland.

The general public is invited to the outing. The North Fourth Street Christian School has a student enrollment of 620 and Rhine C. Pettinga is principal.

Other Prospect Park news includes the announcement of the engagement of Nellie Marie Kros, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kros of 315 North Seventh St., to John Ernest Dickenman, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. Dickenman. A fall wedding is planned.

New arrivals in the borough include: a son, Steven, to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hamilton, Jr., 404

North 9th Street, on August 8; a son, Louis, to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Nanganiello, 334 North 8th St., on August 9; a daughter for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sanders, 324 North 9th St., on Saturday, August 23, at Paterson General Hospital.

Building inspector and Mrs. Louis Okma of 79 North 16th St., celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary on Wednesday.

They have five children and 18 grandchildren, and were married on August 27, 1913 by the Rev. F. Keizer in Prospect Park Christian Reformed Church. Both are now members of the Second Christian Reformed Church.

NORTH HALEDON

The Memorial School will open on Thursday, September 4, with about 30 more pupils than last year. Anticipated enrollment is between 750 and 760.

Principal Harold Ritchie announced that four extra classrooms instead of last year's three will be in use. The new "extra" room, plus two others will be located in the First Presbyterian Church across the street on Squaw Brook Road. The other extra classroom will be on school grounds in the library building.

New teachers added to the staff include: Raymond Kreski, who will teach seventh grade; Mrs. Kane, teaching fifth grade; Mrs. Marion Darrow, teaching first grade and Buck Stout, teaching industrial arts. Two teachers are returning after a year's leave of absence for illness. They are, Mrs. Ruth Lord, teaching first grade and Mrs. Lee Taggi, seventh grade.

According to a recent board of education ruling, no child will be permitted to stay in school after October 3, unless properly vaccinated and immunized against diphtheria and polio.

At the Mary Help of Christians elementary school, grades one and two will be eliminated this semester. The move was necessary in order to make more classroom space available to the high school, also conducted by the Salesian Sisters of St. John Bosco at 659-723 Belmont Avenue.

128 girls were enrolled for the grammar school last year, and this will drop to 105 after the dropping of the two grades.

School will open on Monday, September 8. The High School will also open on September 8 for freshmen and on September 10 for the upper classes. The enrollment in the high school has risen from 145 last year to 180 this year. One extra classroom from the grammar school will be used at present.

Opportunities Unlimited:

Do You "Love to Help People"? This Takes Special Qualities

By ANNE HEYWOOD

ONE day a woman came in to see me in connection with a problem about her daughter.

Obviously the type who would not let the daughter speak for herself, she insisted on coming in ahead of the daughter to give me her interpretation of why the child was such a problem. In spite of her mother's bothersome meddling, the girl finally did, with my help, work out her problem and get into the right job.

A Too-Brave Woman

A while later, the mother came in for an appointment. She wanted to get into some kind of a job herself on a part-time basis, now that her children were grown. She was one of those too-brave women with a terrible undercurrent of whining in her voice. She had had a long, difficult road to hoe, and she wanted you to know it. She was wonderful with people, she informed me. They just loved to tell her all their problems. She fixed her steely eye on me, and I could see that if she wanted to hear anyone's tragedy, she would persist and persist until she had dug it out of them.

I steered her away from that, and into a more commercial field—a part-time job in the complaint department of a store. But she made it very clear that she would have been happier in personnel work. Her closing remark on this I will never forget, as it epitomizes the approach of the wrong people to this type of work. She was discussing the fact that right now it had to be a part-time job because her husband required a good deal of her attention. "But some day," she said with a faraway look, "when my husband dies, I would just love to devote my life to helping people."

Anyone in my business hears milder variations of this theme day in, day out: "I just love people" and "I love to help people solve their problems."

If you think your interests and abilities lie in helping people, first have it out with yourself and see if you can honestly credit yourself with the following qualities:

1. Have you suffered some reasonably serious tragedy in your life? (If you haven't, you will lack the compassion and understanding which are the first requisites of helping others.)
2. Have you on the whole handled your own personal problems with success? (The woman above who couldn't get along with her own husband and therefore wished he would die so she could "help others" is a classic case in point.) 3. Have you gained a philosophical reaction to your own problems? (Have you, as a wise man once said, the patience to put up with what cannot be changed, the courage to change what can be changed, and the wisdom to know the one from the other?) 4. Do you really enjoy having people tell you their troubles? (If you do, stay out of the people business!)

A Meddlesome Mother, Who Spoke for Her Daughter.

The Timid Soul

A WEBSTER CLASSIC

Uncle CHARLEY'S "Epi-grins"

Yep, a bigamist is a feller who has taken one to many.

Some men do what their wives tell 'em, others are bachelors.

Sometimes we think that politics is a craft with graft.

Yep, a yawn is an expressed opinion.

Some gals deplore th' trend o' modern bathin' suits, while others have beautiful figgers.

At forty a woman's mind gits broader, says a reformer. Yeah! Doc. and that ain't all.

Most folks who lock horns don't use their heads.

Some folks have good sense, others talk too much.

Many a gal who was swept off her feet ends up with a broom in her hand.

We don't need faster cars as much as we need slower payments.

Folks who ain't got money want to spend it, those who have it want to keep it.

In life if you don't start someplace, you'll never git anyplace.

Folks who love the Lord the most, hate other folks the least.

IN THE LIGHT OF FACT

This Labor Day it might help to take a good look at the Communist propaganda that argues that capitalism ruthlessly exploits workers.

It's interesting to evaluate that in the light of irrefutable facts.

Last year, according to the American Economic Foundation, about $328.4 billion was paid out to the American people, not counting social security and pensions.

Here's how all that money was divided. The lion's share, 75.1 per cent, went to employees of enterprises and organizations. The next biggest share, 12.3 per cent, was earned by people who worked for themselves — farmers, professional men and women, etc. Then 5.7 per cent was paid in interest; 3.7 per cent went to the stockholders whose savings are invested in corporations, and the remainder, 3.2 per cent, went to property owners in the form of rent.

Adding the figures up, we find that 87.4 per cent of all the money distributed amounted to payments for working, as against 12.6 per cent which amounted to payments for the use of savings. And these two categories are not separate entities. To a very great extent, they consist of the same people. About 10 million of us are stock owners. Some 21 million have savings account and 100 million have life insurance policies, and many millions have properties which they rent. These all share in payments made for the use of savings.

If this is capitalist exploitation, the whole world needs massive doses of it.

SEPARATE THE MEN FROM THE BOYS

Maybe this weekend the family is planning a picnic. Maybe the son of the family is going to take the car while the rest of the family has a weiner roast in the back yard. Before he goes, tell him this:

"Young men under the age of 25, as a group, rate as the country's worst drivers." This comes from a survey of every leading insurance company and traffic officials all over this country. Try to make your son see that it is childish to rampage around in a "hot rod", making enough noise to wake the dead. Teach him that a mature attitude in driving is the most important part of safety, plus being a great attribute all along the road of life.

In plain words, teach him that responsibility on the highway "separates the men from the boys"!

The Strength Of A Nation

The Editor Speaks

VINCENT S. PARRILLO

Labor Day certainly comes at the right time of the year as far as a wife and mother of school age children is concerned.

The first Monday in September is always just before school starts and if you think getting the kids ready for school isn't labor, brother you should try it. Take it from the mothers of my acquaintance.

Not only do you have to buy new school clothes because the little darlings are style conscious as well as growing animals, but you must provide lunch boxes, pencil boxes, raincoats, galoshes, etc., for the elementary grades. For kindergarteners the loot will also include a smock or apron and a blanket or pillow for their "resting time."

Then, of course, there are the really fortunate people who have one or two high school students in the family. Especially if they're girls.

I am firmly convinced there is a special committee formed to invent new fads for teen age girls. If it isn't a new style shoe, skirt, jacket, sweater or sox, then it's a new fad for the hair with false pony tails or bangs, or head bands or scarves and the like.

Now teen age boys are much easier to get ready for school. They either have all their hair clipped off, or refuse to part with even an inch of two. They must putter with the front wave and the side burns, etc. Then they can't be waked in the morning, or else they get up with the birds, trying to make up homework, fussing over the shirts and shoes, or just teasing the younger members of the family.

When the clothing problems have simmered down, then there's just breakfast to be gotten at several times; once for when Dad leaves for work, then when the high school crowd catches the bus, and then the younger group who must be taxied out, with baby brother tagging along in the car seat.

No sir, whoever planned Labor Day, picked the exact date correctly. Of course, any celebration is sort of a mixed emotion for Mom. She's beginning to look forward to having a schedule again, but the labor that is involved in getting it started, is hardly worth celebrating over.

Remember this, over this Labor Day weekend and try to make it a nice one for Mom, it's her last holiday for another ten months. Make a picnic for her, you do the work and the cleaning up, or else take her out to eat, that's even better*

FIRE ALARM SHORTED BY LIGHTNING

NORTH HALEDON — A bolt of lightning struck the fire alarm system somewhere along the line at 2:15 o'clock this morning, short circuiting it and causing the fire alarm to wait for 10 minutes. It was finally shut off by Fire Alarm Supt. George Finnley.

SET FOR ACTION — John Payne, the wandering cowboy in "The Restless Gun," counts the seconds until he tangles with the first outlaw of the series' Fall season (which starts on the NBC-TV Network Monday, Sept. 22).

Republican Candidate To Tour County

Representative Robert W. Kean, Republican candidate for the U. S. Senate seat being vacated by Republican Senator H. Alexander Smith, will tour the lower end of Passaic County on Monday, September 22, County Chairman Lloyd B. Marsh announced. It will be one of three days that Representative Kean will spend in the county.

Arrangements for the day's activities and rallies are under the direction of Register of Deeds John C. Summers, said Marsh. He will arrange the candidate's schedule, stops and activities.

In announcing his appointment of Summers, Marsh said that he had selected the popular Register of Deeds because of the latter's familiarity of active campaigning throughout the years and his long experience in the Republican organization.

Summers said that he contemplated an active day for Kean, including house parties, rallies and tours through area industrial plants.

"Congressman Kean has expressed a desire to meet as many voters as possible," said Summers, "and I expect to comply with that desire. I hope to keep him on the move throughout the day, meeting as many voters as time permits."

Summers said that he would

Local Bankers Complete Three Year Courses

Joseph M. Daly and John H. Kother, assistant cashiers of the First National Bank and Trust Company of Paterson, are two of forty-six bank officers who have completed the three-year course of specialized instruction at the School of Consumer Banking.

Sponsored by the Consumers Bankers Association, with headquarters in Washington, D. C., in cooperation with the University of Virginia in Charlottesville, the school just finished conducting its seventh resident session. One hundred ninety-eight bank officers, department heads and representatives of the banking supervisory agencies, from twenty-nine states, the District of Columbia, Canada, Puerto Rico, and Pakistan were enrolled.

The school's basic objective is to train bankers in the principles and procedures involved in consumer banking and so increase their usefulness to the residents of their communities.

concentrate on the lower end of the county, devoting as little time to travel as possible. He pointed out that Kean would be at the Republican outing Saturday, September 6, at Preakness Pool, Totowa Borough, and that there would be another day available for Kean to tour and visit the up-county communities.

And speaking of drinking, here's one from Texas. An old drunkard from the Panhandle saw so many pink elephants and purple snakes that he hired a hall and put up a sign "25c. to See the Zoo". A couple of customers resenting the fact that they saw nothing but four bare walls, swore out a complaint. The sheriff took the warrant and set out to make the arrest. The old boy hauled his jug out from under his counter, the sheriff took 3 dollars. and paid him $1000 for a half interest in his show.

Joe: "Do you think the doctor really meant it when he said you wouldn't live another week unless you stopped chasing women?"

John: "He sure did. I was chasing his wife."

Al: "Your wife used to be very nervous but now she doesn't show a sign of it. What did you do for her?"

Dick: "Found a new doctor who cured her in a hurry. He just told her nervousness is a sign of old age."

Sizes often are deceiving. Sometime a woman's thumb has a man under it.

Municipal Clerks Filed For Incorporation

The Passaic County Municipal Clerks Association was officially founded recently.

Paterson City Clerk Frank J. Sciro filed incorporation papers at the county clerk's office. In addition to Sciro, charter members and trustees of the organization, which will soon include all of this county's sixteen municipal clerk's are as follows:

Edith M. Marion, Clifton; George F. Eckhardt, Jr., Pequannock; George V. Grillo, Hawthorne; Dan Ramella, Haledon; Alfred A. Reda, West Paterson and John Pruiksmas, Prospect Park.

According to Grillo, the group will elect officers at its first meeting to be held at noon, September 13 at the Cedar Cliff, Haledon. All Passaic County municipal clerks are expected to attend.

Including Passaic County there are now 15 county municipal clerks associations. Grillo said the state organization hopes to bring the other six counties into the fold with a concerted effort beginning with the state convention.

Purposes of the organization, like the state association, are as follows:

To promote the cause of good government.

To cooperate with municipal authorities in administering the provisions of law.

To acquaint the public with the true nature and importance of the many services performed by municipal clerks.

To initiate and perform all such other public services and activities as may best serve the interests of the general public.

The FINAL BREAK...

A Short, Short Story

By IAN S. THOMPSON

They had been walking along Oxford Street, now they stopped, Greg's hand on her arm.

"This is the place," he said. "I thought you might get the sort of thing you liked here."

Helen nodded, but her eyes were blurred as she looked through the plate glass window. The hat had been his idea, not hers.

"What about that black?" He pointed. "It would go with your suit!"

Her lips quivered. One of the little things she loved so much about him was the really genuine interest he had always taken in what she wore. It had made you feel young somehow, cherished, though in your heart you knew you were young no longer.

"Yes. Yes, it would, wouldn't it?" She carefully avoided meeting his eyes, because there was so much in her own that he must never see.

They went into the shop. An assistant appeared, very satin, very peroxide.

Helen described the hat. It was in the window.

She was wishing now that they had never come into the shop. But Greg had been insistent. He wanted to give her something. A parting gift, he called it.

He was smiling now out of blue untroubled eyes. Which amazed her. And yet why should it? Why should it, she asked herself, as she took the hat from the assistant and snugged it down on her blue-grey hair? She had always prided herself on being a modern. And part of modernity was to see these things through bravely, when and if they came.

Her mind slipped back. And she saw herself in the hat shop mirror, not as someone in a black tailored suit, but as a bride. Smiling, radiant, on Greg's arm. At least they had said she had looked that. She had never thought of it, never cared. She had been so blindly, blissfully happy.

Five minutes later they were out again in the sunshine of the street and Greg, after glancing at his watch, suggested tea.

"I know a place—" There was a suppressed excitement in his eyes which she could not fathom. "You'll like it there."

It was a small, very ordinary cafe in one of the side streets off Oxford Street. He ordered for them both, and then he leaned back.

He didn't speak, but his hand came out across the table and gripped hers.

"Please, God, don't let me cry," she prayed. "Not now. Not so long as he's with me."

The tea arrived. He drank one cup quickly, lit himself a cigarette, and then said:

"You're quite certain you want to stay on in that house alone? I mean — well, I feel a bit rotten about the whole thing, and if there's anything I could do—"

There was one thing, but it would have been hysterical weakness to have suggested it. She shook her head. She didn't want him to have any qualms of conscience. It had been wonderful having him for all those years.

"No, really," she said. "I'll be all right."

But he still didn't seem satisfied.

"There's another thing I'd like to mention," he said. "I didn't say anything about it before because I know — well, I know how touchy you are about that sort of thing—" He broke off and then went hurriedly on, his eyes avoiding hers. "It's money, I've arranged with the bank..."

The color flamed up into her cheeks. Not because of any false pride. That was a luxury you couldn't afford if you had nobody. But —

"Oh, Greg, you shouldn't," she stammered. He brushed that aside. Angrily almost.

"Why not? It's something I want to do. And Sandra —" He mentioned the girl's name — "she agrees. We were talking about it last night."

Sandra . . . We . . . How easily, familiarly, he spoke of her, Helen thought with an ache. And yet two months ago they hadn't even met. Two months . . . Was it really only that time since he'd gone up to London on that business trip?

She'd realized, of course, after he came back, that there was something, although he hadn't actually said a word then. Some deep-rooted woman's instinct had warned her that he wasn't all hers any longer, that she was sharing him.

A girl. Young, fragrantly fresh and lovely. The imagined picture had filled her with a sense of panic. He'd changed his job for a better one and gone up to live in London. For a month she hadn't seen him. And she'd never met the girl.

Sandra . . . She was something or other in advertising, he had told her. And very clever. But that didn't matter to Helen. When you had loved somebody with every little bit of you you did not think of cleverness in considering that younger person to whom you were losing him.

Was she really nice? Would she work to keep him happy as you had tried to do?

But Sandra . . . The name had a brittle quality. You couldn't imagine anybody called by it being—Helen's eyes were drawn to a girl who had just walked into the cafe, who was looking hesitantly around — well like that, for instance.

Then the girl turned. She was utterly beautiful, with a shy, sweet loveliness that caught at your throat. Helen stared, quite unconscious that she was staring. And then her eyes widened in swift surprise because Greg had risen and now the girl was hurrying towards their table.

"So you were able to make it, darling!" Dazed, she heard Greg's voice and then he had turned, was smiling down at her. "A little surprise," he said. "This is Sandra. Mother. Tomorrow's happy bride!"

BATTLE OF LONG ISLAND

Hardly two months after the signing of the Declaration of Independence the American Revolution almost came to a sad end. By defeating Washington's army at the battle of Long Island on August 27, 1776 the British had their chance to crush the rebellion and end the struggle right then and there. But they muffed it.

After being forced to leave Boston the previous March the British moved up to Halifax to get reorganized. Then down from Halifax some time later sailed General Sir William Howe with his fine army to New York. In the harbor he was met by his brother, Admiral Lord Howe, with a fleet from England. The forces of Generals Clinton and Cornwallis had also sailed up from the South, where they hadn't done well, to join the big get-together.

General Howe landed his veteran troops unopposed on Staten Island down the bay. Washington, having anticipated the British move to New York, had brought his army down from Boston. By August Howe had 32,000 troops ready for action on Staten Island. To oppose them Washington had only 18,000 men, many of them raw recruits.

Realizing that he was in a tight spot, Washington wanted to withdraw to the open country. But the Continental Congress ordered him to hold New York. To carry out this order, Washington moved most of his army across the East River to Long Island to fortify a series of low hills called Brooklyn Heights, commanding the city.

Generals Israel Putnam and John Sullivan were in command here, replacing General Nathaniel Greene, the original commander, who took sick with asthma. On August 26 Howe had 20,000 men over from Staten Island to assault Brooklyn Heights. Putnam sent out a division under Sullivan, and another under William Alexander (Lord Stirling) to meet the British. The battle was begun that night by three British columns. Two columns attacked in front, while the third, led by Howe himself, and guided by Long Island Tories, made a wide flanking movement through Jamaica and Bedford around the left of the American forces.

On the morning of August 27 Howe fell upon the rear of Sullivan's position. Caught on two sides the Americans were soon overwhelmed, and almost the whole force, including General Sullivan, was captured. Stirling's troops, also caught in the rear, tried to protect the escape. A regiment of veteran Marylanders, wearing bright new uniforms, stood gallantly to halt the rout, and 400 of them fell in this delaying action. Stirling was also captured with many of his men. "My God! What brave men I must lose this day!" cried Washington who saw the disaster.

By noon the Americans had been driven back to their fortified camp with heavy loss. Howe closed in on Brooklyn Heights, but he strangely hesitated and did not press the all-out attack which could have captured the entire American army. The British fleet in the meantime was supposed to seal off escape by sailing up the East River, but a stiff northeast wind sprang up to prevent this movement.

Washington, directing a retreat on which the survival of his army depended, did not sleep for 48 hours and hardly got off his horse. The night of the 29th was foggy and rainy and the wind was a gale. Along the East River every type of boat was pressed into service and for 13 hours the stout Massachusetts fishermen in the Continental ranks rowed and rowed back and forth in the fog and in the teeth of the gale.

By the time the fog had lifted next morning the army that had been defeated on Long Island was safely back in New York with most of its stores, and the British had lost their chance to crush the rebellion and end the war.
