HIS OBJECT IS SUBLIME — Yessiree, that's Tennessee Ernie Ford garbed for the title role of "The Mikado." He will offer excerpts from the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta on "The Ford Show" colorcast on the NBC-TV Network Thursday, April 16. Joining in the innocent merriment are Joanne Burgan (left) and Irene Cummings, two members of the program's singing group, the Top Twenty.

Camp Christmas Seal May Be Sold By County

County Counsel, Nicholas Martini has advised the Board of Freeholders that they may sell or lease the lands and buildings at Camp Christmas Seal, located in Preakness, over the hill from Valley View Sanatorium.

However, Martini advised that no special arrangements can be made for a nominal consideration in the sale or lease arrangement for a charitable, non-profit organization. Martini had reviewed a letter from the New Jersey Association for Retarded Children, Inc., requesting special consideration in a sale or lease arrangement.

Other organizations have also expressed interest in obtaining the Camp site. The camp is no longer used by the county.

Martini also advised the board that it may impose any restrictions desired on use to be made of the land and buildings.

Paterson St. Merchants Oppose Parking Rule

The Paterson City Traffic Supervisor has received a letter from Paterson Street merchants, expressing their strenuous opposition to the new "no parking rule on Paterson Street between Ellison and Market Streets.

Burton B. Wiener, the attorney for the merchants, wrote "we are now definitely assured of the fact that while the traffic does seem to be moving faster, it moves right on past our stores."

Wiener said that tenants have complained bitterly and have advised that if the present conditions continue they will not remain as tenants when their present leases expire.

COUNTY LETTERING ON PROBATION CARS OPPOSED

County Chief Probation Officer, James J. Gourley, has written the Board of Freeholders that he would rather forego the use of county cars assigned to his office, than paint the County lettering on the vehicles.

Gourley said he would resort to the use of privately owned, unlettered cars rather than violates the "privacy and confidentiality" due his clients.

MOSQUITO COMMISSION REQUEST DENIED

The Board of Freeholders has denied the request by the County Mosquito Extermination Commission for a drayline unit to be used in snagging and clearing operations. The equipment would cost about $12,000. The cost of renting the equipment is estimated at more than $140 per day.

Passaic Prohibits Cancer Fund Solicitations In Its Public Schools

The Board of Education of Passaic decided against the recommendation of its acting school superintendent that cancer fund drive solicitations be made among the school children.

Dr. Elmer Holbeck had recommended that the board permit contributions from students, but Commissioner Benjamin Weiss, former board president, insisted that the children should not be embarrassed in this way. Holbeck said that there was no pressure put on the youngsters to donate. Commissioner Murray Laiks disagreed. Laiks stated that the schools usually vie for hundred per cent.

The board considered establishing a policy curbing all solicitations in the school system, but because of the Red Cross and March of Dimes appeals they decided to consider this action at a future meeting.

Self-Employed Must Make Report of Earnings

Are you in business for yourself? Did you net more than $400 in 1958? If your answer to both of these questions is "yes", Stanley J. Fiorelli, manager of the Paterson district office of the Social Security Administration, has an important reminder for you. You are required to file a report of your earnings on separate Schedule C (Farmers use Schedule F) with your 1958 Federal income tax return. The tax on 1958 net earnings is 3½ percent of the first $4,200 and the return must be filed on or before April 15.

For a number of years now self-employed people have been covered by the Social Security Act (self-employed physicians are excepted). This means that they are eligible for the same benefits as wage earners.

The earnings to be reported for self-employed tax are the net earnings from your trade or business or profession. Do not include income from dividends, rentals from real estate, or income from other types of investments on your schedule C.

Social security benefits are based upon the amount of earnings credited to your account. Prompt and accurate returns are therefore of great importance to you.

Additional information about reporting self-employment income may be secured from the local office of the Director of Internal Revenue.

For information regarding social security benefits, contact the local social security office at 245 Market Street, Paterson.

Yellow Perch Abound In South Jersey

Fishermen are hitting a yellow perch jackpot these days in the branches of the Metedeconk River as thousands of the fish come up the stream to spawn, the State Division of Fish and Game has reported.

At Watering Place Branch at Lakewood on the south branch of the Metedeconk River fishermen are reported catching as high as 25 yellow perch an hour in the spring run of the fish to a gate hole below Lake Manetta at Lakewood.

The perch range in size from 8 to 12 inches. Weekend fishing in the area is quite popular but during the week very few fishermen are utilizing the sport.

A fashion show is planned by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Americus Ladies IOOF on April 9, at the YM-YWHA.

Jersey Has Abundant Supply of Rabbits

In order to assure an adequate supply of rabbits for beagle trials on public hunting and fishing grounds, the State Division of Fish and Game, Department of Conservation and Economic Development, has purchased and liberated a number of Cottontails in 17 of the 21 counties of New Jersey.

The animals were distributed on 17 public hunting and fishing grounds and to date several beagle field trials have been held. In each instance, a fine supply of rabbits was reported on hand. The sport of field trialing with beagles and other hounds has grown considerably in New Jersey.

In an effort to make additional animals available to those who follow the sport, distribution was made to the hunting and fishing grounds and also to open land in Atlantic, Burlington, Camden, Cape May, Cumberland, Gloucester, Hunterdon, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Morris, Ocean, Passaic, Salem, Somerset, Sussex and Warren.

Personnel of the Division of Fish and Game report there is an ample supply of cottontail rabbits present in the rural areas of New Jersey to assure a good crop through natural reproduction if good weather conditions continue.

The population of rabbits depends upon natural reproduction plus adequate habitat for this species. Any group wishing to improve the rabbit population can do so by improving habitat rather than relying upon the importation of these animals.

SAGE — The eminent Japanese Buddhist sage, Daisetz Teitaro Suzuki, discusses the mystic philosophy called "Zen" on NBC-TV Network's "Wisdom" series Sunday, April 19.

EAST PATERSON MAY ASK STATE TO PAY FOR RELOCATION OF GANTNER AVENUE SCHOOL

Super highways are disrupting East Paterson's school location according to Gordon Egger, school board president. He has suggested that the state be made to pay for the relocation of the Gantner Avenue School.

Egger said the school is being isolated by super highways erected by the state. The number of students at the school has been decreased by the removal of homes in making way for the Garden State Parkway and the proposed Expressway. After the Parkway was constructed, Egger said, there were not enough students left in the vicinity of the school to fill it. Students in crowder areas had to be transported to the available room. The Expressway will make the situation even worse. The Expressway will run about a block from the school.

The new elementary parochial school, which is now under construction, will be completed in September. School superintendent Thomas Shaheen was instructed to check with the St. Leo's R. C. Church as to how many local students will attend the new school. The purpose is to determine how the allocation of students will be affected and how best to arrange transportation for public school students.

The school board members discussed to problem of how to cut down the cost of transportation, but arrived at no definite solution. It appeared that possibly transportation might have to be limited to elementary students who live over a half mile from the school. It was estimated that this procedure would save about $21,000.

An antique collector passing through a small village stopped to watch an old man chopping wood with an ancient ax. "That's a mighty old ax you have there," he remarked. "Yup," said the villager, "it once belonged to George Washington."

"Not really!" gasped the collector. "It has certainly stood up well." "Of course," admitted the old man, "it's had three new handles and two new heads."

When a man just returned from his vacation complained of the rainy weather he'd had, a friend interrupted, "It couldn't have been so bad—you're sunburned!" "Sunburn nothing," he replied. "That's rust!"

Lady driver: "Yes, but I never flirt when driving."

There is just one thing worse than having to pay income tax, and that is not having to pay any.

RIDGEFIELD PARK FIGHTS FOR FULL VALUE APPRAISALS OF PROPERTY IN BERGEN COUNTY

Ridgefield Park undertook an ambitious program of forcing other Bergen County communities to appraise property at hundred per cent of true value. Ridgefield Park is one of the few communities in the state to comply with a 1957 State Supreme Court order directing all municipalities to assess property at full value. The order was based on a century-old law, which has not been enforced by the communities of the state.

Ridgefield Park has filed suit to enforce sixty-nine other Bergen County municipalities to abide by the law.

Attorneys representing fifteen of the defendant communities were present in Superior Court. William Morrison, the council for Ridgefield Park, undertook the gigantic task of facing all fifteen.

There was one little break in favor of Morrison when William Breslin, representing Fort Lee, admitted that Fort Lee did not appraise at the hundred per cent level. He seemed to agree with the Ridgefield Park position.

Hasbrouck Height's attorney, Ralph Chandless, didn't like Breslin's attitude. He said, "If Mr. Breslin wants to get on a white horse, he should join Mr. Morrison in requiring action on the legislature, and not pick on these poor assessors."

Judge Donald M. Waesche directed lawyers to submit briefs by April 24.

TIME TO SPEAK OUT

Regardless of political parties and all the methods used to gain votes, citizens must continue to work and eat, and industry must produce if jobs are to be provided and our government remain solvent.

It takes more than political slogans to maintain a nation. They mean nothing unless the principles behind constitutional government and a free enterprise are upheld.

Business and industry are awakening to the fact that they must tell their story as persistently and as emphatically as all the agencies that prey upon them if they are to help counteract the forces, both in and out of government, that would scuttle them for political gain.

It is not a question of seeking an advantage for any company but of perpetuating a system of opportunity for all.

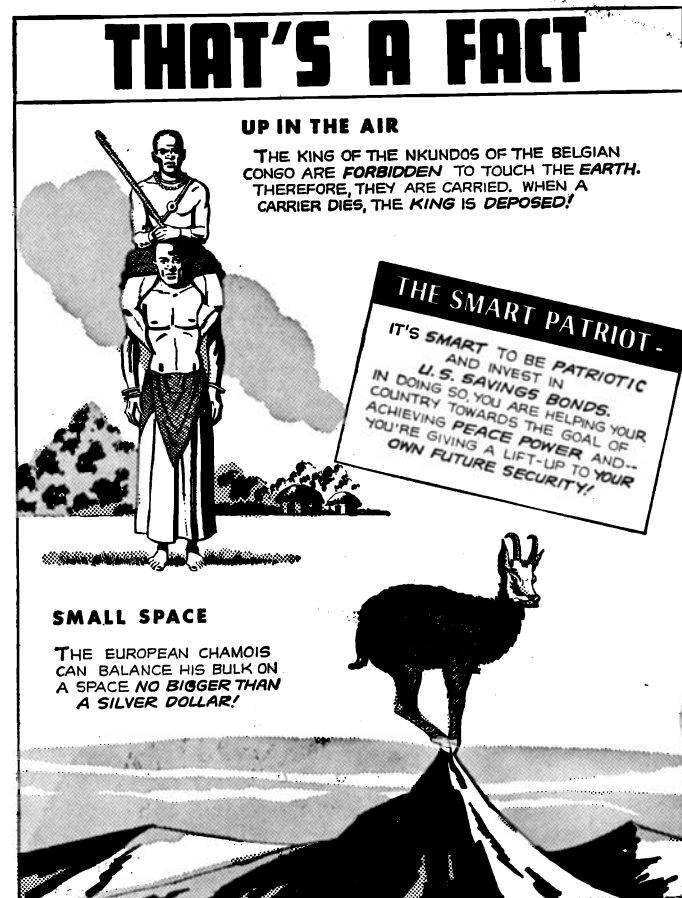

In September, 1956, President Eisenhower called a group of some fifty leaders in American life to the White House and presented a plan. Its aim, he said, was to build a massive system of communications between Americans and the peoples of other countries. This marked the official launching of the People-to-People Program.

The thought behind it was a compelling one. Governments operate on high levels of political, military, economic and diplomatic affairs. But governments are remote and impersonal. So, the President emphasized, Americans outside of government must work out thousands of methods by which people can gradually learn a little bit more of each other. People-to-People, in sum, involves a sort of grass-roots approach to better knowledge and understanding. Additionally, as Secretary Dulles told the original White House group, "You have got the job, and others like you, of making it clear throughout the world that freedom is the preferable form of society."

People-to-People has come a long way since that original meeting. Some forty committees were formed to reach into virtually every phase of American life and activity. These committees have more than 1,100 members, of which 700 represent organizations, associations, clubs and other groups. Their geographical spread blankets the nation, and practically all vocations and professions are represented.

Prior to this, other groups—such as the Lions International and the 4-H clubs—had been conducting comparable activities on a person-to-person or group-to-group basis. The formal People-to-People Program, however, brought these groups into closer contact with each other, and sharpened the focus on the objective of greater international understanding through a multitude of contacts between Americans and other peoples.

In Senator Humphrey's words: "People-to-People efforts at building friendship are not bound by the restrictions and handicaps which encumber official government-to-government dealings, and can often be more effective." And the program is and must be a two-way street. As the Chairman of its Foreign Affairs Committee phrases the matter: "If it is important that the peoples of foreign lands understand the American position, American policies and American way of life, it is equally important that we have similar understanding with respect to other countries."

The Editor Speaks

VINCENT S. PARRILLO

A Broadway theatrical producer complained to me that business has been falling off terribly the last couple of years.

"We fellows don't seem to be able to tell what the public wants," he said. "No matter what we give them they don't seem to fall for it."

"You hit the nail on the head," I replied. "As long as you expect the public to 'fall' for what you give them, they'll refuse to be suckers for your trash."

"What do YOU know about show business?" the producer asked me. "I've been in it for thirty years, I ought to know something about it."

I didn't argue the point any further. The only other thing I told him was to look at his evening paper and note the titles of the stuff they are handing out to the public these days. I also told him about a new play that is being prepared for fall production. It is, I said, a telling example of what is the matter with show business in general.

In other words, even in the title there is SEX. And the whole thing, according to the announcements, will be filled with "sailor and girls."

Our Broadway producers seem to think that as long as there are plenty of legs and plenty of brassieres in a show, that is all that's necessary to fill a theatre.

No wonder people stay home by the millions and look at television, no matter how bad the medium may be. In the first place, television is free. Then, also, in almost every television soap opera, of which there are several every day and night, there are at least a half dozen murders.

There are five persons — male and female alike — who do not prefer six murders to 12 or 14 pairs of legs.

After all, all legs look more or less the same, while each murder has a personality of its own. And on television there are those delightful commercials. Just as the murderer aims his guns, a beautiful movie actress comes on the screen, shampoos her hair right in front of you and tells you, in perfect Brooklyn accent, what a wonderful concoction her particular brand is. Then, when she fades out and the drama comes on again, the victim is as dead as a doornail.

Homes of Invalids To Be Designated in Haledon

Fire Commissioner Thomas Cortese of the Borough of Haledon has announced that decals indicating homes and rooms in which invalids and shut-ins reside will be made available to residents of the borough. These decals will be provided by the Fire Department.

Chief Van Der Jagt said the decals would prove invaluable when fire apparatus rolls up to a house where a decal may be placed. He said firemen will immediately be made cognizant of the presence of an invalid or shut-in, making possible immediate rescue operations.

The decals are printed in fluorescent ink which will glow at night when lights are turned on them. Chief Van Der Jagt said the decals are also being offered on a temporary basis to persons convalescing from a serious illness. He said an accurate filling system will be kept on the locations of all decals.

Persons interested in obtaining the markers may arrange for them by calling Dan Ramella, borough clerk at AR 4-7766, or by writing him at his office, 408 Morrissee Avenue. There is no charge for the service or decals.

Allan Jones, of screen, stage and recording fame, has been signed for the leading role in "Guys and Dolls", a part he played for two years in the National Company, was announced by Helga and Gary McHugh, who with Carl Sawyer are opening the new Meadowbrook Theatre - in - the Round Restaurant, Route 23, Cedar Grove.

Frank Loesser's tune-packed show based on stories by Damon Runyon, opens at the Meadowbrook April 21. The show will run through May 10.

The handsome star who soared from a coal mining job in Scranton, Pennsylvania, at 58 cents an hour to a Command Performance before the Queen of England, turned down several engagements in order to accept the top role in the gala rebirth of the Meadowbrook.

"We're thrilled at having Jones with us for our inaugural show," said McHugh.

It was strictly mutual since Mr. Jones' reaction to the opening was, "This terrific new idea in show business of having the full course dinner, followed by the Broadway Calibre Musical Comedy, and then your dancing under one roof is the coming thing. These producers have set the price for all this so low that everyone can enjoy it."

"Playing in-the-Round is real great for the performers too," added the star. "We'll feel that we're doing the show for each individual patron."

Jones made his Hollywood film debut with the Marx Brothers in "A Day at the Races." He also played opposite Irene Dunne in "Showboat", with Mary Martin in "The Life of Victor Herbert", and co-starred with Jeanette MacDonald in "The Firefly", the picture in which he made famous "The Donkey Serenade".

Eight performances are scheduled each week, Tuesday thru Sunday evenings, with matinees on Wednesday and Sunday afternoons. The evening dinner service will start at 7 P. M., with curtain time at 8:30 and dancing from 10:30. There will be no table service during the performance.

The honest man

By LOUIS ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM

The provincial authorities, notably the Department of Justice, who had trod most warily all through the dynamite-charged course of Jobin Ladouceur's arrest, his trial and condemnation, still acted shrewdly in not announcing the day of his release from the gloomy prison of St. Michel Archange.

They did not turn him loose as they would have an ordinary criminal. Far from it. They gave him a royal send-off and it was stated in certain quarters that some of the staff and the convicts wept at the prospect of being deprived of one who had endeared himself utterly to all with whom he came in contact. In fact, the prison was as unwilling to lose Jobin Ladouceur as had been his own people in the little town of St. Berthold de Carrington when the Law had adjudged him guilty of the crime of theft and embezzlement and given him five years — shortened to three — to expiate the sin of which he declared and reiterated his complete innocence.

It was easily one of the most intriguing and certainly one of the most sensational trials in the history of the province. The press seized on it with screams of ecstasy. He was another Alfred Dreyfus; he was Monte Cristo, the Prisoner of Zenda — he was each and every man who had ever languished in prison to expiate a crime he did not commit. Even when the Law, deaf to all the howls of protest, had locked the door safely on poor little Jobin, the clamor, though diminishing over the years, kept up. "Why is this innocent man left to eat out his heart in durance vile for a crime he never committed?" "Does Justice sleep forever in the case of Jobin Ladouceur?"

The press had wind of his release but no one knew the exact date. The prison authorities were mum and when the day did come and a sad farewell was said to Jobin, they drove him in the warden's private car — a big Cadillac — to a station ten miles away and let him off a few blocks from the depot.

A few minutes later, Jobin Ladouceur — a free man at last — boarded the train, headed straight and true as a homing-pigeon for the town that had furnished his Calvary. That was like Jobin; he was not one to hide himself, to go skulking off to some lost corner of the world to begin anew. Not he! Like the honest and innocent man he was, he went right back to the scene of his downfall, head up, dark eyes proud and fearless.

On the train some few recognized him from his pictures that had been so often displayed in the press, and rushed up to shake his hand, to gaze on him admiringly, to tell him that they had never for a moment doubted his innocence and that they wished him all happiness and prosperity.

To this, Jobin gently bowed his silver-white head and gave back his most gentle smile. The years in prison had destroyed none of the gentleness of his face. The features were those of a saint, an anchorite — not those of a man who had stolen a fortune, who, as a trusted employe, of La Banque Imperiale, had violated his firm's confidence and used his high position to steal a sum that was estimated at over $100,000.

The facts of the case that had caused such a furore were really of the simplest. Jobin Ladouceur was manager of the St. Berthold de Carrington branch of La Banque Imperiale where, as a boy, he had started in sweeping the floors and running errands. For ever twenty years he had held the honored position and built for himself, in the bank and in the township such a reputation for honesty, decency, charity and all-around goodness, as few men anywhere had ever before achieved.

Was this, then, the kind of man who would rifle vault and safe-deposit boxes of a fortune, tie himself up and expect to bamboozle the public into believing that it was all the work of criminals and safe robbers who had forced their way into his home and, at gun's point, compelled him to go with them to the bank adjoining, open the vault and the safe-deposit boxes, thus enabling them to make off with this huge sum of money? People laughed at the idea.

Fantastic! Such silly nonsense! Monsieur Jobin rob his own bank or any bank! Bon Dieu! As soon accuse the king of stealing the crown jewels. Why — anyone who knew Jobin at all could tell you that such a thing was simply impossible. That quiet, lovable little man, adored by everyone who knew him, the elders, the children, the very dogs of the township —

But the big city detectives were suspicious of Jobin from the start. No use to tell them what sort of man he was, of what a saintly life he led. You could tell them all that, but they dug up what they called proof that Jobin had, in boyhood, run away with a circus and had worked with the handcuff wing and there learned to tie himself up in real professional style.

Also, those foolish policemen said that Jobin, when he went to Montreal, was up to some pretty wild tricks; they even found a blonde, a Mademoiselle Mimi Laforge, who was supposed to have been a great friend of his — such utter foolishness! In St. Berthold, Jobin was known for his sacred attitude towards women.

The udder threw out a lot of the stuff they dug up to try to besmirch Jobin's character, but, Mon Dieu, the scientific lengths those detectives went to in order to pin the crime on poor Jobin — fingerprints, heel-prints, hairs of his head — the spiderweb they wove about him. The jury found him guilty.

What an outcry! In the bargain, there was no sign of the money — not a dollar, not a nickel of it, could be found. How did these smart police explain that then? Poor Jobin still stuck to his story of the robbers and the pistol and he took his sentence like a man and a martyr. No end of petitions were got up for Jobin, and finally the Department of Justice not only agreed to his release but all but promised to pardon him.

So here, at last, was Jobin Ladouceur, sitting quietly in a day coach bound for home and the welcome of those who had never for an instant ceased to believe in his innocence.

Word of his coming got ahead. The plaza in front of the railway station was jammed by the thousands who had turned out to welcome him. A great banner was strung across the street — it read — "Welcome to the innocent." There was a band; the mayor was there, the cure, the members of Parliament. There were speeches and a banquet and in the quiet golden light of early evening Jobin Ladouceur was driven to the hilltop, to his favourite haunt, where so often he used to sit with his book and his pipe, and shown the eternal testimony of his townsmen's faith in him.

There it stood, a cairn of granite, beautifully cut and shaped by the stone masons from the big quarry of St. Berthold; on it the inscription:

One of the few monuments
Ever erected to the living,
This cairn stands forever
To do honor to an honest man —
Jobin Ladouceur.

All through the roaring welcome, little Jobin had borne up well and the gentle smile had never left his lips. Now, however — now at the sight of this massive thing of granite he broke down and cried unashamedly and hundreds wept with him, not knowing that Jobin wept because, by fate's cruellest quirk, his dear friends had set twenty tons of granite, plump, fair and square on the spot where he'd buried the money.

This Week In AMERICAN HISTORY

BY WILLIAM BRODIE

PAUL REVERE'S MIDNIGHT RIDE

In Boston on the night of April 18, 1775 hundreds of British troops marched silently across the Commons toward the inner bay. Sharp eyes and ears discovered the secret of the mysterious troop movements.

About ten o'clock that night Dr. Joseph Warren, chairman of the Massachusetts Committee of Safety, summoned Paul Revere and told him to cross the Charles River and ride in warning to Lexington and Concord. Samuel Adams and John Hancock were hiding in Lexington, and a few miles farther on, in Concord, military stores had been collected. Warren said that he was also sending William Dawes, another express rider, over the land route to Concord by way of Boston Neck and Roxbury.

Paul Revere, a forty-year-old silversmith, goldsmith and copper engraver, was a trusted messenger in the patriot cause. Tonight he was called for a task that was to bring him everlasting fame. He arranged with friends to be ready to signal him by lantern from the tower of Old North Church on the direction of the British movements. "One light if by land, and two if by sea, while I on the opposite shore will be."

Accompanied by two friends, Joshua Bentley and Thomas Richardson, Paul Revere reached a hidden skiff and was rowed across the Charles River. There is a legend that the oars were muffled by the still warm flannel petticoat of a girl patriot. The skiff glided, apparently unseen, under the very stern of His Majesty's Ship Somerset anchored in mid-stream.

Reaching the Charleston shore, Revere waited, a borrowed horse by his side, while his companions returned to Boston. About eleven o'clock his straining eyes saw one lantern, then another, glimmering in Old North's steeple. That meant that the British were crossing in boats to Lechmere Point at the Cambridge shore.

Revere swung into the saddle and galloped off on his famous "midnight ride." He had three hours start on the main British force. The Cambridge road being blocked by patrols, he raced off through Medford, arousing the countryside as he went. Here he stopped to pound on a door, there to chuck gravel at a window, and at every house he shouted, "The British are coming!" Each halt was brief. The man he had awakened would be alert.

By midnight Paul Revere reached Lexington and came to the house of the Rev. Jonas Clark where Hancock and Adams were sleeping. Guards at the door warned him not to disturb the sleeping men with his noise. "Noise!" cried Paul Revere. "You'll soon have noise enough! The regulars are coming!" Warned in time, the two patriot leaders made their escape.

William Dawes arrived in Lexington about a half hour later and joined Revere. After a hasty snack they both pushed on to Concord, accompanied by young Dr. Samuel Prescott of Concord who had been courting a Lexington girl that evening. In a field near Concord the three were stopped by a British patrol. Dawes and Prescott escaped and dashed on to Concord, but Revere was cornered and held.

He managed to talk his captors into releasing him and they sent him back to Lexington on foot. So ended Paul Revere's famous ride. He had accomplished his mission ably. By dawn, grim-faced men, musket in hand, were assembling, ready to resist and fire the shots that were to usher in the American Revolution.
