MIXED LINE-UP — At her Kennels, near Petworth (Sussex), Mrs. M. Hazelman breeds dogs of all shapes and sizes, but every one an aristocrat. Several champions have been produced at these kennels, appropriately called The Variety Kennel. Now being brought up there is yet another "breed" a young lamb named "Daisy May" which was one of triplets born on a nearby farm. After being abandoned by its mother, the lamb was given to Mrs. Hazleman and is now quite "at home" with the dogs.

TRI-BOROUGH

The new ambulance recently purchased by the Haledon Emergency Ambulance Association was put into service for the first time last week when an emergency arose while the other ambulance was in service.

That day was a very busy day with the first call coming at 7:20 a.m. Mrs. Potts of 393 Central Avenue, was taken to the Barnert Hospital for X-rays after she had fallen the night before and broken her knee cap. While still at the hospital another call was received for the ambulance to take Mr. Gustave Martin of Van Dyke Avenue, to Barnert Hospital. He had fallen and broken his left leg. The corpsmen applied a splint and removed him to the hospital.

At 2:30 p.m. Mrs. R. Van Dyke of 97 Hopper Street, was transported to the General Hospital. While on that call, an emergency arose in North Haledon necessitating the use of the second ambulance.

Garry Shambura, age 10, of 43 Pettee Avenue, fell out of a tree and suffered a compound fracture of the left arm and fractured left wrist.

The new ambulance was not going to be put into service until the dedication ceremonies at the 25th anniversary celebration to be held on September 20. However, it was decided that if an emergency arose while the old ambulance was in service that the new one would be used.

The celebration plans are now nearly completed. The parade route has been changed slightly to afford better parade facilities for the corps entering from out of town and to permit better traffic flow.

The new parade route is as follows: Formation to start on Brookview Drive, North Haledon, right opposite Fire Co. No. 4, then down High Mountain Rd. and through Church Street, in Haledon, down Belmont Avenue to Zabriskie Street, to Haledon Avenue. Then along Haledon Avenue to North 16th Street, Prospect Park to Fairview Avenue. Down Fairview to Wagaraw Boulevard and down the boulevard to North 13th Street. Through North 13th to the recreation field on Roe Street in Haledon.

Three more squads have advised the committee that they plan to parade. This brings the total to 49 squads. The new ones are the Wm. B. Mawhinney Memorial Ambulance Corps of Hawthorne. Some of the Wyckoff squad will remain at home to cover the combined area in case of an emergency and some will join the Hawthorne squad in the parade. The Little Falls Eagle Rescue Squad have also joined the ranks.

Ten bands will be in the line of march: St. Brendan Cadet Drum & Bugle Corps, St. Mary's Band, Melrose Drum and Bugle Corps, a band sponsored by the Prospect Park Fire Dept, Dunnellen Comedy Band, the Lakeland Goldenaires Cadets, North Haledon Community Band, John A. Dean Post, American Legion Band, and St. Anne's Cadets Drum and Bugle Corps.

Mr. Henry Wester, advisor to the Explorer Scouts has been working extremely hard to have the boys of the Explorer Scouts of Haledon, North Haledon, Hawthorne and Prospect Park in readiness to help out on the day of the parade. They will form an honor escort to the three mayors of the three boroughs and they will also help in forming the line of march in the parade.

Some of the parade rules have been established which include no sirens in the line of march. As the musicians have been kind enough to provide parade music for the marchers as well as for the onlookers all squads will be asked not to sound their sirens during the parade. Also, all local corps who will be participating in the celebration and who might receive a call to return to their community in case of emergency will have to sound their sirens as they leave the parade, and it would be too confusing if more than one siren were going at the same time.

Residents of all three boroughs who would like to show their backing and participation of the work done by the ambulance squads could do so by displaying their flags on Saturday, September 20, or in case of rain the 27th.

Plan to watch the parade and come down to the recreation field on Roe Street for the brief ceremonies honoring the charter members of the association and the dedication of the new ambulance.

Rev. John M. Infanger, Jr., pastor of the Cedar Cliff Methodist Church will preside as master of ceremonies, with Father Stanley Zawistowski of St. Paul's R. C. Church and Rev. Harris E. Baldwin of St. Mary's Memorial Church will also participate in the ceremonies.

Mayor David Brown will give a welcoming address to the more than 2,000 paraders and to the citizens of the boroughs who will attend. All of the mobile equipment will be parked around the field for inspection and trophies will be awarded for first, second and third place in various categories.

A souvenir anniversary booklet with pictures and a history of the corps, with the program of events and the list of squads attending will be on sale that day.

Souvenir glasses will be on sale and everyone buying one will receive free beer, plus sandwiches, soda and ice cream will be on sale for the children.

Plans are now being made to have two rides for the children as well.

This 25th anniversary of the Ambulance Association comes as another highlight in the Golden Anniversary year of the borough of Haledon.

WITHOUT FIRING A SHOT...

We agree with Juan T. Trippe, head of Pan American Airways, in a talk to a graduating class of the Middlebury College Language Schools. And Mr. Trippe is certainly not alone in this view. He is in distinguished company. Comparable warnings, for instance, have lately come from Britain's Field Marshal Montgomery and United States Vice President Nixon.

"Today there faces us . . . a danger greater than communist military aggression — a potent threat to our freedom, to our way of life, to our very survival . . . The new war to which I refer is the new Soviet economic war, launched to win for them the lesser developed and uncommitted people still free and outside the Iron Curtain."

What will happen if the Soviet manages to win these uncommitted nations, and to cut us and our allies off from their vast reserves of strategic and critical raw materials? Mr. Trippe has an answer to that question: ". . . If it succeeds in extending communist rule throughout Africa and Asia, the Kremlin will have assured its victory in the battle for the world . . . The Western world will be forced to surrender without the firing of a shot . . . If freedom loses, it may be a century before it can be regained."

Mr. Trippe then touched on our weakness in the field of linguistics. A mere 4,000 people for instance, are studying Russian in this country, while one million are studying English in the Soviet Union. All the emissaries sent out by Russia are trained linguists in their assigned areas. As he puts it: "It is little wonder they are doing a better job than does the West." It has long been evident that Western education is in need of drastic improvement, and this language problem is simply one more example of that fact.

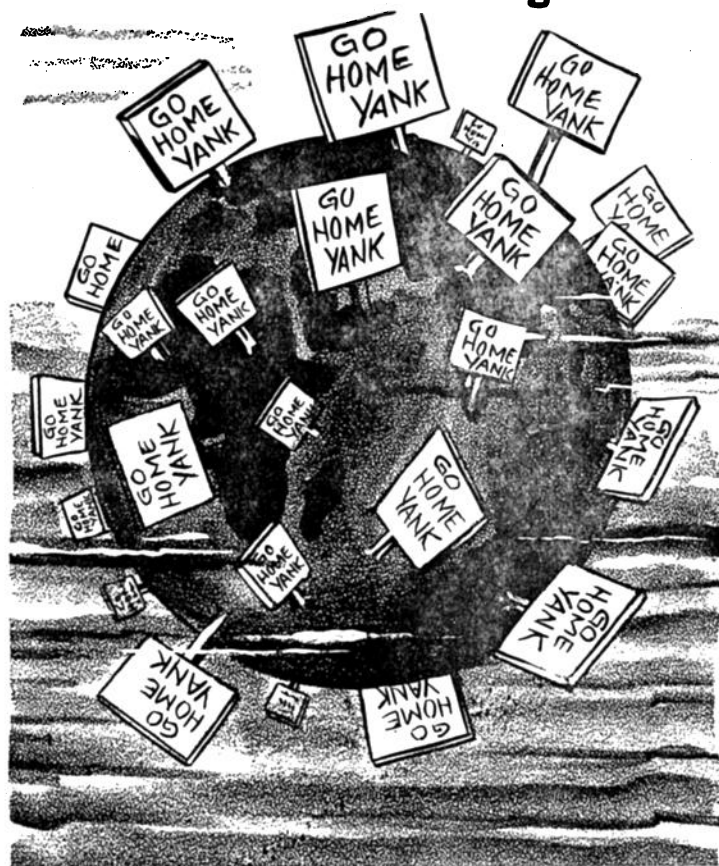

NATIONAL NEWSPAPER WEEK

Our country has something of a mania for "weeks" and "days" celebrating all manner of things and occasions from the sublime to the ridiculous. But some of the observances are far above the common place and deserve the public's interest and attention.

This is certainly the case with National Newspaper Week, October 1-8. Its theme is "Your Newspaper Guards Your Freedoms." And that's more than just a pleasant little slogan. It's a fact. A free press is the most potent weapon against tyranny and persecution than any nation can possess.

Dictators always take over the press as soon as they gain power and pervert it to their own ends. That's only logical to their way of thinking, for dictatorship can't stand the freedom of expression and debate a free press stands solidly for.

The International Sign

The Editor Speaks

VINCENT S. PARRILLO

Now with the children off to their various schools, elementary, secondary, college or business schools, there's one lesson perhaps we parents should teach our children at home, at any age.

That lesson is "not to be afraid to be different."

In elementary school, it's common to hear and see youngsters taunting one who is smaller than the rest, or who is brighter than the rest, or who is slower. Perhaps our child might be one of them.

How many fathers have made mental patients out of their sons who were slightly built (through no fault of theirs) by saying, "When those kids call you 'baby', you smack them one. That'll show him you're no baby!"

How much kinder to say to such a child, "Wait a few years and see who's the biggest then. In the meantime how about you and I going fishing, or playing catch, or making some lawn furniture or a bird house. I'll bet that big kid isn't so clever with his hands."

Who said that the biggest, the handsomest, the glibbest talker is the best?

In High School it's even worse, because there if they don't belong to a gang or a special group, they're just not in the swim. For heaven's sake, don't try to make your scholarly daughter a jive artist, just so she'll be popular. Let her join a library group or chorus or stamp club, with someone else who might be "different."

Don't let your children ever feel that because they're not at the head of their class, or the captain of the team, or the cheerleader of the group, that they don't have their place in the scheme of things.

Let's look at ourselves. Are we all owners of corporations? Are we all leaders? Of course not. The most important people in the world may never make a headline. They're the people who do an honest day's work for an honest day's pay, come home to a loving family and enjoy their lives together.

If you can't give your kids all the advantages you think they should have, at least give them the most important thing. A feeling of being needed in the world. A feeling of being a most important part of the community, your child, whom you love whether he's just like the neighbor's kid or not.

Municipal Heads of Three Boroughs Meet With Regional High School Board

Something unprecedented occurred last week when the municipal leaders of the three towns involved, met with the members of the Board of Education. With this cooperation between the men who are responsible for the government of their municipalities and those charged with providing a new high school for this region, the citizens of the area are assured that their best interests are being guarded.

Most new educational developments are handled solely by the educators and administrators of a given district. But, by inviting the participation of the towns' leaders, the regional board has shown its awareness of their responsibility to the people the municipal heads represent.

The Steering and Finance Committees of the Regional High School Board of Education recently had an orientation meeting with the Mayor of the Boroughs of Haledon, North Haledon and Prospect Park. The many questions in the minds of the citizens of the Boroughs concerning the overall cost of the building, development and curricula were resolved by Joseph Gorab, superintendent of the High School and John Van Gundel, chairman of the Finance Committee. Emil Bonesio vice president of the Board, presided in the absence of Herman Gionti who is presently hospitalized.

Superintendent Gorab stated "This proposed regional high school building will provide the essential facilities for an effective program of secondary education. The criteria for materials and in its construction must of necessity reflect reasonable economy in initial construction as well as low long term maintenance costs. A cheap school building is always the most expensive to maintain over a long period of years. We owe it to the taxpayers who will be investing in this structure to build a sound durable building."

He went on to say, "Our plans include provision for a comprehensive program of education. The tentative program of studies has been reviewed by the Director of Secondary Education of the New Jersey State Department of Education. Consultants from this department will meet with us to review the facilities provided in relation to the curriculum to be offered in order to assure a comprehensive high school program designed to meet the needs of our youth. With this thoroughness of planning and periodic review, our youngsters will be assured of an approved program. Such a program will enable them to gain admission to the colleges of their choice if they desire to go to college or will equip them with skills requisite for successful accomplishment in business and industry if that be their choice. Careful guidance by qualified counselors would direct the energies of our youth toward their goals."

An oral explanation of the entire program with the use of slides as conducted by Mr. Gorab. The colored slides gave an interesting visual idea of a typical auditorium, gymnasium, cafeteria, library, shops, home economics, mechanical drawing, science laboratories, commercial rooms, art, music and general classrooms. The projection of the preliminary site plan and layout of the parking areas, roadways and athletic areas brought forth excellent constructive suggestions by the Mayors which the committees are recommending to the Board and its architect.

Mr. Van Gundel gave a thorough explanation of the estimated cost to the three boroughs with respect to the Capital Outlay Budget. It was pointed out that tuition costs and valuation figures presently in effect were used in conjunction with estimated student enrollment, all of which could tend to reflect more favorably at the time of the school opening planned for September 1960.

Mr. Bonesio also announced that a meeting will be held on September 19 with all of members of the municipal and educational bodies of the three boroughs. He thanked the Mayors for their interest in the program by stating "It is only with the full and complete cooperation between the leaders of our communities and the Regional Board of Education that a project of such importance to the people and our children can become a reality."

As it was necessary for the New Jersey Fish and Game Council to establish the New Jersey waterfowl season within this framework the hunting season for taking Brant, Ducks, Geese and Coot was fixed from November 10 to January 8.

Shooting hours during the season will be from half hour before sunrise to sunset. The daily bag limit is 4 ducks, 2 geese, not including Snow Geese; 10 coots, 6 brant, Wilson Snipe 8. The possession limit for ducks is 8 and for geese 4. The possession limit for coot, Brant and Wilson Snipe is the same as the daily bag limit.

Limitations and exceptions for daily bag and possession limits were established this year by the Fish and Wildlife Service. During the 1958 waterfowl season, the daily bag limit may not include more than 2 Canvasbacks or 2 Redheads or 1 Canvasback and 1 Redhead duck. The possession limit may not include more than 4 Canvasbacks or 4 Redheads or 4 in the aggregate of Canvasbacks or Redheads.

In addition the daily bag limit cannot legally include more than 1 woodduck or 1 hooded Merganser and the possession limit may not include more than 1 woodduck or 1 hooded Merganser. Further limitations applying to other ducks include a daily limit of five American or Redbreasted Mergansers, with a possession limit of ten singly or in the aggregate of both kinds.

The hunting season for Wilson Snipe was established from November 10 to December 9.

The more than adequate rainfall experienced in New Jersey this year has created higher quality habitat for waterfowl, the Division of Fish and Game declared. Marshes throughout the State are carrying an exceptional amount of water surface and the growth of food plants has been excellent. These factors should contribute in a major way to a successful waterfowl season in New Jersey this fall.

Clancy, a rookie cop, caught a thief breaking into a jewelry store one dark night.

"Ha," Clancy said. "Caught in the act. You'll do plenty time for this, me boy!"

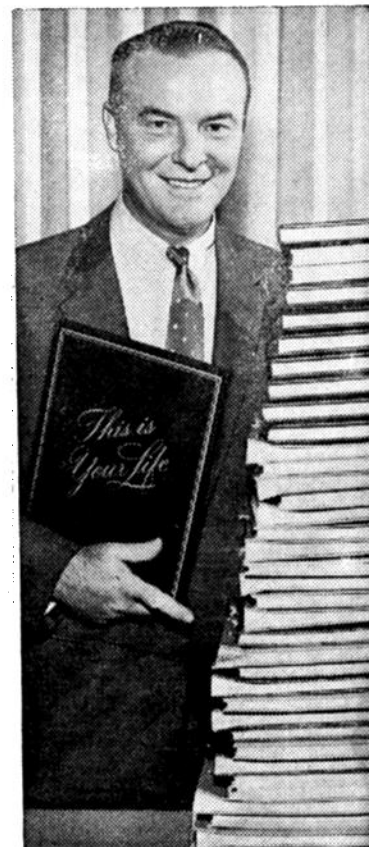

"Look," said the thief. "I know my rights. I want to call my lawyer. Let me go into that cigar store and call him and have him meet me at the station house!"

So Clancy let the thief go into the cigar store and the thief kept right on going out the back window. Clancy didn't see him until six months later when he met the little crook coming out of a jewelry store with his hands full of rings and bracelets. Clancy grabbed the loot and the looter.

"Ha," Clancy exulted. "I've got you with the goods this time. Come along with me."

"I got to call my lawyer," the crook protested as they passed a cigar store. "You won't fool me this time," said Clancy. "Here. Hold these rings and bracelets and give me your lawyer's phone number. I'll call him!"

REAL LIFE STORYTELLER—Emc Ralph Edwards helps make dreams come true when he presents the stories of "surprise" guests on "This is Your Life," returning to the NBC-TV Network Wednesday, Sept. 24.

NO SONG IS LOST

A Short, Short Story by

C. S. MONTAYNE

He decided again that she was lovely enough to thrill him, so why, he wondered, wasn't he in love with her.

Mario went through the cool, cloistered half light of the living room in Edna's Amarillo Canyon bungalow and sat down before her baby grand piano in the work-room where the shade of the trees outside lay in thick, green dusk. He swept aside a heap of Edna's penciled manuscript, smiling a little superciliously for her composing efforts invariably amused him, and yet his thin, nervous fingers roam the keys.

Usually melody soothed away any inner disturbance. But this afternoon, his talk with Hammond at the studio lingered unpleasantly. He found himself playing the elusive, fragmentary tune that had been in his mind for some days. He had thought it might be pointed up, hammered into a production number that could be played straight or used to satisfy the jittery inhibitions of the swing minded. Hammond had set a deadline for the thing he wanted. He had been very decided when he told Mario the song, words and music, must be in by the next afternoon.

Mario was embroidering the theme, trying to give it substance and body, when he heard Edna's car outside. Her Great Dane barked joyfully, the iron gate banged shut, her heels clicked rhythmically on the polished floor.

"I thought I heard you playing. Been here long?" Her slim hand slipped into his. "I looked for you at the studio. Hammond said you left at one."

Her hair seemed to glimmer in the light and shadow; her long, oval eyes were mysteriously enigmatic, her full lips parted. At that moment Mario decided again that she was lovely — lovely enough to excite romance, to thrill and inspire him.

He wondered, abstractly, while he lighted a cigarette for her, why he wasn't in love with her. Perhaps it was that strange superiority he felt — the constant knowledge that he had come to Hollywood from the concert stage, that the music he wrote was good so much better than the banal, tinkling tunes. Edna laboriously ground out. It was true she had earned a great deal of money and fame of a sort from the full length cartoon comedy she had set to music. But he reminded himself, men like Hammond were not contracting for her to write arias and spot hit numbers for the type of picture, and the operatic star, on which he had been at work.

They dined on the terrace. The moon swung up across the canyon and the stars came out, one by one. Mario, lounging in the candlelight, told her his troubles.

"Tomorrow afternoon . . . am I an automaton to have a crank turned . . . and music come out? That song I was playing—" He gestured with his thin, artistic hands. "It is what Hammond wants, I know that, but—" "It fades into nothing," Edna interpolated softly.

He nodded, deep in thought, hardly conscious she had gotten up and gone into the bungalow. He lifted his brooding gaze when he heard the ripple of the piano. He jerked his head sharply left, his eyes on the open doors, listening.

She was playing the same tune he had toyed with when she had come in. But this time the melody had a meaning, a significance. It built itself in a melodic tone picture that gripped him and held him fascinated. The middle part that had hung suspended, escaping him completely, was now a bridge that carried the burden of the theme surely across to its exquisite climax.

"Something like that?"

Edna came back through the cloying gloom. Mario stood, his young face earnest and intent, his hands trembling.

"Yes, something like that."

"Go in and write it down before you forget it," she spoke casually.

"Pencil and score sheets on top of the piano. Help yourself."

"But—"

She pushed him away, gently, decidedly. "Hurry before it goes."

Brennan, who was doing the lyrics, put words to the melody the next morning in Mario's hotel room. At noon Hammond heard the song, approved, and took Mario out to lunch.

"Funny how a little urging can get you artistic guys underway," he grunted. "Frankly, I don't like highbrow musicians. I'd rather work with the Tin Pan Alley variety—people like Edna Sheridan, Tommy Dorlon. But that's a good tune. Sounds like a natural."

It was after five when Mario's taxi took him to Amarillo Canyon. The Great Dane barked ominously when he opened the iron gate but the dog was chained and Mario went on to the letter-box and key Edna left for him. There was a note saying she'd be back in an hour, on the living room table, an open manuscript on the piano rack. Mario saw its title, "No Song Is Lost," when he switched on the shaded light and sat down to play.

She had raided a Los Angeles delicatessen. When she put her car in the garage, she called for him to help her with the packages. Mario carried them in to the glistening porcelain table in the model kitchen.

He looked deep into the enigmatic eyes Edna lifted. He tried to answer her smile, but his lips were stiffly serious. She frowned watching his expression change dramatically.

"What did Pete Hammond think of the number? Why do you look at me like that, Mario? What's the matter? Something gone wrong?"

"Very wrong!" He was trembling oddly, the blood was pounding through him, his mind was confused. Only one thing had any clarity, any vision. "Why Edna?" he heard himself asking in a strange voice.

"Why—what?"

His hands closed about her shoulders. He was drawing her to him, hardly aware of what he did. "That song," Mario said all at once. "No wonder it was elusive and haunting! I must have heard it here the first night I came! It must have hidden in some far corner of my memory! It was your song—the theme piece you did for that cartoon nonsense—so good you took it out, shelved it! Why, Edna—?"

He broke off. She was close to him now and quite naturally, simply, her arms linked themselves about his neck. And she was smiling, not enigmatically, but happily.

"What is the theme of all music, of all life?" she asked, unsteadily.

Mario laughed. "Love, of course!" he told her, before he put his own arms around her and leaned to kiss the warm red of her curved, glowing mouth.

FIRST CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

A very important meeting began in colonial Philadelphia on Monday, September 5, 1774. Fifty five delegates attended. They came from all the colonies except far-away Georgia. They met and held their sessions, lasting seven weeks in Carpenter's Hall down at Fourth and Chestnut Street. They were the members of the First Continental Congress.

The delegates were meeting to consider grievances against the English government, and steps to correct them. Outstanding men of the colonies were there, among them Samuel and John Adams from Massachusetts, and Patrick Henry and Richard Henry Lee from Virginia. George Washington was also there, wearing his uniform.

Congress was meeting at a time of terrific tension. The stage had already been set for the outbreak of conflict at Lexington and Concord the following spring. The British Parliament had clamped down the four Intolerable Acts on Massachusetts. The port of Boston had been closed. The Massachusetts charter had been annulled. Persons accused of crime against British authority were to be sent to England for trial. It was now legal to quarter troops in any town in Massachusetts.

Massachusetts appealed to the other colonies for aid. From Maine to Georgia came support through the "Committees of Correspondence" that had been set up. United action through a central authority was needed. The call went out for an inter-colonial meeting and the date and place set for September 5, 1774 at Philadelphia for the First Continental Congress.

Peyton Randolph, the big, cheerful Speaker of the Virginia House of Burgesses, was chosen as President of the Congress. Charles Thomson of Philadelphia was made Secretary. The delegates agreed to vote by provincial units, each having one vote. There were conservatives led by Joseph Galloway from Pennsylvania, and radicals led by Samuel Adams of Massachusetts.

The Congress condemned the Intolerable Acts as unconstitutional and tyrannical. It approved defense measures for the colonies. It adopted the "Continental Association" boycott against British goods. On September 17 the Congress, led by the radicals, endorsed the "Suffolk Resolutions" from Suffolk County in Massachusetts. These resolutions, urging defiance against British laws, demanding arming of the people's militia, and economic sanctions against England, were carried to Philadelphia by Paul Revere, the ever-ready messenger on horseback.

On October 14 the Congress approved a "Declaration of Rights." And after preparing an address to the king and to the English and American people, The First Continental Congress adjourned on October 26, resolved to meet a second time on May 10, 1775 if their grievances had not been redressed.

The overall effect of this Congress was to push the colonies farther along the road to rebellion. Also, the people of the colonies began to think of themselves as Americans, rather than colonials. Patrick Henry summed up this feeling at the first session. "Government is dissolved," he said. "We are in a state of nature. The distinctions between Virginians, Pennsylvanians, New Yorkers and New Englanders are no more. I am not a Virginian, but an American!"
