1958 Changes In Social Security Laws Provide For Children and Widows

By Stanley J. Fiorese, Manager of Paterson Social Security Office

One of the important reasons for social security insurance benefits is the protection of children. Before the recent changes in the law, however, foster children who had not been legally adopted were often out of luck where social security is concerned. I have known many "little Orphan Annies" who were not eligible for payments.

I recall, in particular, the case of 6-year-old Johnnie K. The Johnsons had taken him to live with them but before they could get around to legal adoption, Mr. Johnson died. Mrs. Johnson fully expected to get survivor's payments for the little boy and for herself as she had the child in her care. It was our painful duty to tell her that benefits were not possible. Johnnie had not been legally adopted and she, a widow without a legal minor child, could not get payments as she was under 62.

In 1958 changes in the social security law make it possible to pay benefits to more children (including Johnnie) and more widows (including Mrs. Johnson). In the case of children, this results from the removal of the adoption provision in the old law; in the case of widows, the removal of the adoption provision will also permit the payment of mother's benefits, in most cases.

It is no longer necessary that a child, other than the worker's own child, be an adopted child in order to qualify for survivor's benefits. The requirement now is that the child be "adoptable" and be adopted by the surviving spouse within two years after the worker's death. If the child was living in the worker's household as a member of the family, and was not supported by anyone other than the worker, the spouse or a social agency, he is now regarded, for social security purposes, the same as the worker's own child.

In the case of the adopted child of a retired insured worker it is no longer necessary that the child have been adopted for as long as three years in order to be eligible for benefit payments. The 3-year restriction was put in the old law to guard against abuses through adoptions undertaken to secure rights to benefits. As adoptions are subject to court approval in the various States, however, Congress decided that this is a rare abuse, and removed the restriction from the law. Benefits are now payable to an adopted child immediately after adoption.

Under the amended law, the length-of-marriage restriction has been removed if the deceased worker legally adopted the spouse's child.

The Serra Club of Paterson, received its charter this past Wednesday, 180th in the world, at a formal dinner in the Alexander Hamilton Hotel attended by clergy and laity from the Roman Catholic Diocese of Paterson and the Archdiocese of Newark. Its name was taken from Junipero Serra, the noted Franciscan who played a leading part in early missionary efforts in the West. Seated left to right are: Monsignor Edward J. Scully, diocesan director of vocations and pastor of Holy Cross R. C. Church, Mountain View, chaplain; Joseph A. Abbott, president; Bishop James A. McNulty who presided and was the principal speaker; James G. Cahill, vice president and general chairman of the affair; Cyril W. Collins, vice president and toastmaster; Charles J. Scanlan, secretary; and Edward J. Foster, treasurer.

PIECE WORK — Waltham, Mass. — When these two men sit down to play a game of chess, their attention is really riveted to the board. The players, Horace Calhoun (Left) and Wilbur Hunter, use chessmen made of different size rivets manufactured at the Judson L. Thomson plant where they work in Waltham, Mass. Using "chess pieces" selected from the 8,000 different tubular and split rivets made by the company, the men sometimes need a month of lunch hours to finish a single game.

MEN OF THE WHIRL — Winnipeg, Man., Canada — Bill Mosienko of the Winnipeg Warriors Hockey Team shows colleagues Steve Witiuk and Dick Lamoreaux how to perform and keep fit with the hula hoop, here. Coach Alf Pike thought up the idea to keep the team fit and in shape for the coming season.

Paterson Police Go Deer Hunting Without License

The populated areas around Paterson are becoming so crowded that a 200 pound deer decided to try the city, possibly thinking that all the humans had left the city to live in the suburbs. However, he was soon disillusioned. The complexity of city canyons was too much for him. He became frantic and leaped over fences and through yards. An unfortunate dog was kicked to death and approaching cars were jumped over.

The eight point deer was first seen at 7 a.m. near the Universal Manufacturing Company at 29 East Sixth Street. He leaped over a 10 foot fence into the company yard, scurried about and leaped out again.

Police caught up with the deer at Park Avenue and East 18th Street. They were outmaneuvered as the deer leaped over their car. Finally at Derrom Avenue and Broadway the police managed to corner the deer and shot it. We wonder if the police were licensed to hunt deer. What a privileged clan — our cops, hunting deer in Paterson, and the warden doesn't even challenge them.

More Big Balloons In The Pre-Christmas Parade

Paterson's pre-Christmas parade is planned to be held Saturday morning, November 29.

As parades in other areas are being curtailed, the committee voted to increase the budget for Paterson's parade this year.

Contracts have been signed to include the largest number of giant balloons ever to appear in the Paterson parade. Tentative plans call for more than 55 units, including 23 Giant Balloons.

Children from orphan homes in the area have been invited to be guests and to sit in the reviewing stand. Boy Scouts and YMCA members will dress as clowns and furnish the pulling power for the big balloons.

The parade will start at 9:30 a.m. and will traverse most of the downtown Paterson shopping-district.

Tri-Borough Notebook

Publicity, according to the dictionary, means the state of being a subject of common knowledge; circulation of printed matter advertising a business institution, or cause; notoriety.

This definition does not seem all inclusive to me, but it will have to do, is this week's column is going to bring some notoriety to a "cause" that is not yet, common knowledge, but I'd like it to be.

This is a different kind of "a cause" however, because I'm not asking you to donate a penny! Just effort. The effort it takes to pull down one key on the voting machine on Tuesday.

Spousing a political issue. This is a cause for which the money has already been collected; but must now be allocated. The allocation cannot take place until the people of the State of New Jersey say it can be used for this specific purpose.

The money is in a fund originally established by legislative act in 1817, and since 1844 has been protected by the State Constitution against diversion for uses other than the support of the public schools of the state.

There will be on your voting machine next Tuesday, two referenda. Number one is about the water issue, and number two is the proposed constitutional amendment concerning school bonds.

Question number two if approved by the voters will do this: It will take the revenue from this already established fund, and use the money to guarantee payment of school bonds. This will improve the marketability of school bonds to investors, and will in most instances decrease the rate of interest charged on school bonds.

This is not a new idea. Most other states have already established a fund of this sort. It will mean that investors from all over the country will look more favorably on New Jersey school bonds when planning their investment programs. They will have the guarantee that if a school district through some reason cannot pay its yearly rate of interest due on the bonds the state fund will pay it for them.

There will be very few instances where this will occur. But the fact that the fund is established will work a psychological effect on school bond investors, because there would be a guarantee of a return on their investment, thus eliminating most of the risk.

The credit standing of the entire state would be raised considerably. This is particularly of interest to us in the boroughs of Haledon, North Haledon and Prospect Park, for we will be selling school bonds in the very near future. Once the bonds are sold our regional district will be responsible for paying the interest plus amortization of bonded debt each year. If through the passage of this constitutional amendment we can lower the interest rates on our future bond sales even a fraction of a cent it will save each one of us, who pays taxes, a portion of our school taxes.

As I said before, this does not cost the taxpayer one cent. The fund is already established and the money in the fund has been, and will be, invested so that it in turn makes money. The revenue from these investments will be used to back up the bond defaults should they occur.

So if you want to spend just a little effort and save yourselves some of your future tax dollars, vote yes on question number two on the ballot next Tuesday.

In fact, if you hadn't planned on voting next Tuesday, make it your business to get there and vote. After all, if you like to complain, you really don't have the right unless you've voiced your official opinion at the polls.

Speaking of elections, don't think this one coming up on Tuesday is the only one you should be thinking about. There's another election in February for school board members. Take an interest in the school boards in your towns. The members are your representatives who must establish and maintain the level of education that you want and will support in your town.

I wish you all could have attended the semi-annual meeting of the Passaic County School Boards Association with me last Tuesday night. It was held in Hawthorne High School. Besides a delicious dinner, and beautiful music, there was a highly informative and interesting talk by Mrs. Ruth H. Page, executive secretary of the New Jersey State Federation of Boards of Education. Mrs. Page was formerly a board member in Fair Lawn, and has been active in school board work for many years. Her talk was on "Problems of Boards of Education". All the board members present agreed with her that there are always problems, and she helped us to understand them and helped us see how we might solve some of them in the years to come.

Some of her words were so simple, but many of us hadn't thought of them in the way she had. Such as "education can only become as great as school board members, will allow it to become." Carrying this further you might say, "and school board members can carry education forward only as far as the people in the district will allow." Actually every resident of a municipality is responsible for his child's education.

One of the main problems most boards face is getting public support for any of its actions. Probably because most people don't know what is going on, many bond issues for new school buildings were voted down. Teachers' salary guides were used as a basis of complaints in voting down school budgets, as well as other school costs that the public didn't understand, so were automatically "agin 'em."

As Mrs. Page pointed out, every person is trying to get ahead. Every man is looking forward to the day when he becomes a foreman or a boss of some kind, or the owner of his own business. Every woman is working for the day she can get her new kitchen, or just generally get her house up to the newest standards. We're all looking and working toward the day we can retire with all bills paid, the house paid off and the children well established.

We're all up to date about everything except education. There we'll fight against anything new or unusual, just because "we didn't do things like that when we went to school". There has to be an awakening to the facts concerning education. Facts, and not fiction that is passed around and missing something in the translation, most of the time.

This sounds like the start of an appeal for you to attend school board meetings. And it could be!

But is also a suggestion that when you get hold of a newspaper, magazine, book or pamphlet, that deals with education now or in the future, study it. You don't have to believe everything you read, but investigate and see if the article has merit, or if it's just someone trying to make money out of writing and picking a subject that is in the headlines right now, as the schools are.

Attend PTA meetings, parent education and discussion groups, attend class teas or class meetings set up by your children's school or teaching staff. Visit the schools when there's a play or assembly program, even if your children aren't going to perform, visit and see what is being done in the schools.

Investigate what you'd like your children to learn and see if they're learning it the best way possible. If you can't attend meetings, write letters asking questions or making suggestions to your board members. They want to do what is best for all the children of their district. They, however, are only people, and they cannot read the minds of every resident. They might make mistakes, but as Mrs. Page said, "Everyone in a democracy, which is a state of, for and by the people, has the right to make an honest mistake."

To eliminate some of the mistakes, don't leave your child's education to chance. Take an interest. It will pay dividends in the years to come. We don't have the time in this fast paced society to correct too many mistakes.

Informal Lamps Of Unusual Design

IT is not always easy to find the right lamp for that special place. Shops are filled with an endless array of lamps in all shapes and sizes, and still, it is often difficult to find just what you want. Better to buy none than buy one you don't like. Eventually, the right one will turn up.

The photographs show two poodle lamps which would be interesting to use in an informal room, especially in a summer place. They are amusing and gay, appropriate for summer's decorative scheme.

These are made by a shop which has successfully supplied all manner of plasterware for shops and clubs all over the country. The designs are original and, whether traditional or contemporary, are skillfully executed.

The poodle with the dark shade is quite large, thirty-six inches over-all, and may be used in a pair. The smaller poodle with the saucy hat could be used in a bedroom or living room.

Shades are made of solid colors, self-lined or lined with a contrasting color. You could have a red shade lined with white, black with yellow, or white with blue or rose.

Animals have often been models for lamp bases, and very successfully, too. The Chinese have given us many interesting designs. Their fierce green and yellow dragons make fine lamps. Their beautifully designed horses of ancient times look well in traditional or contemporary rooms. Also, their Buddhas and goddesses suit certain rooms to perfection.

Did you ever do any sculpturing? You might have more skill than you think. You could have your efforts cast in plaster and make lamps of them!

Uncle CHARLEY'S "Epi-grins"

The only time some fellers ever-git on the ball is at the golf course.

Now and then a woman driver will know where she's goin'.

Yep, since we've cracked the atom we've busted our pocket books.

Our taxes make us think that Uncle Sam believes in winner take all.

Nothin's as crumby as a big loafer.

When a deep thinker gits in over his head he's soon sunk.

Some fellers think a lot of themselves when no one else does.

Yep, there's a lot of balogny that don't come from the butcher shop.

Some kids start out with a play house and end up in a work house.

Who kin remember the old time nickelodian?

When a feller's git up and go has got up and went, he's a goner.

Soft words make a fine impression.

Preventing old age is an age old problem.

Many a feller who acts like a saint, ain't.

YOUR VOTE DOES COUNT!

Every election year at this time the "get out the vote" campaigns surge into high gear. All of us are urged to exert the great right of franchise.

This is all to the good. A citizen who fails to vote shirks a fundamental duty, and he certainly has no right to criticize the conduct of public affairs. It's a national disgrace that in many elections up to half of the qualified voters don't trouble to go to the polls. But something needs to be added to the command "Vote!" It is this: "Know who and what you're voting for." To vote in ignorance is as bad as not voting at all.

My own little vote doesn't count. That easy alibi is used by millions of people who fail to go to the polls. In many elections, this gross failure is shared by an actual majority of the eligible voters.

Some people may wonder why there should be so much concern over what happens to the election next Tuesday. We live in an unpredictable world. To show disinterest in our government is a moral crime. It could mean that we are taking away from our children and grandchildren the greatest single privilege granted any people.

ALL Americans should vote on election day. ALL Americans should take an active interest, and according to the dictates of their own conscience, select and vote for the men who, they think, are best qualified for that office.

Your "little vote is necessary to elect representatives of our government for the position that they seek.

Summing it up, the right of franchise is the bulwark of government — which is the bulwark of freedom.

Are you a good American? If you are, then you must vote next Tuesday.

Your "little" vote counts.

THE "ALMIGHTY DOLLAR" NOT SO MIGHTY

There is plenty of serious news to hold the attention of the American people — the integration problem, the troubles in the Middle East and the Far East, the coming election. But the biggest thing of all in the minds of most people, according to a recent poll, is the cost of living.

And with good reason! We face a $12 billion-plus Federal deficit. The wage-price spiral is starting another climb. The dollar, measured in purchasing power, gets smaller and smaller. So, to millions, plain bread-and-butter is the gravest problem.

The Editor Speaks

VINCENT S. PARRILLO

On a radio program — or maybe it was television — there was a comedy program. It was a burlesque of soap opera.

The prosecutor had finished his case. The defense attorney arose. "Wait a minute," said the judge as he banged his gavel. "Don't you start giving me a lot of stuff. I have heard one side of the story. That's enough. I don't want to get all mixed up by hearing the other side, too. Ten years.

This was a comedy, of course. But there is more truth than fiction in it.

We Americans have a great faculty for emulating that judge. We can't be bothered with both sides of a story. OUR side is all we need to know, all we are interested in. Our standards are the only correct standards, we say. Our flag is the only valid flag. Our manners are the right manners.

The French have a saying "autres pays, autres mœurs" — other lands, other manners. But the word "mœurs" also means ethics, morals, habits. If you have ever been in Paris, London, Rome, Berlin, you will easily understand what I mean.

The American tourist flaunts his money in their faces. He makes fun of their old buildings and exclaims, with a superior smile, "How quaint!" He runs around the antique shops and calls their sacred relics "junk".

There will never be peace on earth until nations and peoples have learned to respect each other.

And mutual respect can never exist unless all nations — particularly ours — remembers "Autres pays", autres mœurs."

New Jersey Upland Hunting Season To Open November 8; Prospects Good

Annual upland and waterfowl hunting seasons are near at hand with predictions that 1958 will produce daily bag limits for thousands of hunters, the State Division of Fish and Game, Department of Conservation and Economic Development, said today.

The upland game season in New Jersey will open on November 8. Field reports substantiate earlier estimates that the population of wildlife available to the hunter will be equal to that of other years with a definite increase in the population of pheasant and quail.

The rabbit supply is reported to be somewhat lower than usual and ruffed grouse having increased to a small degree. The squirrel population is spotty throughout the State.

State Public Shooting and Fishing Grounds will contain a pheasant population heavier than that of last year. The season will open at 9 a.m. November 8 and extend to one-half hour after sunset. On the open lands of the State after the opening day hunting hours will be one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset with the exception of the Public Shooting and Fishing Grounds where the hunting hours from November 10 to December 6 and from December 15 to December 31 will be from 7:30 a.m. to one-half hour after sunset.

In the case of the extended season on grouse, quail and squirrel from January 1 to January 15 the legal hunting hours will be one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset.

An additional opportunity for the licensed hunter of New Jersey to take advantage of hunting opportunity will be the migratory waterfowl season which will open on November 10 and extend through to January 8. The legal hours for hunting waterfowl will be one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset including the opening day.

In addition to the New Jersey hunting license, any duck hunter over 16 years of age is required to purchase a Federal duck stamp. The early migration of wildlife into New Jersey gives indications of being equal to that of 1957, the State Division of Fish and Game reported.

NEW JERSEY OUTDOORS

Methods designed to produce more cover and food for more game birds and animals in New Jersey to offset heavy industrialization, intensive agriculture and expanding suburban developments, are described in the November issue of New Jersey Outdoors, official publication of the State Division of Fish and Game, Department of Conservation and Economic Development.

Lester G. MacNamara, superintendent of Wildlife Management, in a story entitled "Upland Uplift", describes the development of areas of low quality soils for wildlife and public use in southern New Jersey particularly. The comprehensive program is most necessary because the public expects increased populations of game and fish to be available for their use despite reduced area, diminished environment and increased utilization.

"Wings Over the Delaware", a descriptive article on bird life on the river in the vicinity of the State House, by Jerry O'Day is also included in the new edition, as well as "South Jersey, the Hunter's Land of Opportunity" by Alfred S. Jones, district Conservation officer.

Job Situation In Our Area Is Improving

There were 2,900 more people working last month in the Bergen, Morris and Passaic area, than the previous month. However this improvement was still 21,300 below the level for September 1957.

Manufacturing industries increased by 1,400 during the month. Nonmanufacturing industries reported an increase of 1,500 with the trade group gaining 1,100 workers.

HOST — Emcee Bill Wendell fills in for Jack Barry as host of the Monday through Friday daytime quiz, "Tic Tac Dough" on the NBC-TV Network.

STEVE AND HIS BOYS — NBC-TV star Steve Allen shows a copy of the script of his show to his foster-son, Nguyen Van Thong, Vietnamese boy whom Steve supports through the Foster Parents Plan, as Steve's own sons watch. The child was flown to the United States recently by Ralph Edwards' NBC-TV show, "This Is Your Life," to meet his foster father when Steve was the principal subject of the surprise program. The Allen boys are (left to right) Steve Jr., Brian and David.

Her Dress Shop Specializes In Slightly Worn Originals

By ANNE HEYWOOD

MARGARET Meeker tells me of a wonderful dress shop in New York, run by a woman who really does have new ideas. She saw all the wealthy women, who could afford Paris creations and custom-made dresses and hats and who frequently wore them just a few times and got bored with them. On the other hand, she saw many, many women who yearned to have such clothes but couldn't really afford them. Why not get the two together for once?

Fair Exchange

So this woman, whom I shall call Miss K., did just that. She got in touch with women who were known for their fabulous wardrobes and arranged to take their discards—which, as she says, have frequently been worn no more than the dress you buy in the average store, which many have tried on.

"Sometimes," Miss K. says, "we get original French hats which have never been worn. The women try them on, the husbands hate them, and we get elegant hats at far less than they cost!"

No Pressure

In this shop, smart women come to buy the kind of clothes they could never afford. There are hats and coats, suits and dressess, and the most fabulous tea gowns you ever saw. There is no high pressure salesmanship—no pressure at all. Miss K. loves beautiful clothes, and she wants customers to take only what they really love, and what is becoming to them.

It may be true that one half of the world doesn't know how the other half lives. Women like Miss K., with vision, initiative and imagination, can take that old saw, twist it around, and make a living out of it!

Answer to Cross Word Puzzle

on Page 15.

Why is it that a woman who can put a little tiny thread through the invisible eye of a needle has such trouble getting a great big automobile through the gaping door of a garage?

A famous M.C. interviewing a ten-year-old on television, asked what her first act would be if she were elected President of the United States. The youngster gazed at him in stunned horror for a split second, then replied, "Have the voters' heads examined!"

Nowadays when a cowboy star adds a notch to his gun, it just means he got another sponsor.

Spring is the mating season for everything but the golf socks you put away last fall.

A telephone operator answering a call with the usual "Number, please?" heard a voice reply "Duston." "What number, Duston?" asked the operator.

"No number. Just Duston," replied the voice impatiently. And then, since the operator still obviously failed to understand, the voice added: "I'm dustin' the telephone."

"I'm worried, doctor. He hasn't moaned or complained once!"

Heart Fund Drive To Be Headed By Kluger

Nathan Kluger of Paterson has been appointed to head the New Jersey Heart Association's 1954 campaign for funds.

Kluger served as Passaic County Heart Fund Chairman since 1954. During his chairmanship the annual contributions climbed from $25,533 to $56,146.

Kluger accepted the task, saying, "I undertake this assignment with a deep sense of responsibility for I regard the Heart Fund as a symbol of partnership between the public and physicians, joined together to stamp out cardiovascular diseases, responsible for more than half of the deaths in our State and the nation."

Gobi Desert In Red China To Be Made Fertile

According to Communist China's plans the barren Gobi Desert will become a fertile "green belt" by 1965. The Peiping radio broadcast said thousands of canals had been built in the desert and that a sweeping forestation project, covering land usually plagued by sand storms, was being pushed.

By PHILIP KETCHUM

They were half frightened, half defiant Jorgensen kept hammering away at them, but it didn't seem to me that he was getting any place. It was as though he was talking to one person instead of two. Alan Hughes and Kathy Ryan were standing together in this, each supporting what the other said, and each protective of the other.

After a time Jorgensen turned his attention to Mrs. Canning, who had been John Bellamy's housekeeper for a dozen years, but Mrs. Canning seemed too shocked at Bellamy's death to be of much help. This was her night off. She had been at a neighborhood picture show, she had told us, and had returned home just before we arrived and after Bellamy's body had been discovered.

We went into the study where the murder had been committed. Two police technicians were still at work in the study. One looked up and said, "No fingerprints on the gun. It was wiped clean. Do you want it?"

Jorgensen nodded. He took the gun and dropped it in his pocket, then stood staring down at the blanket-covered figure of John Bellamy at the side of the desk.

"What about that wet spot on the carpet?" Jorgensen asked the technician.

"Water," said the technician. "I figured that when Bellamy fell he knocked that vase of flowers off the desk. The vase didn't break. Someone picked it up and put it back on the desk, then mopped up the water with a rag?"

"Any prints on the vase?"

"None. It's been wiped off, too. But there's hardly any water in it. It's heavy glass or it would have broken when it fell."

There was an ash tray on the desk. One of several butts in it showed faint traces of lipstick. Jorgensen had pointed that out to me just after he arrived. A few minutes ago he had offered Kathy Ryan a cigaret, but Kathy had said she didn't smoke. Kathy Ryan had been Bellamy's secretary, living here in the house and working with him on a text book on anthropology. Alan Hughes was Bellamy's nephew.

"What do you think, Bill?" Jorgensen asked suddenly.

"You've still got one person to talk to," I answered. "This woman Bellamy was going to marry. She might have left the cigaret in that tray?"

"What about Alan Hughes or Kathy?"

"They didn't do it."

"You're just a softy, Bill," said Jorgensen, grinning. "You can see they're in love. That blinds you to everything else. Look at it this way. They wanted to get married. Alan didn't have a dime. His uncle was choosing a new wife who would cut him out of his inheritance. Where could you get a more beautiful motive?"

"You're jumping at a conclusion."

"Then figure something better."

I tried to. This was the story Kathy and Alan had told. Alan had come to see Kathy at about eight. They had gone for a drive to talk things over, had returned about ten, and had come to the study to tell Bellamy of their decision to get married. They had found him dead and had telephoned the police. Mrs. Canning had returned from the movie a few minutes later. She had gone to the movie alone but had told Jorgensen what she had seen. It had been a Gary Cooper movie. That could be checked, of course, but I couldn't see what advantage it would be to Mrs. Canning to kill her employer. The most she would get out of it would be a small bequest which couldn't offset the loss of a good job.

An officer came in to tell us that Doreen Lyle had arrived and we went back to the parlor. We had heard of Doreen Lyle from Kathy. She was a tall, statuesque blonde, really something to look at. She wasn't friendly. If she was heartbroken over Bellamy's death, she hid it well. Jorgensen started out asking her the usual things. He got some pretty frosty replies. And some which were corny.

"I loved him," said Doreen. "Why would I have killed him?"

"You loved his money," said Kathy.

"And maybe you did, too," said Doreen. "Maybe you and Alan will get it now." There was a coy bitterness in her tone.

"I've telephoned his attorney," said Jorgensen. "His estate, aside from a few small bequests, goes to endow a chair of anthropology at his university."

"What a waste of money," said Doreen. "If we hadn't put off getting married up until he finished his book—"

Jorgensen gave her a cigaret and lit it for her. Kathy again refused one.

"Did you see him tonight?" he asked.

Doreen shook her head.

"If you did," said Jorgensen, "we'll find out. There's a cigaret butt in an ash tray on his desk with lipstick on it, I think the same lipstick as you use."

Doreen frowned at her cigaret. She flicked the ash to the floor. "All right," she said after a moment, "I did come to see him tonight, at about eight-thirty. I wanted to drag him away from his work, but I couldn't. So I didn't stay. And I didn't kill him."

Jorgensen went on questioning her with Kathy and Alan looking on, and Mrs. Canning wincing every time Doreen flicked an ash from her cigaret to the floor. An officer came into the room and whispered something to Jorgensen, and Jorgensen did an about face as I've seen him do many times before. He turned to Mrs. Canning and said, "Mrs. Canning, you told me you saw a Gary Cooper film at the movie tonight. You didn't. There was a fire in the projection room and part of the Gary Cooper film was burned. Another was shown in its place. If you went to the movie, as you said, what film was shown?"

Mrs. Canning was caught wholly unprepared. She stared at Jorgensen.

"It was like this, wasn't it," said Jorgensen. "If Bellamy had married Doreen, you would have lost your job. A good job. And maybe if Bellamy was going to do any marrying, you thought you were more entitled to be his wife than someone you looked on as a stranger. You didn't go to the show. You stayed here to have it out with Bellamy, and in a fit of anger, you grabbed his gun and shot him. This gun, Mrs. Canning."

Jorgensen showed her the gun and I could see Mrs. Canning crumple. She started blushing out her confession.

It was a clever trick," I said to Jorgensen later. "But after all, it was just a trick."

"Not at all," Jorgensen answered. "I was sure all the time Mrs. Canning was the murderer. The trick was to corner her quickly, catch her off guard, and get a confession."

"But how did you know she was the murderer?"

"Did you notice how she scowled at Doreen for dropping cigaret ashes on the floor?"

"What has that got to do with the case?"

"And the wet spot on the rug in the study?" said Jorgensen. "Who but the housekeeper would have mopped up the water spilled from the vase? No one else would have worried about a detail so insignificant as that. Doreen or Alan or Kathy would have left the vase and water on the floor. But a good housekeeper is always a good housekeeper."

AMERICAN HISTORY

BURGOYNE'S SURRENDER

October 17, 1777 is a great day in American history, marking the decisive victory of the battle of Saratoga.

The British had a big scheme for defeating the American colonies in the summer of 1777. A strong army under General Burgoyne was to sweep down from Canada along the Hudson River. From the south General Howe was to move up the Hudson until the two armies met at Albany. Then the colonies would be split, with New England cut off and the back of the Revolution would be broken. It was a fine scheme — on paper.

General John Burgoyne, known as "Gentleman Johnny," was a brave and able leader. His army of British regulars and Hessians, Canadians and Indians, sailed down Lake Champlain in high spirits. They captured Fort Ticonderoga at the end of June without a fight by scaling a rocky height that overlooked the fort and forcing the garrison to abandon it.

The news of the capture of Ticonderoga caused great rejoicing in England. King George became so excited at the news that he rushed into the Queen's apartment, shouting, "I have beat them! I have beat all the Americans!" He was, of course, crowing too soon.

The fall of Ticonderoga aroused the people of New York and New England as never before. The American forces under General Philip Schuyler gained many recruits. Washington sent some of his best generals, Benedict Arnold, Benjamin Lincoln and Daniel Morgan with his expert Virginia riflemen to join Schuyler.

Resistance to the British increased. They lost many men fighting their slow way onward through the woods and fields of upstate New York. Their supplies dwindled and by August they were suffering hunger. At the foot of the Green Mountains the Americans had stores of supplies in the Vermont village of Bennington. Burgoyne sent a force to capture the stores. But his troops were defeated at the battle of Bennington.

Burgoyne's situation soon became desperate. The Americans were around him on all sides like angry hornets. He longed for word from Howe who was to bring an army up the Hudson to join him according to the original plan. But Howe was far away, marching on Philadelphia, the "rebel capital" he wanted so much.

As Burgoyne's position grew worse he decided to risk a major battle and attacked the Americans, now commanded by General Gates, at Saratoga. Two battles were fought eighteen days apart. At the second battle General Arnold, who had been dismissed by Gates after a quarrel, watched the fighting from a distance until he leaped upon his horse and charged into the battle to the cheers of the Americans. In this battle of Saratoga Arnold was wounded and lost his left leg.

The British were completely defeated. Surrounded and bombarded day and night their position was hopeless. Gates demanded unconditional surrender, but the proud Burgoyne refused. He held out for several days more. On October 17 Gates gave better terms to be accepted at once — or else. To save Burgoyne's feelings the word "surrender" was not used. Instead, the document was called "a convention between Lieutenant General Burgoyne and Major General Gates." To this Burgoyne quickly agreed. It was a complete surrender in all but name.

This capture of a well-equipped and trained British army was a turning point in the Revolutionary War. It helped to bring France into the struggle on the American side. Altogether Saratoga was such an outstanding victory that it ranks among the decisive battles of world history.
