Regional High School Approved By Large Majority; Residents Happy

Voters of three communities last night approved by referendum construction of a regional high school costing $2,750,000, and to house 800 pupils. Residents of Haledon, North Haledon and Prospect Park each passed the propositions by a large majority. The total vote cast was 1,731 in favor and 672 opposed. The breakdown by boroughs was: Prospect Park, 488 to 177; Haledon, 671 to 147, and North Haledon, 572 to 348.

In North Haledon and Prospect Park a record number of people turned out for a school election. In Haledon it was close to a record. Total registration in the three towns is 8,975, the turnout was almost 27 per cent.

The Regional Board of Education will meet next Thursday to give architects authority to proceed with plans for the school. The vote gave the board authority to purchase the school site and to issue bonds to finance the entire project.

Herman Gionti, president of the board, said last night:

"We are very happy that the citizens of the boroughs have shown by their overwhelming vote in favor of the proposal that when they are fully informed about educational requirements they will vote the necessary funds to establish and maintain a good educational system.

"We would like to reassure the people of the board's continued sincere efforts to establish a high school and curriculum that we may all be proud of. I express my thanks to the local official bodies and to all those who helped make this possible."

Preliminary plans for the 800-pupil high school, designed by Frederic P. Wiedersum Associates, have been approved by the state, Department of Education as the minimum needed now to provide students of the three boroughs with proper educational opportunity. High school students from the tri-borough region now attend schools in Hawthorne and Paterson.

Studies and discussions on regionalizing the school district began two years ago when Hawthorne, faced with its own problems of overcrowding, decided not to accept any more non-resident high school pupils. Deadline for this has been set for June 1960. The new school is expected to be ready for occupancy by September 1960, according to plans of the regional school board.

The regional school district was approved at a special election in the three boroughs on April, 1957.

Our cover picture shows the Elks Grand Exalted Ruler, Horace R. Wisely, when he visited Paterson last week. He was honored at a dinner by the Paterson Elks Lodge No. 60 at the Elks Lodge on McLean Boulevard. At the head table are shown, left to right: John V. Campana, Past District Deputy; John J. Pasquale, Exalter Ruler; Horace R. Wisely and William J. Jernicks, Past Grand Exalted Ruler. Wisely is a resident of California and was elected grand exalted ruler last July.

Cleveland, Ohio — Miss Joanne Neff, 18, isn't kidding when she sticks her pretty face under the hood of a car. Not only has she been driving her own cars for three years, she's also been repairing them. She plans to buy a sports car for racing in coming Akron and Mount Vernon sports events. She is a freshman at John Carroll U., night division.

LITTLE DIPPER — Miami Beach, Fla. — One bathing beauty who isn't worried about her hairdo, 20-month-old Nievita Clausen splashes some water around at Miami Beach. The little curlyhead is vacationing with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leinef Clausen, of Honrubia, Cuenca Province, Spain.

ROUND AND ROUND SHE GOES — Charlottesville, Va. — Rain or shine, the hula hoop craze goes on unabated. With an umbrella to shield her from the drizzle, nine-year-old Mary Saumweber gives her hoop a spin in Charlottesville. For an added fillip, she pops her bubble gum at the same time.

SCHOOL PROBLEM — Patricia Benoit (as assistant principal Laura Manning of Bolton High School) and John McGovern (as principal Adam Holt) are seen trying to solve a problem raised by a parent in "Today Is Ours," NBC-TV Monday-through-Friday daytime serial.

Rep. Canfield Featured In Labor Weekly

Labor, national weekly labor organ, featured Representative Gordon Canfield in its October 4 issue as "The Kind of Man to Elect to Congress."

The article that occupied a prominent position on page two and carried the Congressman's photograph, describes the Paterson Republican as "A quiet hard-working member of Congress," with "one of the best records among progressive Republicans in the House."

It reviews his early experience as 17 year secretary for Congressman George N. Seger, his late predecessor and states that "thus he accumulated an impressive knowledge of the workings of Congress," before his own election as Representative of New Jersey's Eighth Congressional District.

"Canfield, now 60 and a veteran of World War I, has also had considerable experience in World War II, the article states, recalling his service as utility man on a tanker in the hazardous North Atlantic run during the 1944 Congressional recess, to study first hand the conditions and problems affecting the U. S. Armed Forces in the European theatre and his later inspection visits to the Korean front.

Failure To Properly Tag Killed Deer Brings Fine

New Jersey deer hunters who purchased their 1958 bow hunting and firearms hunting license prior to April 1 last are requested to pick up their deer tag and reporting card from the license agency that sold them the license.

A tag must be affixed to deer carcass before transporting it in any vehicle. It is also required that the killing of a deer during the deer hunting season be reported by mail to the State Division of Fish and Game, 230 West State Street, Trenton, N. J., within 24 hours.

Individuals not required to purchase New Jersey hunting licenses are included in the new law. It states such persons, as well as licensed hunters who have lost the deer tag or hunting card, must place some identification on the deer carcass before moving it from the woods, stating where it was killed, his name and address, his license number if he has one, the date, township if known, and county in which the deer was killed.

The new law authorizes the imposition of a $100 fine on any person who fails to properly tag a deer, or fail to report a killing of a deer.

Following their twenty-fifth anniversary celebration, the members of the Haledon Emergency Ambulance Association rolled up their sleeves and tackled their annual fund raising drive in a house to house canvass of all three boroughs. It is near completion now, and it looks like it will be successful again thanks to the great support of the residents of all three boroughs. Of course, they've been doing their regular job of keeping both ambulances in service and attending their neighbors' needs at the same time. The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime

A WEBSTER CLASSIC

Uncle CHARLEY'S "EpiGrins"

A feller kin never be big time by just workin' half time.

Faith gives a feller a better religion than fear.

It keeps some fellers so busy takin' care of their middle, they simply can't make both ends meet.

Many a feller is sound asleep with his eyes wide open.

Many a feller shouts at the office who don't reign at home.

A good bridge player sure has to learn to take it on the shin.

The difference between a slow driver and a fast one is a few quick ones.

It's always harder to rise with no jack.

Yes sah, many a two cent sport has a million dollar ambition.

A lot of vacationists arrive home safely, brag and baggage.

Yep, rheumatism and pride make some folks a bit stiff.

A rusty mind seldom sets a shining example.

Folks who fall for things will lose their standin'.

When a gal is bent on doublin' up it's hard to straighten her out.

INTO THE PAST

Working off Fire Island, New York, skindivers have been attempting, in the words of a reporter, "to swim 137 years into the past."

The search is for the wreckage of the SS Savannah — the first steam-powered vessel to cross the ocean — which sank there on November 5, 1821. If she can be located and identified some salvageable part of her will be incorporated in her namesake — the NS (for Nuclear Ship) Savannah which is now being built at a Camden yard.

This is both a fitting and a dramatic undertaking. The old Savannah, with her little 90-horsepower steam plant, made history. So will the new Savannah, driven by the greatest force yet unleashed by man.

Then, the two Savannahs illustrate something else — the role merchant ships have played in this nation's life. Since the earliest days we have been a maritime nation. We have depended, in varying degree, on sea-borne commerce to sustain us. And today, having become the world's foremost importing and exporting nation, that dependence is far greater than in the past.

It will be a long time before nuclear ships replace those using conventional fuel. But a new age, with limitless possibilities for the service of man, is beginning. And our merchant marine will have an eminent place in it.

RUSSIA'S RAILROADS

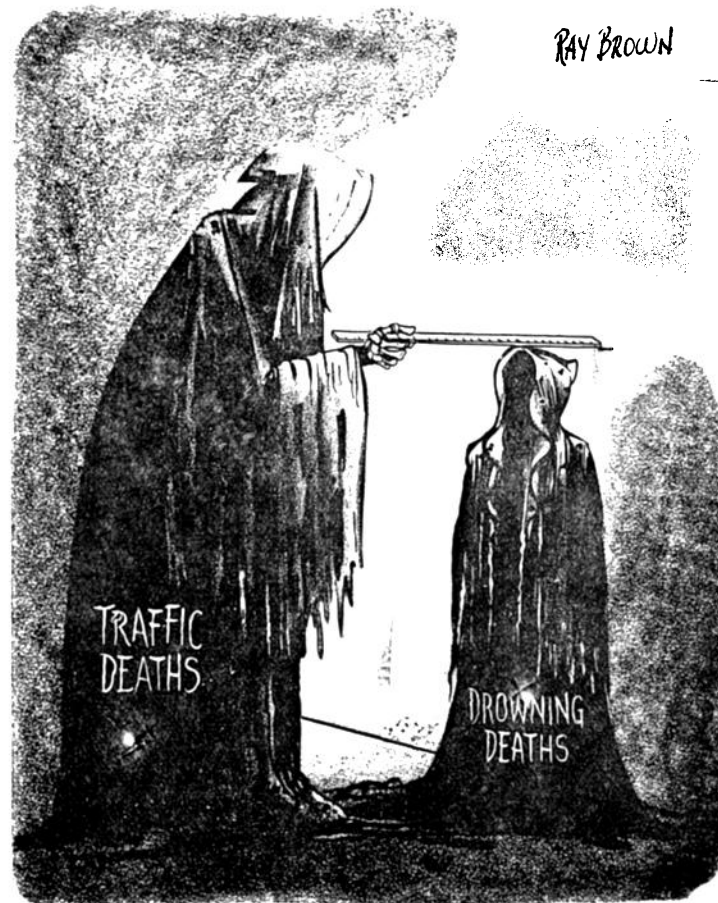

Anyone who thinks that railroads are becoming an obsolete form of transportation whose importance is due to steadily diminish would be wise to take a look at what is going on in Russia. For the communist policy-makers, whatever else may be said of them, are hard-headed men, who deal with the realities.

The head of an American railroad tells the story. The war did enormous damage to Russia's transportation plant. When rebuilding began, the Russian had a choice. They could have built a giant highway system, as Hitler had done in Germany. And they could have done it at a relatively small cost in labor and materials.

But the Russian rulers, instead, embarked on a massive rail program. Big freight cars of the most modern type are becoming standard. Diesels and electrics are replacing steam locomotives. In one decade, more than half of the mileage has been relaid with new and heavy rail. The men in the Kremlin know that the Russian economy and the Russian defensive system are more dependent on railroads than on any other means of moving goods and people.

What is true of Russia is true of any other big nation, the United States included. That is why Congress, after sweeping hearings, passed major new transportation legislation last session, and why every expert believes that much more must still be done if our financially distressed railroads are to get back on their feet. As Hal Thompson, financial columnist of the Chicago American writes: "... railroads are vital to our defense and should be kept financially healthy."

"My, You're Getting To Be A Big Boy"

The Editor Speaks

VINCENT S. PARRILLO

Well, all the new 1959 cars will soon be seen on the road. You have seen the mpictured on television, in your newspapers, in the magazines, and you have heard them raved about on your radio.

They are longer, lower, faster than ever. They are more beautiful, more colorful, more powerful than in any previous year. And so, progress has made another step forward and the accident rate in this country will probably go up another notch during the coming year.

But may I ask them one question: What is the sense of producing cars that will go 125 miles or more an hour when the speed limit on most roads is 45 to 60 miles?

What is the logic of giving the easily tempted human being a juggernaut that will develop 200 or 300 horsepower when one or two REAL horsepower made our ancestors the pioneers they were?

I know it sounds like a foolish question. I know that none of us wants to go back to the horse-and-buggy days any more than we want to go back to outhouses and outside wells.

But aren't we traveling just a little too fast for our own good? Aren't we developing technical appliances much faster than our intelligence and our capacity to use them warrants?

It's wonderful to have a fast car. It's great to pass the fellow ahead of you and say to yourself, "Gee, what a great guy I am!"

But the very fact that we go faster than the law allows proves that we haven't the capacity to handle such a big automobile behind the wheel of which we sit.

The hour-long program marks the centennial of the Miracle of Lourdes, France, where the 14-year-old Bernadette Soubirous saw a vision of the Virgin Mary. Actress-author Ludi Claire adapted the play from the biography, "The Miracle of Bernadette." Desi Arnaz hosts the series. Sponsor is Westinghouse Electric Corporation.

THIS ADDS UP — Emcee Hugh Downs points out a rebus spelling the title of his new NBC-TV daytime Monday-through-Friday show, "Concentration," to Patte Preble, production assistant. The game has contestants trying to identify word pictures of song titles, familiar sayings and proverbs.

MEN AT ODDS—Regular star George Montgomery (left) and guest Fred MacMurray are two strong men who clash in "I, the People," opening story of "Cimarron City," full-hour series starting on the NBC-TV Network Saturday, Oct. 11. Montgomery portrays Matthew Rockford, leading citizen of the town, and MacMurray plays a newcomer who seems friendly but is later linked with sinister motives.

SILENT HEROINE — Julie Harris will portray the deaf-and-dumb heroine of "Johnny Belinda" in the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" live 90-minute colorcast of the drama on the NBC-TV Network Monday, Oct. 13. Co-starred with her will be Christopher Plummer, as the doctor who teaches her the sign language and falls in love with her, and Victor Jory (above) as her father.

"John I found this letter in your coat pocket this morning. I gave it to you a month ago to mail."

"Yes dear, I remember. I took that coat off for you to sew a button on and I'm still waiting."

Mr. Smith: "My wife asked me for a check for $50 for a new dress and I gave her a check for kisses . . . 1000 kisses. Well, what are you laughing at?"

Routeman: "I cashed it."

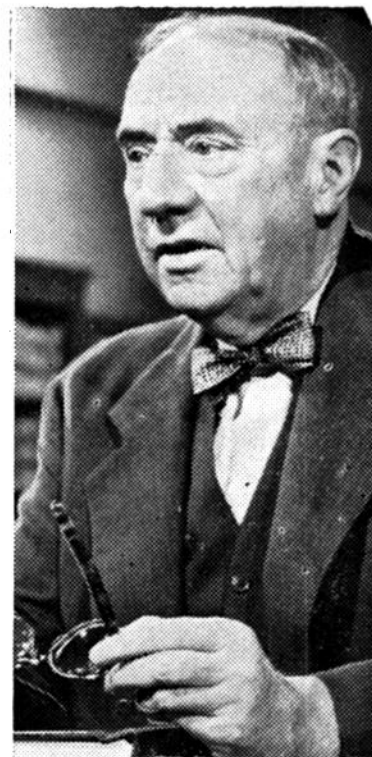

A white-haired gentleman arose from a barber's chair in a shop off New York's Times Square, looked at himself in the mirror and remarked, "You certainly give good haircuts in this country."

"Thank you, sir," said the barber, pleased. "What country are you from? The gentleman replied: Tennessee."

A Russian and an American were discussing democracy and communism, and the American said, "In America we have such freedom, a man can go right up to the steps of the capitol and call President Eisenhower a stinker." The Russian retorted, "We have equal freedom in Russia. A man can go right up to the steps of the Kremlin and call President Eisenhower a stinker, also."

SOCIETY ON TRIAL — Joseph N. Welch, the noted American trial lawyer, will guide "Omnibus" viewers in a probe of capital punishment Sunday, Oct. 26, on the NBC-TV Network. The full-hour inspection of society in the role of executioner will launch the show's seventh season.

'GATEWAYS TO THE MIND'—Mae Boss and Dr. Frank Baxter chat between takes in the filming of "Gateways to the Mind," the "story of the human senses" to be colorcast on the NBC-TV Network Thursday, Oct. 23. Miss Boss will be on the receiving end of a knife-throwing act, which will be one of the many illustrations of the sense of sight. Dr. Baxter will take viewers on "a fascinating trip through the ages" explaining our growing knowledge of our own senses.

WHILE GEORGE BURNS—Secretary Blanche Morton is taken aback as her boss, George Burns, pleads with her to find mis-filed correspondence during an episode of the "George Burns Show," which becomes a Tuesday night feature on the NBC-TV Network starting Oct. 21. Bea Benadaret portrays Blanche in the comedy series built around the television industry and starring Burns as a TV producer.

Seton Hall Basketball Team Looks Promising

Six lettermen and four very promising sophomores will head the candidates for the Seton Hall University basketball squad when the Pirates open drills on Wednesday, October 15. It will mark the start of Coach Honey Russell's seventeenth year at the helm.

The Pirates suffered their worst campaign in the Russell reign, winning only seven of 26. A distinct improvement is expected this season, for there were no serious losses by graduation and the needed ball handler should be on hand.

Three sophs, Kennie Walker of carbondale, Pa., Angie Marrotta of Medford, Mass., and Bill Brooks of Weehawken, are expected to fill the field general need.

Much is expected of 6-10 Tom Cross, one of the two seniors on the squad. The only other is a two-year regular, Phil Samuels, 6-4, of East Orange.

Cross, in the last campaign, was forced to go beyond his physical limits because of the paucity of reserves. As it was, he led the team in scoring with 322 points and in rebounds with 340.

The Hall's standout is expected to be Jack Rowley, 6-4 soph from Ardmore, Pa. A southpaw, he averaged 11 points a game and was second in rebounds with an average of 9 a game.

The two and Samuels seems in the lead for starting birth. Samuels is tough off the boards and has a fine one hander.

Seth Hicks of New Rochelle, will also have much to say about a starting spot. In 15 games last year he scored 125 points.

The other two vets, Connie Egan of Montclair, and Hugh Dunion of Newark comprise the junior delegation with Rowley and Hicks. The other soph is Ronnie Olender, 6-2 from Elizabeth. He finished the frosh season strong with 349 points.

The Hall opens its season when it helps Rider College dedicate its new gym on December 1 and then faces an old foe, Loyola College of Baltimore, in the home debut two nights later.

REQUIEM

BY PHILIP KETCHUM

He had lost track of time. What day of the week it was he didn't know, or care. He was neglecting the most trivial details of the routine of life. Unpaid bills were piling up on his desk. His car, which had been wrecked in a minor accident, was still unrepaired. A needed haircut had been postponed time and time again. But none of this was important. Brenda alone held his attention. Every thought he had revolved around her, and around the terrible fear that he was losing her. Revolved around the knowledge that he was losing her and an awareness of what that would mean.

Her picture was on the desk in his study, but no picture would do her justice. She was tall, slender, and there was beauty in every line of her body. Her hair, a soft brown, framed the perfect oval of her face, a face with startling blue eyes, wide and clear, but at the same time, deep and mysterious. Her laughter had a warmth which would linger in memory long after its sound was gone. It was an intimate laugh, a laugh which seemed to reach out and share itself with those who heard it.

Conover had fallen in love with Brenda almost the moment he saw her. A confirmed bachelor of thirty-four, he had been sure no woman would ever sweep him off his feet, but a single glance had conquered him, though he had fought against admitting it for months. Then he had been sure that marriage would cure him, but marriage hadn't. After three years, he was even more in love with Brenda than he had been before their marriage. Part of this feeling, he told himself, was that he had never really possessed her, never completely possessed her. Always, it seemed, Brenda held part of herself back. There was a reserve he couldn't touch, some hidden depth he hadn't found. Now, he might never find it if Tom Dugan had his way, and Dugan was making progress.

There was a wide, front window in his study, and from this window, Conover stared across the street toward the house where Dugan lived. It was a respectable looking house, but there wasn't much respectable about Tom Dugan. He has made his money in the rackets. He was still one of the king pins in the underworld. Suave and attractive, he was rotten underneath. Brenda didn't see that, now. The man had charmed her.

Conover suddenly stiffened. Coming up the street were a man and a woman. Brenda and Tom Dugan. They were walking slowly and unnecessarily close together, and in front of the house they stopped. Conover watched them. His hands were tightly clenched. His breath came heavily. Brenda was looking up at Dugan and Conover could picture the expression on her face, a sensitive, changing expression which could hold any man's attention. Dugan, the poor fool was grinning at her. After a time, after too long a time, Dugan turned and crossed the street toward his house, and Brenda came up the walk.

"Tomorrow," Conover muttered. "I'll take care of him tomorrow. I've waited long enough."

He went downstairs. Brenda was in the lower hall, taking off her coat. "Are you feeling any better, Ed?" she asked quickly.

"Better?" said Ed Conover. And then he remembered. Brenda had asked him to leave his books to walk to the drug store with her. He had complained of a headache. "It's still bothering me," he muttered.

"You shouldn't work so hard," said Brenda. "By the way, I met Tom Dugan at the corner and walked home with him. He's going to Florida later this month. Ed, away from your books for a while?"

"In another week. How would you like that?"

"It'd be perfect. Can I start getting ready?"

couldn't we go to Florida? Can't you get

She looked almost excited Conover noted. "I'll get together all the clothes that need cleaning," said Brenda, "and take them to the cleaner tomorrow. I'll make some arrangement for Molly. Perhaps she can stay here. And I'll want to get a permanent. If the car were only fixed—"

"I'll take care of that tomorrow," said Conover. But he wondered if Brenda's interest in Florida would be as strong tomorrow as it was today.

"I'll have to work hard to finish my research," he said slowly. "That means keeping at it most of the night, dear."

Conover's plans for the elimination of Tom Dugan had been well laid. And the plan was fool-proof. In a box in his closet he had a bomb which he had made himself, a bomb which could be fastened under the hood of Dugan's car, with a detonating device attached to the starter, so that when the starter button was touched, the bomb would explode. It was a powerful bomb, powerful enough to shatter the car and the garage which housed it. To Conover, a physicist, the making of this bomb and its detonating device, had been child's play.

And, of course, he would never be suspected. His research, now, in the higher realms of physics, was far removed from simple explosives. And as additional security, he had Tom Dugan's position in the underworld to shield him from any blame. Bombs such as he would use to eliminate Tom Dugan, were often used by the gangster elements in the community to get rid of an enemy. The police would search throughout the underworld for Dugan's enemy. They would never think to look elsewhere.

On the following morning, Conover arose early. He had attached the bomb to Dugan's car the night before. At eleven, if Dugan followed his usual routine, he would go down to the garage, climb into his car, press the starter button, and die. There was no chance anything could go wrong.

Conover came down to breakfast a few minutes after nine, and as he sat down at the table he asked Molly if Brenda was up. This was just a routine question. Brenda slept late. Sometimes she had her breakfast with him.

"Mrs. Conover?" said Molly. "Oh, she's been up for hours, gathering things to go to the cleaners, making lists of things to buy. She left just before you came down. And what a load she had. But it was all right. She had arranged to borrow Mr. Dugan's car."

Conover jerked to his feet, every muscle in his body rigid. "Dugan's car?" he screamed.

Molly was nodding. "Why, yes, Mr. Dugan's man brought over the keys last night. He told her Mr. Dugan wouldn't need the car until eleven. He said—"

Conover whirled toward the door but before he reached it a roaring blast shook the house. Molly rushed past him but Conover didn't follow her — in the fading echoes, all that had made his life worth while was fading, too.

AMERICAN HISTORY

"BLACK FRIDAY" GOLD PLOT

One of the most scandalous pieces of financial trickery ever to be tried in the United States was the gold plot of Jay Gould and James Fisk, Jr. that came to a climax on Friday, September 24, 1869. That day went down in our history as "Black Friday" because of the ruin, confusion and misery it brought to many persons and business firms.

Jay Gould and Jim Fisk were both unscrupulous speculators in their thirties at the time. Foxy, whispery little Jay Gould was a financial wizard without principles or honesty, and big, brassy Jim Fisk was a swaggering scoundrel. Both men, as partners, made fortunes from shady stock manipulations, wrecking railroads, and other sharp deals. As directors of the Erie Railroad they had swindled Cornelius Vanderbilt out of millions through stock fraud.

In the spring of 1869 the two worked out a scheme to "corner" the ready gold supply of the United States. With them were Abel R. Corbin, brother-in-law of President Grant, and several associates from the railroad and financial fields.

The nation was on a paper money basis at the time. Gold was dealt in as a speculative commodity on the New York exchange. For the accommodation of importers and other businesses the government sold a million dollars of gold every month on the open market.

In addition to President Grant's brother-in-law, Gould and his fellow plotters got Daniel Butterfield, head of the New York Sub-Treasury, into the scheme to keep them informed of government policy. Jim Fisk brazenly tried to involve the President himself in the scheme during a party Fisk gave on his steamboat. Innocently enough, the President was nearly convinced that it would be better for the country, especially the western farmers with their big grain crops, and for the railroads hauling the crops, if the government suspended its gold sales. And, somehow, the President was induced at this time to go away on a visit of several weeks to a remote town in Pennsylvania.

On September 2 Gould began buying gold on a big scale. The price then was 133, that is, it took $133 in greenbacks to buy $100 in gold. A few days later Fisk began buying heavily. The price of gold rose to 140. The New York Tribune called for government action, but Secretary of the Treasury George S. Boutwell would not act in the President's absence. The plotters continued to buy gold in big quantities. By September 23 they had forced the price up to 150 and a panic threatened. Business firms and banks needing gold were faced with ruin by the artificially inflated price of gold.

On the morning of the next day, Friday, the 24th, Fisk bought tremendously and forced the price up to 162. The New York exchange was in a panic. Hundreds of businessmen were ruined. Others faced ruin by having to buy gold from the plotters at their price. A financial crisis loomed before the nation.

Then the government stepped in. The President had returned to Washington, and in response to frenzied letters and telegrams he ordered the U. S. Treasury to sell millions in gold on the open market. The crash came at noon. The price of gold fell to 133. The plot was wrecked, but not before many honest men were ruined.

The plotters themselves lost heavily, including Jim Fisk. Brazenly he managed to repudiate his obligations. Many other speculators were ruined. But not foxy Jay Gould. He had discovered in time that the government would sell its gold and, betraying his own partners, he secretly sold his holdings at a big profit.

A congressional investigation that followed later placed an ugly smirch on Grant's administration, but the President himself was shown to be guilty of nothing worse than foolish innocence.
