Basic Production Hits New High

The level of basic production activity lately has been going from one new all-time high to another via a zigzag line. The latest week was one in which the index retreated from the June peak. Dips in output of electric power and paperboard, and in miscellaneous carloadings, more than offset gains in production of steel and lumber and in other carloadings.

The consensus of professional economists appears to be that the summer quarter of 1959 will be one of continued heavy consumer buying, fully supporting industrial production which may be little changed from the level of the second quarter. Numerous forecasters say the fourth quarter will bring rising tendencies in both output and consumption, and that in all probability the expected autumn bulge will become evident in the second half of the summer quarter.

Mr. and Mrs. Carmine Spagnola of 266 East 16th Street, were honored on their 25th wedding anniversary by a surprise dinner party.

1960 Proclaimed "Visit U. S. A. Year"

President Eisenhower has proclaimed 1960 as "Visit U. S. A. Year". A perfect prelude. in the view of Representative Porter of Oregon, would be to repeal World War II 10 per cent excise tax on passenger fares. As he sees it, it's an anachronism to keep the tax on the books when every effort is being made to encourage travel within this country.

Eggs Prices Recover After 18-Year Low

The average wholesale price of eggs hit an 18-year low early in June. In the last half of the month, however, eggs prices staged the sharpest price advance for that period in more than 10 years. A contributing factor was stepped up buying by Federal priceproppers. In recent days, the U. S. government has cut its buying, planning to get out of the market if the price structure shows firmness without Federal help.

Mental Health Ass'n Supports State's Aid Law

The New Jersey Association for Mental Health pledged its support to the State in helping to implement the recently adopted Assembly Bill 125, which will provide special educational services for emotionally disturbed children.

Mr. Bernard G. Goldstein of Paterson, State president of the association, said:

"We feel this legislation is potentially the most important adopted in the mental health field in New Jersey since passage of the Community Mental Health Services Act of 1957. Our Association is proud to have had a part in initiating and developing both pieces of legislation."

"This new law will strengthen the community's preventive efforts against mental and emotional disorders among our youth and also make possible an educational experience for emotionally disturbed or troubled children who are educable."

"At the same time the bill carries no appropriation and none is included in the annual appropriations bill for 1959-60."

"Also, since there is no census count which can be made at this time to ascertain how many pupils might be involved, and hence no exact estimate as to the final cost of the bill's implementation, it is probable that the implementation of the bill will have to be on an experimental or pilot project basis until the need for appropriations can be determined, and the appropriations actually made."

"The bill itself establishes the principle of State aid to local school districts to provide for special grouping in school for children with emotional or social adjustment problems, remedial instruction, counselling or guidance, case work with pupils at home or school instruction given individually or in small groups, and referral to other agencies or facilities for special services."

The Mental Health Association is the only citizen voluntary health movement devoted to fighting the entire problem of mental illness, which afflicts one of every twelve persons. Its programs of research, legislation, education, counselling, promotion of clinics and hospital and community services are supported by the annual Mental Health fund drive.

Felix R. Breyer of Wayne was elected as the association's president at a recent meeting. He succeeds Rev. Theodore W. Boltz of Passaic, who has served for the past two years.

ELEANOR OKMA is recipient of the Haledon Rotary Club scholarship award, and accepts the gift from Joseph Gorab, chairman of the organization's scholarship committee. Infanger, past president; Martin Beversluis, committee members; Marie Hoogerheide, Eastern Christian High School; Rotary President George Vermeulen, and Joseph Albanese, committee member. The award winner is a student at Eastern Christian High School.

ACTRESS ELIZABETH TAYLOR and her husband, singer Eddie Fisher, leave London Airport. They were about to emplane for Gibraltar to make a film on location at the end of their honeymoon. From Gibraltar they intend going to Tangiers for a holiday.

Social Security Benefits Are Broadened

Stanley J. Fiorelli, manager of the Paterson Social Security district office, announced that the amendments to the Social Security Act provide monthly payments to dependents of disabled workers who are receiving social security disability benefits.

Payments may now be made to the following dependents of the disabled worker:

1. Unmarried children under age 18;
2. Disabled children over 18 if their disability began before age 18, and they are unmarried at the time of application;
3. A wife over 62 years of age;
4. A wife of any age, provided the wife has in her care a child entitled to benefits;
5. A dependent husband age 65 or older.

Fiorelli emphasized that benefits to dependents are not paid automatically, but that an application must always be filed. The applications for dependents of those presently receiving disability benefits are retroactive to September 1958, provided these applications are filed before the end of September 1959. If possible the disabled worker and his wife should visit their social security office together, and bring with them proof of age for the wife if she is 62 years of age or older, birth records of all children under 18, and proof of age of any disabled children. Also, proof of age for a dependent husband past 65 is necessary.

It will greatly assist in the processing of dependents' claims if the required proofs are obtained before contacting the social security office to file application. It would also be helpful if the disabled person would bring with him a copy of the disability award notice. In any event, Fiorelli added, even if proofs are not immediately available, an application should be filed on time in order to avoid loss of benefits. The local social security office is located at 245 Market Street, Paterson.

ALASKA BEING COUNTED IN

Because Alaska "has the beginnings, but only the bare beginnings" of an oil industry, legislation is needed to increase the amount of public land acreage which may be held under lease or option, according to Senator Ernest Gruening. He, in company with Senator Bartlett, have introduced a bill to raise the limitation from a total of 300,000 acres to one million.

ACTRESS ARLENE DAHL, right, back before camera after a three year absence, shows signs of relief after her 18-month old son, Lorenzo, center, showed up on the set of "A Journey To The Center Of The Earth," in which Miss Dahl stars with Pat Boone. Miss Dahl was concerned because Lorenzo, an animal lover, spotted Gertrude, a duck which is in the movie. There was no need for concern, however, the duck and Lorenzo struck it off well.

Nearly 11,000 Drivers Licenses Revoked

During one week in June 97 New Jersey residents lost their automobile drivers licenses under the 60-70 Speed Revocation Program. The licenses of 323 non-resident motorists were also revoked during this time.

Since the first of the year 3,592 resident drivers and 7,107 non-resident operators have had their driving privileges revoked under the program.

The home-state motor vehicle departments of the non-resident motorists have been notified of the revocations. Local police departments of resident violators have also been advised.

Drivers from New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Delaware lost their licenses.

Automobile Sales Higher Than Expected

The American public has been buying news cars at a rate exceeding most industry expectations. As a result, many executives in the industry now look for 1959 sales surpassing by 3 or 4 per cent the earlier informal estimate of six million units, a figure which included 500,000 foreign cars.

Wholesale Commodity Prices Advance Slightly

The government index of wholesale commodity prices advanced 0.2 in the latest week to 119.6 per cent of its 1947-49 average. Higher price tendencies were visible in both farm products and processed foods. There was no net change in the average price level of industrial commodities.

CHAOS IN FUND RAISING

Philanthropy, as Newsweek points out in a feature article in its issue of June 15, is a big business in this country. It runs to some $6 billion a year. Most of the money comes from such sources as bequests, grants and endowments. But a cool $250 million is raised by charity drives.

This speaks well for the generosity of the American people. They want to help the unfortunate, and they do. Many freely donate their time, as volunteer collectors, as well as their money. But, in late years, the charity drives have been running into a growingly difficult problem — simply because there are so many of them. Thus, Newsweek aptly titles its article "The Fund-Raising Muddle."

The magazine quotes a young matron who is typical of legions of Americans. Pointing to a pile of forms, she said: "Look at them. Appeals, brochures, donations blanks — everything you can think of. Fund-raising drives. I've collected money for every fund you ever heard of. I've solicited for every disease that afflicts mankind except beriberi. But now I'm through. I resign. I quit."

There are about three million people, volunteers all, who engage in fund raising — and this figure, of course, does not include the professionals who are associated with the charitable foundations. And thousands of them, Newsweek finds, "are in revolt against the ever-increasing number of fund-raising drives for which they are asked to work."

Dallas is cited as an example. Like all communities, it has an annual Community Chest drive, to raise money for a large number of charities and other causes all at once. But, in addition, 81 separate drives for funds were held in the city last year — including, in addition to organizations fighting disease, appeals by service clubs, by a junior league baseball association, by a labor council, and by a football game fund.

The people who give as well as those who collect are, under such circumstances, getting restive. A young San Francisco professional man is quoted as saying: "It seems like every time I turn around, there's a hand out. I get it in the office, and I get it at my doorstep . . ." And the obvious danger is that, if this attitude becomes general, the worthiest and most essential health foundations and relief agencies will be hurt along with the less worthy.

The United Fund idea was supposed to largely solve this problem of multiplicity. By putting all the eggs in one basket, it was reasoned, resistance and irritation would be reduced. However, some of the biggest and most important of the health groups — including those battling cancer and heart disease most serious of all killers — simply do not want their drives lumped in helter-skelter with others and will not permit it. They have good reason for their stand. They have found that they can raise more money and thus advance their work faster and farther, by going it on their own. Many people, clearly, have a direct and personal interest in the fight against some particular disease. They will give more generously and willingly to help that specific cause than to a campaign which is of a catch-all character.

Little or no progress has been made in solving the problem. "But," Newsweek concludes, "as the big appeals prepare today for the fun-drives to come this fall, the big campaigners are agreed that a solution must be found. The chaos in fund-raising is steadily getting worse — and it has reached the point where it is beginning to hurt. Americans are beginning to say: 'No!'"

HELP !

The Editor Speaks

VINCENT S. PARRILLO

Do you have the same experience that I have? Do you, every time you read a medical book or article, have every symptom described therein?

I don't care whether it's inflammation of the gezubra or streptocology — I have the symptoms. Furthermore, nine times out of ten your doctor will tell you that you haven't got what you think you have, that there is nothing the matter with you except imagination, and that you'd better go home and read something beside medical articles.

I just read two articles. One of the articles was about Hysteria, the other about Hallucinations. The first article said that hysteria is often related to the digestive tract and is common among American Indians. I am no American Indian, so that part did not bother me. But as soon as I read the article I felt a severe pain in my stomach. Could it be hysteria, I wondered, or just the fact that we had sourkraut for dinner the night before? I got dressed to go to the doctor.

When the car started I noticed that my pain was all gone and I could not think of anything else to see the doctor about. So I took a ride instead.

The second article disturbed me even more. It is the one that dealt with "hallucinations." "To see something that is not normally there," it said, "to imagine an object in a different shape than it actually exists, or to sense or perceive anything not objectively real, is known as an hallucination."

Just think how frequently YOU have been an object of hallucination! For instance, how often have you seen money in your bank account (or in the offering) when it wasn't there at all? So you went out and spent a lot of that imaginary dough that never came.

A third article mentioned a wonder drug for headaches and seasickness. It's called diethylenediamine dihydrochloride. As soon as I can pronounce it I am going to get me some.

Mortgage Loans Rise At First National Bank

The recent statement of the First National Bank of Passaic County shows an increase of over $4,200,000 in mortgage loans outstanding compared with last year. These real estate mortgage loans which are largely for the purchase of homes rose from $51,921,000 to $56,127,000 over the past year. Other types of loans declined slightly from $76,077,000 to $54,941,000. Deposits remained at approximately the same figure of $216,000,000; while capital funds rose from $15,601,000 to $16,159,000.

First National Bank operates seventeen offices in Passaic County — seven of which are in Paterson, two in Clifton, and one each in Bloomingdale, Mountain View, Pompton Lakes, Preakness, Ringwood, Borough of Totowa, Wanaque Borough and West Milford.

N. J. Dairy Industry Presents Awards

Three New Jersey dairy farmers shared the dairy industry's top "level production" awards last Thursday evening at Rutgers University. The awards were presented at the annual award banquet held at the university culminating the state-wide June Dairy Month activities.

Fred W. Janssen of Short Hills, president of the New Jersey Milk Industry Association, presented trophies to James B. Hooven of Lambertville, Carroll L. Pettit, Jr. of Woodstown, and William Cowperthwait of Medford. The ceremony took place at the banquet. Over 500 industry leaders were in attendance. The awards were presented by the Milk Industry for keeping milk production in line with the sales needs.

The association "level production" award is presented annually to those producers who have done the best job of producing milk in line with sales needs. This is a difficult, and frequently a costly task for dairy farmers. Failure to produce milk in keeping with sales demands is the primary cause of milk surpluses and shortages so common to the industry.

Milk production is normally much higher in the spring than during the rest of the year. In contrast to this, milk sales show only slight variations from month to month.

Various other prizes were awarded at the dinner, consisting of merchandise.

More than 2,000 milkmen from leading milk distributor organizations in New Jersey participated in the contest.

ALASKA'S GOVERNOR EGAN, just having presented the first official 49 star flag in Alaska to the color guard, watches as it is raised in Sitka. Sitka, the first territorial capital of Alaska, was Egan's first stop in a full day of activity.

ACTOR JOHN CALVERT and seven other persons were reported in distress aboard his disabled yacht "Sea Fox". Aboard with Calvert is his wife, actress Ann Cornell.

HONEYMOONING IN THE WEST INDIES

MR. AND MRS SEDAT PESHHOPIAS are photographed near the lobby at the Arawak Hotel, Jamaica, British West Indies, where they are honeymooning. Mrs. Peshkopia is the former Miss Jeannette Shaplo. The couple will reside at 157 Brown Avenue, Prospect Park, on their return.

Many Spectators Attend Marine Court Hearings

Resort visitors are becoming "spectator sportsmen" this season by attending the New Jersey Marine Navigation Court while boating violations are heard.

Frank V. Walsh, Jr., who presides, says, "On summer evenings when charges are heard there are often a considerable number of spectators. Sometimes a group of young people attend because an acquaintance has been charged with reckless boat operation or some other violation. Others seem to regard the Marine Court as one of the interesting spectacles of the vacation area."

Occasionally, the Judge admits, some of the audience become so partisan that he has to silence them, but usually they listen with absorbed interest. Most "popular" court sittings for spectators are those along the seashore and at Lake Hopatcong. "Of course, they are welcome whenever hearing are scheduled," he added.

The Marine Navigation Court, which is unique and often studied by other states with similar water enforcement problems, began experimentally in 1955 as a supplement to existing courts and particularly for cases where precise jurisdiction was in doubt because of uncertain boundaries on the water.

For the first two seasons, the magistrate was Peter J. Gannon, chief of the State Bureau of Navigation. Since then Judge Walsh has been the presiding officer.

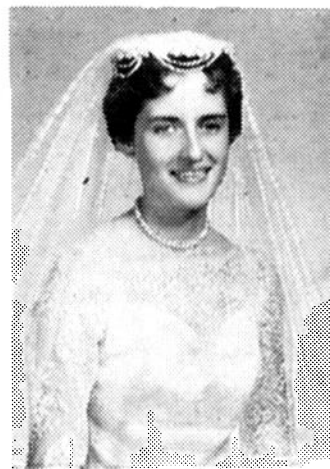

MRS. THOMAS HANRAHAN

Miss Barbara Mae Miller and Thomas Frank Hanrahan were married in the Van Riper - Ellis Memorial Church recently. Rev. Richard P. Camp officiated at the afternoon ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Miller of Fair Lawn, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Hanrahan, also of Fair Lawn. A reception took place at Kohler's Swiss Chalet in Rochelle Park. The couple will reside at 51 Second Avenue, Hawthorne, after their return from honeymoon at Chesapeake Bay.

MRS. JOSEPH CRISCIONE

The marriage of Miss Marta Domicolo of 84 Haledon Avenue, to Joseph Criscione was performed recently in St. Anthony's R. C. Church. The Rev. John Divizia officiated at the afternoon ceremony. A reception followed in the church hall. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Domicolo. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carmelo Criscione of Italy. The couple will reside at 564 Summer Street after their honeymoon.

MRS. ROBERT J. ADAIR

At a four o'clock ceremony in the North Haledon Presbyterian Church, Miss Tryna De Hope was united in marriage with Robert J. Adair. Dr. R. C. Comfort performed the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James De Hope of North Haledon, and the groom is the son of Mr. and the Mrs. Adair of Hawthorne. The couple went to Florida for a honeymoon.

VACATION TIME

...AFTER SPENDING A VERY PLEASANT
VACATION AT THE SEASHORE AND BURNED
TO A CRISP, YOU MEET YOUR OLD
PAL CHARLIE WHO GIVES YOU THAT USUAL GREETING...

While on vacation last summer at a lake in Mississippi we got into conversation with an old-timer who rented boats. When we asked him if many people used his boats for fishing, he drawled, "Well, yes, some people fish." Then: "And some people catch fish." After a pause he added, "And some people just drown the worms."

At a Horn & Hardart automat during the breakfast rush the man ahead of me asked the server for the lone piece of dried-up French toast left in the warming tray. She refused to give it to him, telling him firmly that a fresh batch would be along any minute. Just as firmly the man replied that he would take it anyway. The woman, adamant, said he must wait for the fresh toast. Exasperated, the man retorted, "Look, lady, if I'd wanted a fight for breakfast, I'd have stayed home!"

"Are you sure 'crepes suzettes' mean baked beans?"

New Jersey Enforces Its Shell Fish Laws

Six shell fish licenses were recently revoked for periods up to ninety days. The revocations followed recommendations by the Atlantic Coast Council after hearings were held on charge of violations of State shell fish laws.

Robert Van Pelt lost his license for ninety days for taking shellfish from condemned areas. Reuben Hartsgrrove also lost his license for ninety days for illegally dredging clams. George Pheiffer lost his license for ninety days for possession of a "rockingchair" dredge.

Christopher H. Riley, director of the division of shell fisheries says the 300-pound dredge, somewhat resembling a gigantic rocking chair, is particularly damaging to shellfish beds.

New Jersey laws are designed to protect our valuable shell fish industry. Illegal dredging of the kind practiced by these violators may damage the beds for a long period of time.

The story sweeping Miami Beach is of the New Yorker who arrived at the height of the season and was told not a room was available. "There must be a room. There always is," the man said.

"No," the desk clerk insisted.

"Look," said the man, "if you heard that Eisenhower was coming, you'd find a room. Right?"

"Right, for Eisenhower," said the clerk.

"Well, the President can't come," said the man, "so let me have his room."

Domestic Scene: No doubt about it—a woman's best beauty aid is a near-sighted man.

Best Looking Girl In Town

BY THYDA SAMTER WINSLOW

From the time she was thirteen Rilla Mabry had been ashamed of her appearance. It was then that she started shooting up higher than the other girls. She was awkward as well as tall and she was too thin.

By the time she was twenty she was fully convinced that her appearance was really something terrible. All of the other girls seemed little and cute and attractive. No matter what Rilla wore it seemed wrong. There was too much of her to wear tailored clothes. And thin dresses hung around her in folds.

All of the boys and girls in the crowd liked Rilla. She was a fine girl — if you could forget the way she looked. Even her hair was wrong — sort of stringy — but she had a pleasant and rather attractive face.

In spite of her looks Rilla had a boy friend. He was Patrick Redding and his father kept a grocery store. Pat wasn't any great catch — but then you really couldn't expect Rilla, with her looks, to do any better. Folks felt that Rilla ought to be well satisfied. Pat was a nice looking boy, and he certainly wasn't to be sneezed at.

Rilla didn't sneeze at Pat. She was grateful to him for being nice to her. She was as jolly and as friendly as she could be. As a matter of fact she liked Pat a lot. He was fun to be with. She'd have been perfectly satisfied except for the fact that she was in love with Shane Tennant. Which did her a lot of good — for Shane was the catch of the town. Shane's father was a banker — and rich. His mother was a social leader of the town. Shane was tall — much taller than Rilla — and handsome, besides.

Pat went into the grocery with his father. Shane went into the bank. That's the way sons do in small towns unless they have definite ideas about law or one of the other professions. Rilla didn't do anything. Her folks had just enough money so she didn't have to work. She went to parties with Patrick — and admired Shane from a distance. The town folks felt that she would marry Pat, that he'd take over his father's grocery store and that they'd settle down.

That might have happened if it hadn't been for Leslie Durant. Leslie Durant was — and still is — a well known illustrator. And he came to Morrisville to visit an aunt. And got taken to all of the parties, of course. The social lion of the season. He stayed in town three days — but that was long enough for a lot to happen.

He saw Rilla Mabry! Rilla was standing near the door — and she was looking at Shane Tennant. She never knew how much her face showed what she was thinking about. No one else noticed — but Durant, being new, took in the situation. He saw Rilla standing not quite straight because she didn't feel quite as tall that way, in a badly fitted dress and her hair not quite smooth — and he saw Shane, perfectly groomed — for Morrisville — self-confident, good looking. And then Pat came to ask Rilla to dance.

Durant made his remarkable statement. He declared to anyone who would listen to him, that Rilla Mabry was by far and away the best looking girl in town. One of the best looking girls he'd ever seen.

Rilla had never had a compliment about her looks before. She had always been shy, self-conscious and often miserable about her appearance. And here, the first authority on beauty who had ever been in town, acclaimed her as the prize.

When Durant himself, told her what he thought of her she was filled with confusion. She managed to stammer her thanks. And later, very shyly, she went up to him.

"I do wish you'd tell me how I can look better," she said.

"I'm not suited for the task of lily-gilding," he told her, "but maybe if we got together—"

They got together the next morning. Durant came to Rilla's house, and, with Rilla's mother acting as helper, they did things to Rilla and Rilla's clothes. Durant made her stand up straight. And rearranged her hair. And told her what was wrong with the clothes she wore.

That night there was a dance for Durant — his last evening in town. And, as he had thought when he started things, Rilla was, for the first time in her life, the belle of the ball. Toward the end of the evening Durant had the satisfaction of seeing Shane Tennant dancing with her. Shane Tennant, whom Rilla had looked at with longing eyes — and who had paid no attention to her.

Durant went back to his home in New York. And forgot all about the whole thing. And years passed. And the sequel happened just the other day.

Durant was lunching alone at a restaurant when an attractive, tall woman, past her first youth, came up to him.

"You don't remember me," she said.

Durant didn't remember her.

"I'm Rilla Tennant — I was Rilla Mabry when you knew me. You came to my home town and — and sort of made my life over. Remember now?"

"Of course I do," said Durant. I remember very well. I played God! It was my one attempt at it."

"You did a wonderful job!" said Rilla. There was a curious note in her voice he didn't understand.

"You married the boy you were in love with, I see. His name was Tennant, wasn't it?"

"Why, yes," said Rilla. "But how did you remember the name? And how did you know I was in love with him?"

"I'm good at names. And I saw you looking at him. Simplicity itself? And to think that I was the cause!" He preened a little.

"Yes, you were," said Rilla. "It was very funny, now, when you look back on it. There I was, going with Pat Redding and in love with Shane. And terribly ill at ease and awkward. And you came down and said I was a beauty — so automatically I became a beauty. And the boys all rushed me. And I married Shane."

"Wonderful!" said Durant. And he beamed. "How are you getting along now?" he asked, as an afterthought. Even a guy likes to know that his work was well done.

"That's the catch," said Rilla. "You shouldn't have asked."

Shane and I married — and didn't get along any too well. Though I was awfully happy in the beginning. The Tennants lost all of their money in the depression — and my family had its money in the Tennant bank by that time, so our money went, too. Then Shane fell in love with a chorus girl. I got a divorce, of course. I've been teaching in a girls' school for the past three years."

"That's too bad!" said Durant, and began to feel inflated. "But maybe that was better than marrying that other boy whom you didn't love."

"Maybe," said Rilla. "You can never tell. Love goes . . . Patrick Redding took over his father's grocery store — and married the cutest girl in town. They have three children and are very happy. And, oh yes, he developed an ambitious streak and started a chain of grocery stores. Now he's the richest and most important man in town."

—BY WILLIAM BRODIE—

BRADDOCK'S DEFEAT

Major General Edward Braddock could be proud of his army as it crossed the Monongahela River on the morning of July 9, 1755. He had with him such famous regiments as the Coldstream Guards, dressed as for parade in their scarlet and gold uniforms, their arms burnished like silver. No finer troops had ever been seen in the American colonies than these British regulars marching through the woods of western Pennsylvania to capture Fort Duquesne from the French.

Braddock's army of more than 2,000 men also had some colonial militia, but these troops he regarded with contempt. Yet for all his dislike of colonials, Braddock had one of them as an aide on his staff, a young man of 23 named George Washington, whose ability Braddock had been quick to recognize.

The French had built Fort Duquesne on a commanding spot at the junction of the Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers, the present site of Pittsburgh. Braddock, commander of British forces in America, set out to capture this strategic fort. He assembled his force at Fort Cumberland, now Cumberland, Maryland, and started out during the first week of June on the march through the wilderness.

Hundreds of axmen had been sent ahead to cut a road. The march was rough, but with springtime, the woods in full bloom, Braddock's men were gay. Over the hills, across the streams and through the timber the troops marched with banners flying, bands playing, while the forest echoed their shouts and music.

Early on July 9, 1755 Braddock's men forded the Monongahela and moved slowly on as the axmen ahead cut a path through the dark forest. They were only eight miles from Fort Duquesne when shots rang out and men began to fall. The British veterans wheeled into line and returned the fire, but they could see little to shoot at, only puffs of smoke from French and Indian muskets hidden in the woods.

Braddock's men fired volley after volley with little effort on their invisible enemy. Brave men thought they were, they became confused and huddled on the 12-foot road shut in by a forest resounding with war cries while the bullets whizzed into their ranks like hail. The colonial troops tried to fight back Indian fashion. But Braddock would not let them. He galloped back and forth like a madman, trying to get his troops into battle lines and striking with his sword at men who tried to fight from behind trees.

Four horses were killed under Braddock before he, too, was shot down and fatally wounded. Now, after three hours of battle, with two thirds of their numbers cut down, the remainder of Braddock's army hastily retreated, leaving the dead and wounded along the path they had marched so gaily a few hours before. Most of Braddock's officers had fallen. George Washington survived as by a miracle, with two horses shot under him.

General Braddock was buried in the middle of the forest road by his fleeing men, and to keep the spot from being found by the Indians, the retreating army—men, horses, and wagons—passed over his grave, flattening it into the rutted forest soil.

Braddock's defeat left the border open to a bloody Indian war for several years. But it also taught the colonies that Americans could be equal in battle to the best British regulars. This lesson was to prove valuable twenty years later when the struggle for independence began.
