On our cover we picture the Prettiest Republican. Her vote-getting abilities should be a source of comfort for the GOP. It is apparent that she merits the decision of the populace. If the Democrats don't come up with a beauty of their own, maybe the GOP can capitalize on Miss Alice La Pointe, (center) winner of the title "Miss Republican of Bergen County 1959", and Catherine Condosta, left, and Rosary Cilenti, right. runners-up in the contest.

The Caribbean Area Beckons To Tourists

Tropical islands, voodoo rites, calypso bands and tax-free shopping are among the highlights of a Caribbean Circle tour — a 19-day air excursion to the great sun cities and playgrounds of the Western Hemisphere.

The all-expense tour is being offered by Guest Airways and Allied Travel, Inc., New York. For the first eight days it visits Mexico City, one of the world's most exciting cities; Acapulco, Mexico's luxury beach resort, and Caracas, the modern capital of Venezuela.

The remainder of the tour is spent island hopping. From Caracas it goes to Trinidad, Puerto Rico, Haiti, Jamaica and Cuba.

Each of the islands has its distinctive color and traditions. Trinidad is the home of calypso music and steel bands. Its cosmopolitan population includes not only Caribbeans and Portuguese, but Orientals, and in Port of Spain their diverse cultures are symbolized by cathedrals, mosques and Buddhist temples.

Visitors in Puerto Rico are at home abroad. In San Juan, one of the most modern of all the island cities, the familiar atmosphere of home is flavored by four centuries of Spanish influence.

Haiti — French in speech and heritage — is the dramatic land of African drums and voodoo rites. In the noisy, colorful markets of Port au Prince, a free port, shoppers can fill their bags with a variety of native Haitian bargains, notably hand-crafted products of wood and metal.

British tradition and accent thrive in a tropical setting in Jamaica. In Havana one finds the essence of Latin gaiety.

Steady Growth At The Paterson First National

The American Banker, a daily banking newspaper, reports that the First National Bank of Passaic County is the 132nd largest bank in the United States. This newspaper tabulates the relative positions of American banks every six months. The deposits of the First National Bank are listed as $216,745,000.

An official of the bank stated that bank size is important only to create a strong depository for the funds of the businesses and individuals of the communities served by the bank's seventeen offices, and to serve the borrowing needs of the large industries of our area, as well as smaller businesses and individuals.

WINNERS OF 4-H CONTEST — 4-H contests held in New Brunswick brought forth five victories for the Passaic County team. Three youngsters from Wayne and two from Hawthorne won two of three 4-H contests. CHRISTIAN RECREATIONAL DAY CAMP FINISHES THIRD WEEK

The Christian Recreation Day Camp at Terrace Lake has completed its third week. Children may yet register for the fourth and last week. Average attendance at the camp has been about eighty children per week. They are transported to the lake each day by chartered buses from various locations in Passaic and Bergen Counties.

Activities such as swimming, archery, boating, arts and crafts, devotions, nature study, hikes, etc., are enjoyed by the children under the direction of James Warden, director. Competent counselors assist him.

Among improvements made at Terrace Lake since opening day is a new artesian well which pumps water into the lake at the rate of 65 gallons a minute, it was stated by De Jonge.

Frank Muus, chairman of the membership committee announced that family memberships are at an all-time high of 965 to date, an increase of 161 over last year.

HELICOPTERS LINK ITALIAN MAINLAND WITH TWO ISLANDS

Scandinavian Airlines System reports that it is now possible to fly all the way from North America to Italy's two famous resort islands, Capri and Ischia. Final leg of the trip from Naples is by helicopter.

An hourly service has been established which operates between the seaport and the two islands, from 7:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. daily. The service will continue until September 30.

The excursions are especially suitable for tourists who are in a hurry,

ITALY'S REPRESENTATIVE — Miss Blende Maria Grazia Buccella, 18, will represent Italy in the upcoming Miss Universe beauty contest. She was selected in a secret hotel meeting without fanfare to avoid publicity on possible rhubarbs which have marred previous contests in Italy. These have included fist fights among irate mothers who did not approve stripping to the waist by candidates to disprove allegations they wore "falsies".

Senate Approves Foreign Loan Program

The Senate last week approved a $2 billion start on a new program to make loans to less-industrialized nations. The President had asked for $700 million for a one year program. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee had recommended a $5 billion, 5 year program. As approved by the Senate, the program would provide $750 million for this fiscal year and $1.25 billion for fiscal 1961. It was stipulated that funds should come, not via direct borrowing from the Treasury, as recommended by the Foreign Relations Committee, but from appropriations, subject to annual review. This program, it is assumed, would be designed to encourage private enterprise abroad rather than socialism via government operation of industry.

COVERING "TODAY'S" WORLD—Dave Garroway (standing, right center) is host of the NBC-TV Network "Today" program, which — each Monday through Friday morning—presents two hours of featured segments on world news, special events, human interest and sports subjects, weather and entertainment. THE AGRICULTURE PROBLEM

The so-called farm problem is not just a farm problem — it is an American problem. That is the view of Secretary of Agriculture Benson, expressed at a recent Farmer-Businessman dinner in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. And his point is one he has often made before — that “this problem cannot be solved by continuing the old outmoded price support, acreage control program” — and that “to achieve and maintain a prosperous, expanding and free agriculture, we must solve the farm problem.”

The Secretary cites various facets of the problem — and they add up to an ominously impressive list. Vast supplies of a few commodities exert a depressing influence in the market. Farm people are caught in a cost-price squeeze, and half our farms have a gross income of only $2,500 a year. The cost to the taxpayer of maintaining farm programs is at an all-time high, and is still rising. We have $9 billion tied up in the surpluses, most of it in corn, wheat and cotton. Storage interest and handling charges alone now come to $1 billion a year. On top of all this, in Mr. Benson's words: “Proposals are now being made which, if adopted, would go far to socialize agriculture — to make farmers depend for much of their income on direct payments from the U. S. Treasury. This threatens not only the freedom of agriculture — it threatens the free American economic system in general.”

The Secretary finds no merit in the premise on which the old price support program was built — the premise “that production can be effectively controlled through acreage allotments and marketing quotas.” Long, hard and costly experience has proven that this simply is not true. He also finds; citing a recent nation-wide poll made by Farm Journal, the largest agricultural magazine, that eight out of ten farmers want greater freedom and less government interference. Moreover, the producers of important agricultural products which are not supported or controlled — livestock and fruits and vegetables among them — have growing markets. They have had and will have their ups and downs, of course, but by and large they have done well. The trouble is caused by the one-fifth of our agriculture that is not free — the supported and controlled so-called basic crops of corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts and tobacco.

The wheat problem seems to have reached a point of absolute crisis. By July of 1960, the Secretary says, the carry-over will be about 1½ billion bushels — enough to provide 515 loaves of bread for every man, woman and child in the country. And, at the same time, $3.5 billion of the taxpayers' money will be tied up in wheat alone. A continuance of this trend, Mr. Benson is convinced, “could end in disaster of a magnitude such as we have not seen before in our American agriculture.”

What, then is the way out? As Mr. Benson sees it, the need is drastic change in the whole idea of the farm programs — not just changes of detail. To quote him once more: “The evidence of 25 years says that we cannot balance supply and demand by means of present acreage controls. The economics of the farm problem are simple — we need less government in farming. We must quit trying to fix prices unrealistically. This is the source of the twin evils of production for government warehouses and government control over farmers. We must emphasize markets, increased efficiency, and competitive selling. We must eliminate government's stranglehold on agriculture

Let's Dash Up There And Rescue Her

The Editor Speaks

By VINCENT S. PARRILLO

One of the most difficult things in the world, it seems to me, is brevity, both in expressing yourself and in THINKING. Once again I have to use my wife as an example. When I am in a particularly tender mood I call her my “guinea pig.” I guess it is because my wife — and most anyone's wife — represents just about everything that is feminine, and because a wife when she's nice, is very, very nice and when she's bad, she is horrid.

The other day the above mentioned lady was sending a telegram to a friend who was estivating in California. At the end of the wire she put, “With affectionate regards.” “Do you realize that those three words cost about a dollar extra?” I asked her. “Well, what else can I say?” she replied. “Just say ‘fondly’.” It means the same thing and costs three bits less.” She did.

By the way, that word “estivating” is another example of brevity. I could have said “spending the summer” — but estivating means the same thing. If this magazine were paying a dollar a word for this column—which it is not—it would thus have saved two dollars.

All of which leads up to a statement by a noted psychiatrist, that “the public urge to escape reality” is to blame for the general apathy toward the civilian defense program. “Many persons who seem apathetic,” he said, “are actually anxious, but because the threat of war and its terror is so frightening, there is a strong need to deny the possibility of it ever occurring.” That is the kind of involved and circuitous thinking (and talking) I mentioned above.

The public's apathy toward civil defense is very simple. It is the terror of war, it's that most persons just simply think it is a lot of hooey. For years we have been told by Washington that war is imminent. It might break out at any moment. We might all be wiped off the face of the map. This has been going on for years. The only shooting that has been done here in America, is the shooting-off of political big-mouths.

Yet, why not be honest? Let's cooperate with the Civilian Defense

Social Security Office Urges Keeping of Accurate Records

Keeping correct records will assure you all the benefits you and your employees have earned, Stanley J. Fioresci, manager of the Paterson Social Security office, reminded today.

Benefits for an employer and his employees at retirement, death, or permanent and total disability, are based on the reports the employer files with Internal Revenue of his own net profit and the earnings of his employees, he added. Accurate and complete records are necessary to make the proper reports on your employees as well as to determine the employees' own true net profit. The employer is responsible for filing reports on his employees which should contain the full name, social security account number, and the amount paid to each employee.

Fioresci also pointed out that many self-employed persons have not been properly reporting their net profit. Coverage of the self-employed is not optional — it is required by law and is necessary in order to get social security credit for his earnings. If he failed to file the report on his net profit and pay the self-employment tax for prior years, it may not be too late if he files the reports for these years and pays the self-employment social security tax to the Director of Internal Revenue this year. However, social security credits cannot be given now for years prior to 1956. Additional information about reporting self-employment income may be secured from the local office of the Director of Internal Revenue. For information regarding social security benefits, contact the local social security office at 245 Market Street, Paterson.

"Henry Hudson Days" Observed in New Jersey

The New Jersey Department of Conservation and Economic Development has announced that in commemoration of the 350th anniversary of Henry Hudson's now historic voyage off the New Jersey east coast in 1609, certain days have been designated as "Henry Hudson Days" in each of the five annual fishing tournaments in the state this year.

The Governor Robert B. Meyner Trophy, which is a nine inch Paul Revere sterling silver bowl, will be presented to the winner of each of the tournaments on the specified days. Each tournament is to have two days designated "Henry Hudson Days". The first is the Marlin Tournament at Atlantic City on July 29 and 30. The Governor's Trophy will be presented along with other prizes to the winning angler.

History indicates that Henry Hudson was employed by the Dutch East India Company to find a Northwest passage to India. However, Hudson's ship "The Half Moon" entered Delaware Bay on August 28, 1609. After reversing his course, he then sailed up the New Jersey coast into the river which now bears his name — the Hudson River.

The Department of Conservation and Economic Development has prepared an attractive folder on the Henry Hudson Days and other celebrations in New Jersey.

A friend of ours has two teen-age daughters. One, after a rather late party the night before, had been ordered to bed early. Sure enough the phone rang and her sister answered. It was the sleeping beauty's heavy date.

Next morning at breakfast there was quite a little scene. "You surely didn't tell him I had gone to bed!" wailed the sleeper.

"Of course I did."
"That's the meanest thing I ever heard of in my life! Everybody will think I have to go to bed at 9 o'clock just like a child!"

"That's all right," was the comforting reply. "I told him you had an awful hangover."

"How do you like my hat?" asked a young wife innocently, as she preened herself before the mirror.

"It looks silly," said her tactless husband. "Why don't you return it?" "Oh, I can't return it," was the reply. "You see it's my old one. But since you don't like it I can go buy another."

Mr. Archibald: "I'm afraid I can't hire you. We don't need much help right now."

Boy: "I won't be much help."

AROUND TOWN

Pan American Games Postage Stamp in August

A runner, holding high a flaming torch, will be featured on the 10-cent air mail stamp to be released at Chicago on August 27, to mark the opening there of the Pan American Games, according to Frank W. Murphy, postmaster.

This stamp will be printed in red and blue on white, on the Giori press in sheets of 50, L-perforated, and will be vertical in format, measuring 0.84 by 1.44 in. It was designed by Suren H. Ermoyan of Westport, Connecticut. A total of 40 million of these stamps has been ordered.

To the left and right are wide-angled triangles in color, symbolic of sportive movement. That to the left, pointed down, will be in red, with the inscription "Chicago 1959" in white sans-serif italicized letters in the upper portion. That to the right, with point up, will be in blue, with the wording "10c U. S. Air Mail," also in white sans-serif italicized lettering in the lower portion. Across the top, in blue sans-serif italicized lettering, against a white background, will be the descriptive "Pan American Games."

Suren H. Ermoyan, the artist, was born in Chicago and studied at the American Academy of Art and the Institute of Design there. He came to New York in the early 1940's and served as art editor of such nationally known magazines as Cosmopolitan, Town and Country and Good Housekeeping.

The new stamp will be first placed on sale at all stations and branches of the Chicago post office on August 27.

Collectors desiring first-day cancellations of the new stamp may send addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Chicago 7, Illinois. A close fitting enclosure of postal card thickness should be placed in each envelope and the flap either turned in or sealed.

By MURIEL CARBERRY

The short short story of a modern miracle that repaid a mother's matchless love and faith

"An ideal place for children to grow up in — plenty of room to romp and no danger of accidents."

As Dale Hunter steered his car up the winding driveway he recalled the argument with which the Westchester realtor had clinched the sale five years before. The irony of it! Decades had passed, it seemed, since a young voice had shouted a greeting to him across that wide lawn and a plump little body had rolled merrily down the banking.

He fooled about the garage, dreading to face the prospect before him. How much longer, he wondered, would he have to endure the agony of this day?

A crash sounded in the kitchen as he entered the back vestibule.

Ellen was standing over a broken bowl. Although customarily the one dependable element in the household, now the sturdy frame trembled. "I'm that twitchy," she apologized.

"Of course you are," he replied soothingly. "But tomorrow will be different. How is she?"

"As excited as if this was going to be the jolliest party in the world."

He inspected the preparations — cocoa simmering on the stove, plates of fat sandwiches, a wooden board heaped with freshly baked cookies in animal shapes — then he sighed and went through the swinging door.

His wife was arranging candles on a huge cake that decorated the center of the table.

"Oh, hello, I'm so glad you got here early." She brushed her lips across his cheek. "It's handsomer than ever this year, isn't it? Imagine how our darling would love that big boat."

It was a marvelous confection — blue lake, white sail, and "Happy Birthday, Sammie," printed across the pennant.

There were nine places set. At each were little packages exquisitely wrapped.

"Help me tie these kites to the chairs." She handed him three. "We had balloons last time, but I was afraid they'd seem too babyish now."

"Katrine—!" He started to protest, then decided to do as she requested.

"Everything is perfect, isn't it?" She surveyed the table with a satisfying expression. "Come up and see the nice present I chose."

Silently they mounted the stairs. He noted with concern the too bright eyes and flushed cheeks.

It was a room any boy would cherish. A broad window seat that overlooked woods. The book shelves were full and the desk well-equipped.

The gifts were piled on the checked spread. Katrine took hold of a pair of football pants. "Isn't it hard to believe our child is old enough for these? Last year it was the Indian outfit. Remember?"

Dale nodded. Indulgence seemed to be the only course to take.

"I had the sweetest girl in the toy department at Benton's," she went on. "Her nephew is exactly Sammy's age, so she knew just the games and toys to recommend."

He watched Katrine's face as she displayed the various purchases. Full of animation this one day in the year. Tomorrow she'd lie for hours inertly on the porch or explain again and again how she'd left Sammy alone in the tub for only a second while she answered the telephone. She hadn't dreamed that the screen was loose or that he'd try to climb out the window.

What was to be done? "Adoption — after a year or so, when the worst of her anguish was worn off," the specialist had advised.

But several years had passed since the tragedy and there was no sign of any diminution in her grief.

Suddenly she leaned over and whispered: "He does come on this day. At intervals all morning long I've heard his footsteps pattering about the playroom. When I started up there, they stopped."

Dale stiffened. Katrine was getting worse. Never before had she gone as far as that.

"Listen!" she gripped his arm.

He gave a little jump. It did sound like a child overhead. Evidently this annual party where the host and the guests were phantoms and only the refreshments and the presents were real, was beginning to make him as jittery as his wife.

Numbly they moved into the hall.

And down the staircase hopped a little tow-headed boy decked out in an Indian costume.

"How do you do, I'm Foxy," he announced, with an odd accent, "and I'm growing hungry for my tea."

It was Dale who recovered his voice first. "How — how — did you get — in — here?"

"A great, great big boat brought me." He spread his arms wide. "I'm evac — evacuated."

"You bad wicked boy, I told you not to take a step from my bedroom," Ellen screamed from below.

She lifted a terrified face to her mistress. "It was just until Sunday, ma'am, when I'd have a chance to take him to the boarding house I found for him. He's Colin Foxcroft. I kept house for his mother and grandfather for years, until the old gentleman died and Miss Margaret married an Englishman and went across to live in London. I couldn't let harm come to the youngster."

Ellen glanced humbly at Dale. "It's no wonder I've been as nervous as a witch all day."

"Where is his mother?" he asked.

She raised her eyes heavenward. "The father, too. He was in the Royal Air Force."

Dale saw his wife stoop over Foxy with the same look of tenderness she had once bestowed upon her own son. "Come," she coaxed. "I know where there is a lovely cake for tea."

As the two went down the stairs hand in hand, she smiled back at him. "Isn't it lucky, dear," she said, "that we have such a nice place for children?"

This Week In AMERICAN HISTORY

BY WILLIAM BRODIE

JOHN JACOB ASTOR BORN

On July 17, 1763, twelve years before the American Revolution, John Jacob Astor, who pioneered a new era of capitalism in the United States, was born in the village of Waldorf, near Heidelberg, Germany. He was the son of a poor butcher and he knew hardship and privation in his early years.

At the age of sixteen he ran off to London. He stayed there for several years, working for a musical instrument dealer, until the urge for bigger accomplishments drew him to America. He arrived in New York in 1783, the year the Revolutionary War ended, with one good suit, five pounds in money, and seven flutes which he sold at a profit. Young Astor got a job peddling furs in New York. He was then a sturdy fellow of 20, whose determination was outlined in his tight-lipped face. He learned the fur trade thoroughly and in three years was able to start his own thriving fur business.

Astor established connections in London, selling furs and importing merchandise for resale at a good profit. In 1808 he chartered his American Fur Company. It was to make John Jacob Astor the fur trade "emperor" of the West from the Great Lakes clear out to the Pacific Coast. Astor's American Fur Company fought other fur traders for control of the wilderness resources.

The fur trade was the "Big Business" of that time. Pelts from American forests were sold from Europe to China. The trappers and hunters were the heroic figures who tapped a great land along the rivers and across the Plains to the Rockies, "the biggest clearing on the Almighty's footstool." Fighting and outsmarting the hostile Indians and wild beasts to live and make a living, they gambled their lives to bring back to civilization their season's catch of furs — otter, fox, mink, marten, buffalo hides, and, most importantly, beaver.

American beaver pelts were a prime commodity in the world markets. The mountain men and plainsmen who brought in their catch were the keen tools with which John Jacob Astor carved out his rich empire.

Astor got ahead of all his competitors. He took over some companies, bought and sold others, and set up branches with division of territory. He sent the first steamboats up the Missouri River. His agents built the first American settlement at the mouth of the Columbia River on the Pacific and named it Astoria. From it went sea otter pelts to the China trade, beaver and other furs to the American and European markets.

Astor treated the Indian and white trappers harshly to squeeze from them every penny of profit. The fur trade made him rich, and the profits from it he invested shrewdly in real estate on the outskirts of the expanding city of New York. He was careful with his investments. He drove a hard bargain, and he pitilessly foreclosed on mortgages.

John Jacob Astor became the richest man of his day. When he died in New York City in 1848, at the age of 85, he left more than $20,000,000, the biggest private fortune up to that time in America. His name became a symbol of the power of piled-up money. There had been other rich men before him in our country, but none to match his wealth. Most of the rich men before him had died poor. But not John Jacob Astor. He was the first to "get rich" in America in the modern sense, and to hand on a huge fortune to his descendants.
