Disabled Workers May Obtain Social Security Along With Other Benefits

Disabled workers who have not applied for social security disability benefits because they are receiving disability payments from another Federal agency, or under a State Workmen's Compensation program, should get in touch with their local social security office without delay.

According to Stanley J. Fiorese, manager of the Paterson Social Security district office, such worker can now get social security disability benefits. Moreover, benefits can go back as far as August 1958 if an application is filed before September 1, 1959.

Under the law in effect prior to August 1958, a worker's social security disability payment was reduced by the amount of any other disability benefit he received under a State Workmen's Compensation program, or from another Federal agency. In a number of cases this meant that no social security disability payments could be made. As a result, many workers who would not have benefited by the "disability freeze" did not file a claim. These workers should check with their local social security office not later than August 1, 1959.

For information regarding social security benefits, contact the local social security office at 245 Market Street, Paterson.

Mental Health Association Plans To Enlarge Scope of Its Services

Two direct services to help the mentally ill get adequate treatment and return to a productive life will be developed in the year ahead as the major objectives of the New Jersey Association for Mental Health.

Mr. Bernard G. Goldstein of Pompton Lakes, president, said that the State Association will strengthen and extend the Information and Referral Service throughout the State, and establish a Rehabilitation Service on a demonstration basis in one or two selected counties.

These recommendations are part of a report on short-range and long-range objectives of the Association recently completed by the planning committee headed by Mrs. Joy Roth of Westfield, a founder of the association who served as president the first five years.

The report lists four long-range general goals:

1. "Extend the citizens' mental health movement to include the six counties without an affiliated Mental Health Association.

2. "Promote increased programs of adequate care and facilities for New Jersey's 211,000 mental hospital patients.

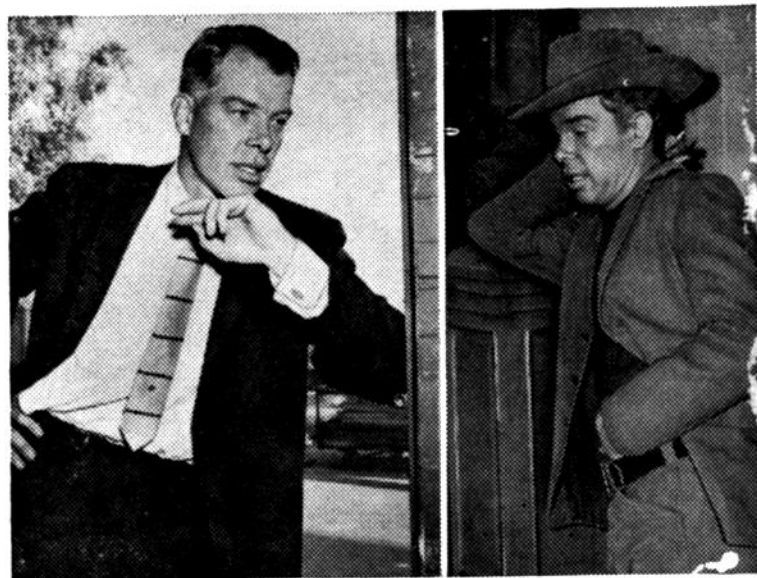

3. "Establishment of increased services for the mentally ill and emotionally disturbed and their families in the community.

4. "Promotion of mental health and full participation with other groups in this objective."

Mr. Goldstein said that the association hopes to expand its current programs in research, counseling, public education, training of special groups, establishment of clinics, improved hospital care, volunteer services, legislation, and rehabilitation.

He explained that the association is the only statewide citizen movement dedicated to fighting the total problem of mental illness. Financial support comes mainly from the annual Mental Health Fund Drive, but with some allocations from United Fund.

The organization is affiliated with the National Association for Mental Health and has 15 Chapter in these counties: Atlantic, Burlington, Bergen, Essex, Gloucester, Hudson, Hunterdon, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Morris, Ocean, Passaic, Somerset and Union.

Such places as Ocean City, Asbury Park and Point Pleasant will sponsor special events.

On August 6 the annual baby parade will be held at Ocean City. The grand marshal of the parade will be the 91-year-old Leo Bamberger, who inaugurated the parade over a half century ago. Interested parents can obtain entry blanks from the Department of Public Relations, City Hall, Ocean City.

State Maintained Historical Sites Attract Many Visitors

New Jersey has many historical sites which have been maintained throughout the years or restored. Some 162,415 residents and visitors from every state in the Union, as well as from Hawaii, South America, Australia, Europe, Asia, Africa, Canada, Mexico, Puerto Rico and Cuba, have registered as visitors at the state-owned historic sites this year.

The colonial village of Batsto on the Wharton Tract in southern New Jersey drew the greatest number of visitors.

A free glass exhibit on the second floor of the general store, the blacksmith shop, additional room furnishings in the Batsto Mansion, and the continuing restoration program, help to account for the constantly growing interest.

Many inquiries come in concerning canoe runs, wilderness camping sites, and the trees, plants and birds in the woodland area.

Other places of interest are the Village of Allaire in Monmouth County; Ringwood Manor House on the boundary between Passaic County and the State of New York; the McKonkey Ferry House at Washington Crossing State Park near Trenton, and the Von Steuben House in North Hackensack.

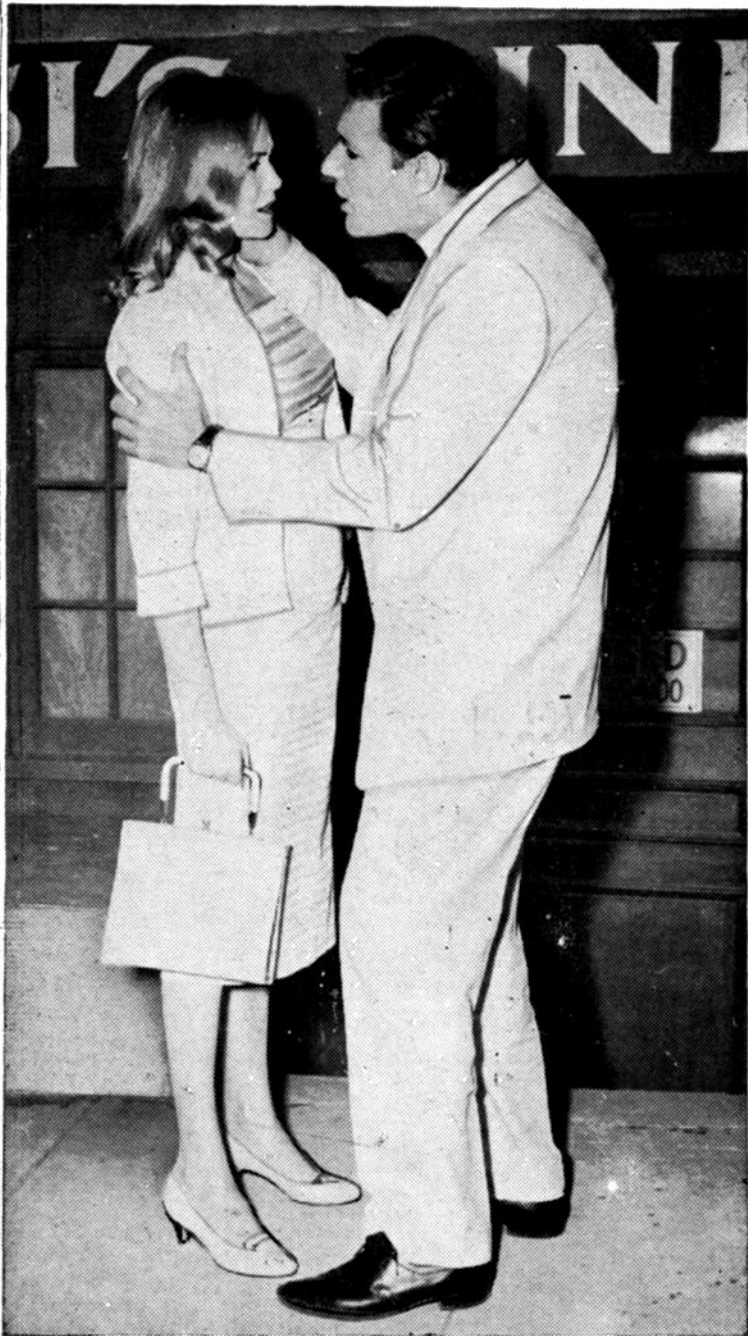

Boxwood Hall in Elizabeth; the Cleveland birthday in Caldwell; the Hancock House at Hancock's Bridge in Salem County; the Indian King Tavern in Haddonfield; the Old Dutch Parsonage and the Wallace House in Somerville; the Somers Mansion in Somers Point; the Lawrence House in Burlington; the Walt Whitman House in Camden and the Trenton Battle Monument — are all historical places worthy of visiting.

A "LITTLE INFLATION"

As usual, the mid-year economic forecasts have been pouring forth. And most of them have certain things in common.

For one thing, the professional seers, with hardly an exception, expect booming business in most lines of enterprise — and, with it, higher wages.

They also expect, again with hardly an exception, a "moderate" rise in the general price level — something like two or three per cent a year.

This is what is known as "creeping" inflation, as opposed to the "galloping" kind in which the buying power of a currency can be virtually destroyed overnight. And many people seem to think that a "little inflation" isn't really a bad thing, and may even be good. After all, two or three per cent a year doesn't sound like much.

However, over a comparatively short period of time that two or three per cent could cut the dollars' value in half again — precisely as it already has been cut in half in the past 20 years. And, ultimately, we would have a ten cent dollar, or a five cent dollar, or a one cent dollar.

The federal commission headed by Vice President Nixon has pinpointed the danger of inflation warned us what it could do, and made a strong stand for, among other things, a balanced budget and a gradual reduction in the national debt. Herein lies the only hope for saving what is left of the dollar's worth.

TAXES LIKE FLYPAPER

Some time ago the Senate voted to repeal the excise taxes on local telephone service, and on rail, plane and bus passenger fares. Both tax rates have been 10 per cent.

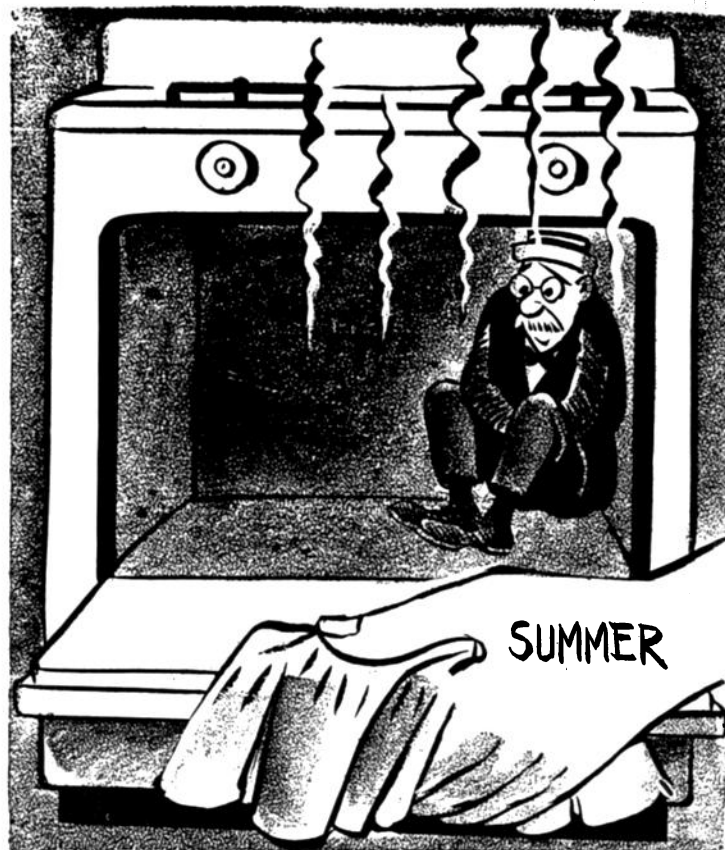

The House, however, refused to go along. So, under a compromise agreement, the telephone tax is to be retained at 10 per cent, while the passenger travel is to be reduced to 5 per cent.

This action brought an apt comment from the Portland, Oregonian: "These two taxes are indefensible in the present time and circumstances. The travel tax came into being in World War II when transportation facilities were overloaded through troop movements and the government wished to discourage unnecessary travel. Railroads, airlines and bus companies now have plenty of capacity. The tax hinders the common carriers, the backbone of U. S. transportation, in their competition with contract carriers and the private automobile . . . The telephone tax is equally unfair . . ."

The Oregonian ends its editorial on a melancholy note: "The episode certainly proves one point. There is no such thing as a temporary tax. Once you get into them, they stick like flypaper."

But this kind of legislative flypaper can be unstuck — if enough voters will demand action. The travel and telephone excise taxes are excellent places to start.

Got a headache? — Go to a movie. But don't make it a comedy or a love story. That won't help your headache a bit.

Of course, a lurid movie will cure only the ordinary headache — the kind that made this country use 16 billion aspirin tablets last year, at a cost of more than $90,000,000. Most common headaches are the "tension headache" — the kind that is caused by the stresses of modern living. This kind of headache is almost always improved by a good vacation, an absorbing book, or a lurid movie.

If you cannot afford a vacation, haven't a good book handy or don't feel like going to a movie, try a good cry. A good cry is sometimes better than drugs.

About that 16-billion-aspirin business. We here in America are undoubtedly the biggest bunch of pill-eaters in the world.

Pills are sold by the billion. There are pills for everything. I myself am a confirmed pill addict. In my medicine closet I have pills to cure headaches, colds, stomachaches, high blood pressure, neuritis, neuralgia and pip.

I have blue pills, green pills, white pills, yellow pills and red pills. Some are taken three times a day before meals, some twice a day after meals, some once a day between meals.

Unfortunately, the labels have come off most of the pill bottles, so I just take the pills by color, according to what color strikes me best at the moment — and I guess they do me just as much good as they would if I took them "as directed."

I asked my physician one time why he prescribed some pills to be taken before meals, others after meals. "Oh, that's just to remind you," he said.

I think the pills that did me the most good were some the doctor once prescribed for me. I took them three times a day after meals for three days — and I felt like a top! Later I found out that the ingredients were simply sugar and imagination. Have your doctor give you some of them some time when you don't feel right. But, at any rate, if you don't feel right, do see your doctor. He knows more about medicine than I do.

Residents and Out-of-Staters Lose Drivers Licenses

Ned J. Parsekian, acting director of Motor Vehicles has announced 99 license revocations, during the week ending July 17 of New Jersey residents convicted under the 60-70 Speed Revocation program. The division also revoked the reciprocity privileges of 379 non-resident motorists.

Since the first of the year 4,072 resident drivers and 8,236 non-resident operators have had their driving privileges revoked under the program.

The home state motor vehicles departments of non-resident motorists have been notified of the revocations. Police departments in the local communities of the residents whose licenses were revoked have been notified for whatever action may be deemed advisable.

Local Bank Declares Large Dividend For August 1

A dividend of 37½ cents per share will be paid the shareholders of the New Jersey Bank and Trust Company on August 1. This dividend is the 266th consecutive dividend paid to the bank's shareholders in the more than 90 years of its existence.

As of mid-year the resources of the bank amounted to 283 million dollars, and its capital funds are in excess of $18,655,000. More than 550 thousand shares have been issued. The New Jersey Bank and Trust Company is now the 107th largest in the United States, and the fourth largest in New Jersey.

New Jersey Turnpike Plans Extensive Repairs

The Turnpike Authority has authorized the obtaining of bids for repairs on the Passaic River Bridge. It is estimated that the repairs will run in the neighborhood of $400,000. So that work can be started before the winter sets in, bids will be sought immediately.

It has been suggested by the State Motor Vehicle Department that "Welcome Sign" be posted at locations where motorists enter New Jersey. The signs would read: "Welcome to New Jersey — Please Obey Traffic Laws — Speeders Lose Licenses." The plan is that these signs would be colored and illuminated.

The purchase of a $10,000 automatic ticket issuing machine from the Electronic Signal Company was authorized. This will be an experimental project.

Americans Buy 630 Million Books Annually

It is reported that Americans are buying some 630 million books a year, including paperback and juveniles but not textbooks. Ten years ago only 330 million were sold a year. The success of the paperbacks, which are selling several hundred million copies a year is significant. A large percentage of the total is trash, but paperback versions of The Iliad and The Odyssey have together sold more than a million copies. The paperbacks are democratizing reading. They are conferring upon it the simple, healthy status of a normal habit.

CURZON RETIRES — After 38 years of service with the Paterson Police force, Deputy Police Chief Joseph Curzon is leaving the department. Curzon filed notice of retirement this past week with the Fire-Police Commission. He could have stayed with the department another two years, but elected to retire at this time to travel around the country and visit with his daughters. During September he and his wife, the former Matilda Wagner, plan trips to Detroit and Westfield to visit their two daughters. Later they will travel to California where Curzon's sister lives. Curzon is a native of Paterson. He attended Paterson schools and entered World War I in 1918. He was appointed to the Paterson police force in 1921, and was made a street sergeant in 1929. Later that year, he was advanced to desk sergeant, a position he held until 1939. For two years Curzon was in charge of radio and teletype, and 1940 to 1942, he served with the identification bureau. He was promoted to lieutenant, and in 1951-52 served as street lieutenant. On June 1 1952, he was named head of radio and teletype and put in command of the Paterson Auxiliary Police. In 1957, he was named Deputy chief.

OLDEST insect specimen, estimated to be over 60-MILLION years
of age, was found in ALASKA!

Two men who hadn't seen one another in several years met on the street one day.

"How are you getting along?" asked one.

"Fine," said the other. "Except I'm having trouble with my wife."

"That's too bad; what seems to be the matter?"

"She seems to think money grows on trees, I guess. She's always pestering me for money. If it isn't a dollar for this, it's a dollar for that."

"What on earth does she do with all the money?"

His friend shook his head.

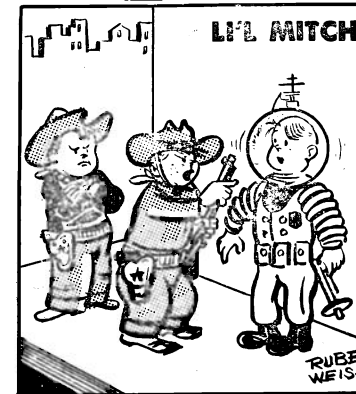

"To tell you the truth, I don't really know. I've never yet given her any."

The warden of a Midwest prison sent a note around to inmates asking for suggestions on the kind of party they'd recommend to celebrate his 25th anniversary. The prisoners all had the same idea—Open House.

A teacher telling his class of teenagers about the Old West said that Billy the Kid had killed 21 men before he was 21 years old.

A girl who had been listening open-mouthed asked, "What make of car did he drive?"

Okay, pardner, you'd better be off this earth by sundown!

Streak of Irish

Russ Van Hosen was late, but feeling good, with the check from another car sale tucked in his pocket. He walked in at the back door. Pat was stirring something at the cupboard. She heard him, but didn't glance around.

Russ squeezed her shoulders and kissed her, then waited hopefully. Pat didn't respond. After a minute Russ turned away and walked on into the living room. So Pat was still sore. Well, one thing was certain; the next peace move would have to come from her.

He sat down and reached for the sport page. Golf was opening at the Wyaconda Sunday. Well, they probably wouldn't go now; they probably wouldn't go anywhere. Lately, it seemed, they'd been quarreling all the time.

It had begun this time as usual, with a quick sizzling flash of Pat's Irish temper. One of those brief flash-ups which usually ended with little damage done. Only this one hadn't ended yet; it was still dragging on. Well, let it drag!

Maybe by the time it was over, Pat would have learned to keep that streak of fighting Irish temper down.

Pat came in from the kitchen.

"Russ Van Hosen," she said sharply, "put that paper down."

"All right," Russ knew what Pat wanted — to carry on from where they'd stopped last night.

"I want to know," Pat said tightly, "just why you left the party with that Gertie Hale last night!"

Russ' jaw grew stubborn. "I told you; I went out to start her car, that's all."

"It certainly took you a good long time . . . Where was her husband — why didn't she have him start it!"

"I don't know — he was somewhere around, I guess. Anyway, I had sold her the car."

"Yes," Pat said, "two years ago — before I'd even met you . . . Russ, are you getting a little tired of me?"

Russ groaned. Pat knew better, of course. All she wanted was a row. Maybe he had spent too much time with Gertie, but what of it? He had it coming. What about Hal Kirk last week? Pat had asked him to stop over and see her on his way in to Chicago. Talk about old pals!

"Well?" Pat insisted.

Russ turned back to his paper. "I've said all I have to say."

Pat started to speak again, then stopped. Over the paper, Russ saw her face tighten. "All right," she said quietly.

Russ watched her walk across the room and begin to climb the stairs. He listened, and after a moment he could hear her moving about in their bedroom above. Doing what? he wondered. After ten minutes he went to the foot of the stairs and called.

"Pat!" No answer. "Pat!" he called again.

Pat was coming down the stairway; she had on her hat and coat. She carried her bag in her hand.

"Pat," Russ demanded, "where are you going?"

"Why?" Pat answered coldly, "should you care?"

Russ studied her face. She was bluffing, of course; threatening to leave. Well, two could bluff. "That's right," he said, "why should I?"

"I'm going back to work for Hal, if you want to know."

A little stab went through Russ' heart. "Simply because of Gertie Hale?"

"Not entirely . . . Russ, we simply can't go on fighting all the time."

"You know," Russ said evenly, "I've been thinking that same thing."

Pat's lips whitened again. "So that's settled . . . I'll need some money," she said.

Russ took out his billfold. It held three fives and a ten. He offered her the bills. Without looking at them Pat shook her head.

"That's not enough," she said. "I'm taking the next plane at the airport."

Russ was sure now that she was stalling, giving him a chance to beg her to stay. If he gave in this time he'd have to give in always. The stubborn lines of his jaw hardened. Taking the car check from his pocket he endorsed it with his pen.

"This is on Conway & Company," he said; "you can cash it anywhere in the States."

Pat's cheeks went fiery red. Her voice was low, but it trembled. "Russ Van Hosen, I could murder you! Give me those bills and let me go!"

Russ said nothing. He watched her back the car out onto the drive.

Not until then did full realization come over him. He had held firm; he had won a moral victory. But Pat was gone.

Russ walked slowly back into the living room. He was still dazed, unable to believe it. Ten minutes passed, a half an hour. Then memories began to rise and choke him, a hundred memories of the swell times they'd had together —

From that first day when they'd met at the golf course. They'd played together and he'd beaten her, in spite of the ribbing she'd given him over his mis-matched patched-up clubs. He'd been saving to buy a new set — but he'd bought her a ring instead.

If there were only some way to get her back —

Russ swallowed against the painful aching in his throat. What a fool! To think their little spats had mattered — as if every couple didn't have them during their first year — Maybe even now, if he should call the airport —

The clock struck ten, booming through the awful emptiness of the house. Russ grabbed the phone; the plane left at ten. Feverishly he dialed the number. "Airport? . . . Listen, has the plane — It's gone?"

The silence of the house beat against his ears. He couldn't stand it here; he had to get out, get drunk, do something. Russ started for the front door, then remembered it was raining. His raincoat was in the closet off the kitchen door.

The closet was dark; his searching arm knocked down a package, a long package that clinked as it fell. He dragged it into the light. From Kirk's Sport Shop, Chicago. It contained a set of perfectly matched clubs.

So that was it! That was why she had Kirk stop there. To get a present — for him. All these months Pat had been scrimping on her clothes, pinching, saving —

What a heel — WHAT A HEEL — he had been!

A sound from behind startled him, the turning of a latch. He whirled. Pat stood in the doorway. Pat's eyes were blazing; her cheeks were on fire.

"Russ Van Hosen!" She stamped her foot, and it shook two bright tears out on her cheeks. "Russ Van Hosen, I COULD MURDER YOU!"

"Honey," Russ gasped, "Honey-girl!"

"Don't honey me! For a half hour you've let me sit out there in the drive. In the rain! Waiting for you to come out and get me. But you wouldn't. Oh, how I hate you! Instead you waited until I had to give in myself — humbling my pride — Suddenly Pat's voice broke. Her arms went around him. "Oh, Russ, I don't care what you did. But say you love me — that you'll always love me! . . . Because, I love you so!"

Russ didn't answer; he didn't want to answer. All he wanted was the assuring feel of her in his arms.

"Russ," Pat was sobbing, "even while we were quarreling I loved you. If you could only forgive that streak of Irish in me —"

"I can," Russ said humbly, "if you can overcome a streak of stubborn Dutch."

This Week In AMERICAN HISTORY

BY WILLIAM BRODIE

LAFAYETTE COMMISSIONED

A young man not yet twenty years old became an American general on July 31, 1777. On that day the Continental Congress in Philadelphia commissioned a young French nobleman as a major general in the Continental Army of the thirteen colonies fighting for independence. His name was Marie Joseph Paul Yves Roche Gilbert du Motier, Marquis de Lafayette. We know him as Lafayette, a name carved in glory and honor in our country's history.

The tall, slender, handsome, blond young Marquis de Lafayette was a wealthy French nobleman who had entered his country's military service at fifteen. By marriage at seventeen he allied his fortunes with those of powerful and ancient French families. Yet for all his aristocratic background he had a real love of liberty.

When Lafayette heard of the outbreak of the American Revolution his imagination and enthusiasm were stirred. He determined to join the great cause, believing that "the welfare of America is closely bound with the welfare of mankind. He also sought glory, and a chance to deal a blow against England in avenging the defeat of the recent Seven Years War in which France had been humiliated and his father had lost his life. Thus Lafayette, making the most important decision of his life, came to the aid of the American colonies.

He had to proceed secretly. He concealed his plans from his family, and withdrew from the French military service. Secretly, and at his own expense, he fitted out a ship and managed in time to sail to America. In the middle of June of 1777 he landed on the shore of South Carolina. Six weeks of hard travel brought him to Philadelphia where he presented his credentials to a committee of Congress. But he got a cool reception.

Congress had been annoyed with foreign adventurers who had little to offer but wanted high positions and big rewards for their services. The young Frenchman was at first glance considered in the same light by a weary Congress. But Lafayette wasn't easily rebuffed. He sent a petition to Congress requesting an opportunity to serve as a volunteer at his own expense. This unusual proposal got prompt attention. Lafayette's credentials were carefully examined, and on July 31, 1777 Congress voted him the rank and commission of major general. He was at the time two months short of his twentieth birthday.

Lafayette soon met Washington at a dinner in Philadelphia. Washington liked him from the first, seeing in the handsome young aristocrat the true gentleman, as well as enthusiastic seeker of glory. The American commander invited the boy to become one of his staff. There grew up between them an affectionate relationship of mutual liking and confidence, almost like that of father and son.

The young Marquis de Lafayette served bravely and with distinction through the Revolutionary War to its end with the final British defeat at Yorktown. After that he returned, with more fame and all the glory he had sought, to his family and young wife in France. Behind him he left in America the love and esteem of a new nation. Other foreigners have won the applause and homage of the American people. But above them all stands the glorious figure of young Lafayette.
