COVER PICTURE:

People in every phase of public and private life were shocked this week when the sudden death of Paterson Mayor Edward J. O'Byrne. Mayor O'Byrne died suddenly last Sunday in Flower Hospital, New York, after visiting his wife who was convalescing in New York Hospital. Mayor O'Byrne was elected to office in 1955, defeating the incumbent, Lester Titus, and in 1957 he defeated Thomas Lazzio to become Paterson's first three year term mayor.

FIBBER'S FANCIES — Fibber McGee (played by Bob Sweeney) develops one of his grandiose schemes for improving Wistful Vista that usually backfire in the Tuesday night situation-comedy series, "Fibber McGee and Molly" on the NBC-TV Network. Here (upper left) Fibber is hit with the great idea. Then (upper right) he worries that Doc Gamble might take a lot of convincing to cooperate. However (lower left) he considers that Mayor La-Trivia should be an easier mark, but finally (lower right) realizes that Molly — as usual — will puncture the scheme.

MIRACLE OF CHRISTMAS — The 10th telecast of Gian Carlo Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors" is scheduled on the NBC-TV Network on Christmas Eve, Thursday, Dec. 24. The program will be a taped re-showing of the NBC Opera Company production of last season. The three kings are Leon Lishner, Andrew McKinley and David Aiken. Kirk Jordan is Amahl and Rosemary Kuhlmann is the mother.

Wayne Mental Health Group Plans Clinic

Plans are underway by the Wayne Chapter of the Up-County Regional Committee of the Passaic County Mental Health Association to contact large numbers of Wayne residents with information concerning their plans in an effort to gain supporters for the proposed mental health clinic for the Upper Passaic County area. As suggested by Dr. Kalman Small, Wayne School Psychologist, the committee will ask interested individuals to sign pledges of their support.

The pledge reads as follows: "I hereby affirm the fact that I will pledge my support to the people in our community who are seeking to establish a badly needed mental health center in the Upper Passaic County area." It was pointed out that this pledge does not imply financial support but merely a conviction that such a clinic is desirable. Anyone willing to sign such a pledge who is not contacted in the near future, is urged to contact Mrs. William Downey, chairman of the group at OX 4-4908.

The Wayne committee visited the Union County Psychiatric Clinic in Plainfield in November. The purpose of the visit was to learn more about an established clinic, applying the knowledge gained towards the plan for an Upper Passaic County clinic. The success of the Union County Psychiatric Clinic encourages the members of the committee to hope for similar success in the up-county area in Passaic.

The Bloomingdale Group of the Up-County Regional Committee has also begun its survey on the community mental health needs, according to Mrs. Maria Schroeder. The survey will attempt to ascertain how many people in Bloomingdale are aware of the need for a mental health clinic.

Cunard Plans Luxury Cruise of Mediterranean

The Cunard line's world cruise liner Caronia is scheduled to make her second cruise next fall through the Mediterranean and Black Sea ports. A 58-day cruise is planned for next October, and places like Yalta and Odessa will be visited. Constanta, Romania will also be called on. Passengers will have the advantage of disembarking visiting Bucharest.

Altogether 24 ports will be visited in 19 countries, and 15,000 miles will be covered on the cruise. The price of the ticket is $1,100 per passenger.

Anderson Appointed To Bankers Council

The re-appointment of John P. Anderson, vice president of the First National Bank of Passaic County to the Public Relations Council of the American Bankers Association has been announced by John W. Remington, president of the Lincoln Rochester Trust Company, and president of the association. He was also re-appointed to the association's committee on Public Education.

At the same time, Anderson was appointed to the advisory committee on the Savings Conference of the Savings and Mortgage Division of the American Bankers Association.

United World Federalists Announce Topics

The United World Federalists, meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hoffman of Wayne, elected officers for the coming year. Plans were also made for the discussion series to be held the second Monday of each month this winter and spring, and it was decided to have a concert, a game night, a duplicate bridge tournament, and sale of U. N. recipe books as fund-raising activities.

Elected to offices in the Passaic Valley chapter were Mrs. John German, of Clifton, chairman; Mr. S. Krumholz of Pompton Lakes, vice chairman; Mrs. Burrell Ives Humphreys of Nutley, corresponding secretary; and Mr. Spencer Johnson of Pompton Plains, treasurer.

First in the series of discussions will be "Does the Khrushchev plan offer any real hope for disarmament? What are the ingredients of a successful disarmament agreement?" This discussion will be held January 11 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Reiffin, 555 East 27th Street, Paterson, and will be introduced by a short movie starring Raymond Massey. On February 8 the discussion will center around "How can world law be developed? Should the World Court be given compulsory jurisdiction?" Subsequent meetings will deal with "What are the chances of a nuclear test ban agreement? Can it be enforced?" (March); "Should Communist China be admitted to U. N. membership? What should be the tests of U. N. membership?" (April); "Where is the U. N. headed? In what way should it be strengthened?" (May); and "The U. N. at present." (June).

Tree Expert Exams To Be Held On February 10

Applications for the State Certified Tree Expert examination are due before January 13 the New Jersey Department of Conservation and Economic Development announced today. The test will be held on February 10.

The certified tree expert, like the certified public accountant, has additional training and experience and has proved his competence, Commissioner Bontempo said. Appreciation of his special knowledge is apparent in the increasing number of inquiries addressed to the Department and asking for the State list of Certified Tree Experts.

Qualification by examination gives the individual the right to carry the State certification card and to be listed with other qualified tree experts in each area of the State. Householders who have been misled by costly pretenders and have lost their trees, or had them saved by later treatment from a State certified tree expert, particularly appreciate the State certification.

Walter Schroeder, at left, musical director and conductor of the Paterson Philharmonic, recently entertained members of the Vienna Philharmonic. This famous orchestra is presently on a world tour, and has just concluded three highly successful performances in New York. A large percentage of the members of this renowned orchestra are former fellow students of Mr. Schroeder at the State Academy of Music of Vienna, Austria. Photo shows Wilhelm Bauer and Wolfgang Podushka of the Vienna Philharmonic listening to rehearsal recordings of the Paterson Philharmonics' forthcoming presentation of the complete "Nutcracker Ballet" featuring the Irene Fokine Ballet Company of Ridgewood.

The first graders were on a field trip to observe the birds beginning their migration. Explaining that they were noisy and excited because they were going on a long journey, the teacher asked the class, "What do you suppose they are saying?" "I imagine" said one little girl shyly, "that the mother birds are telling their children they'd better go to the bathroom before they start."

Mike: That fellow's the laziest man I've ever seen. He's been sitting on that rock for two hours doing nothing.
Ed: How do you know?
Mike: I've been sitting here and watching him.

Man: Good River for fish?
Fisherman: It must be. I can't persuade any of them to come out.

MRS. ROBERT WHITE

EDWARD J. O'BYRNE

"HONEST, CAPABLE, EFFICIENT"

They buried Edward J. O'Byrne this week in Calvary cemetery and with him went a good deal of the color and character of the civic and political life of this city . . . for Edward J. O'Byrne was the type of man you would recognize as a leader, as people from all walks of life still use the words which best describe "Eddie" as his many friends knew him — "honest, capable, efficient."

Honest, capable and efficient "Eddie" O'Byrne really was . . . perhaps the simple phrase — a fine citizen — describes him best . . . for he was all of that, and a lot more . . . pioneer resident, outstanding Catholic layman, sports enthusiast, and booster of the prestige of the Democratic party, he did his share to make Paterson a better city in which to live.

Edward O'Byrne was a man of great ability and initiative, whose main concern was the welfare of the community. Though a man who was constantly in the public eye, he was a very humble person, kind and gracious to everyone he met.

He played the game in every one of its many aspects in straight-forward and above-board fashion . . . no wonder that the tag which he carried with him to his grave — "honest, capable, efficient" — was placed upon him in his early 'teens and stuck fast to him through his fifty-five years of life . . . a rare figure in the hurly-burly of political and civic life, "Eddie" O'Byrne will be sadly missed by the many Patersonians who knew him.

NO WINNER UNDER COMPULSION

Strikes in basic industries have raised a question as to the validity of free collective bargaining. Some feel the government should intervene with compulsory arbitration. The trouble with this in the words of Secretary of Labor Mitchell is that, "As soon as government fixes wages . . . it must go on to determine conditions of work, fix hours, hear grievances and . . . dictate details of production. And does anyone think for a moment that the government can determine what wages are fair . . . without eventually determining what prices are fair . . . a government cannot assume the power to fix wages without eventually assuming the power to fix prices . . ."

The principle involved in compulsory arbitration is not compatible with a free society. It would mean the end of the free market. Eventually it would cripple the magnificent mass retail distribution system which as a partner to mass production has built a standard of living in this country that is the envy of the world. Instead of abundance, there would be scarcity. Instead of competition there would be black markets. A consumer may now walk into any retail establishment in the land with the knowledge that the price of any purchase is set by the fairest method known — the natural law of supply and demand.

The philosophy of the modern retailer operating in a free market is simply to move the largest possible volume of goods at the lowest practicable price.

The Editor Speaks

Years ago migraine was the fashionable disease among women. Men didn't have the stylish disease in those days, unless perhaps it was gout. Gout came from too rich living and so, to have gout was a sign of opulence.

In the old days, also, when you caught a cold, you just sneezed, blew your nose and took some aspirin.

If it was too serious, you went to bed for a couple of days or weeks. My physician told me if you doctored a cold it would take two weeks to get over it. If you left it alone it would take 14 days.

But not so nowadays. At the recent convention of the American Medical Association a speaker said cold may well be the result of emotional upsets.

He spoke of a $50,000 a year executive whose dream it had always been to be a rodeo rider. That set up a sequence of frustrations and anxieties in him. So he developed a chronic cold. Almost sneezed himself to death. They didn't give him medicines. They gave him psychiatric treatment. That cured him. Now, he can enjoy his $50,000 in good health.

However, if you have a cold, see your doctor anyway.

Good Records Needed For Social Security

If you are a self-employed businessman or farmer, you realize that you must keep good records in order to make out proper social security tax returns on your employees, Stanley J. Fiorese, district manager of the Paterson social security office, said today. You need to have an exact account of all wages paid, the full name of the employee, and his correct social security number. The worker is then assured of social security protection for himself and his family.

But are you, the employer, watching out as carefully for your own social security protection? Each year, all over the country, social security offices are notified that self-employed people in their areas have not put their own social security numbers on their tax returns. Without the social security number the self-employment income cannot be credited to the social security account of the person who has already paid for it. Social security offices follow up on all of these cases, but sometimes either receive no reply or cannot locate individuals who have changed their addresses. The best solution to this problem? Keep as good social security records for yourself, and your family, as you keep for your employees.

Another social security records-and-benefit problem often concerns the parttime or small-income self-employed person, Fiorese continued. He must file a self-employment tax return for any year that his net profit reaches or exceeds $400. Although he may not be liable for income tax on such a small net, he nevertheless must file an income tax return in order to receive social security credit. Again, he must have good records to prove that his net profit is at least $400.

Some of you may not have realized that you should have filed income tax returns for past years in which you netted $400 or more, and have already missed social security credits that you could otherwise have claimed. What should be done?

Here is the answer. At the present time you can go back to 1956, file tax returns, and get credit for all the years beginning then. But all years before 1956 that you failed to report are lost to you so far as social security credits are concerned. If you need further information, get in touch with the nearest office of the Internal Revenue Service, or the local social security office at 245 Market Street, Paterson.

DILLISTIN SWORN IN AS MAYOR — William H. Dillistin was sworn in as mayor of Paterson this week by County Court Judge Salvatore Viviano. His wife, Grace E. (Brader) is holding the Bible. As an emergency the ceremony was held in Dillistin's home. He becomes mayor by virtue of his being the president of the Finance Board.

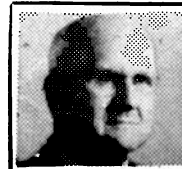

It appears to be the consensus in merchandising circles that November and December retail sales this year will exceed those of the like 1958 months by about 5 per cent.

SPOTLIGHT ON DINAH — Dinah's songs, and top entertainers of the world as her guests, will be the highlights of the new season's colorcasts of "The Dinah Shore Chevy Show" on the NBC-TV Network Sunday nights.

DENNIS O'KEEFE . . . star of the new weekly comedy series, "The Dennis O'Keefe Show," on the CBS Television Network.

ROBERT YOUNG and JANE WYATT . . . play husband and wife on one of the most honored situation-comedy series, "Father Knows Best," on the CBS Television Network.

MASTER-OF-SURPRISES — Bill Leyden emcees NBC-TV Network's "It Could Be You," providing many surprises for unsuspecting members of the studio audience. In addition to the Monday-through-Friday daytime series, Leyden will head a Saturday night telecast.

Film Portrays Aviation History

The drama of the jet age — and the story of how man learned to fly — has now been brought to the screen with a unique blend of ballet and color.

The film is called "Jet" — a documentary record of the evolution of jet travel, and it was produced by Scandinavian Airlines.

In a series of ballet flash-backs the film traces the development of flight from pre-historic times to the present.

Linking all the scenes is a ballet dancer symbolizing Man's Creative Spirit. This role is danced by Veit Bethke, distinguished British stage and screen performer who also has done all the choreography for the film.

The film catches highlights and key figures in aviation history: Leonardo da Vinci, the Montgolfier balloon, Zeppelins, the Lilienthal glider, the Wright Brothers, Bleriot and Lindbergh.

Each man, each development is set against characteristic music and dances of its period — from the stately Minuet of the 18th century to the Charleston of the 1920's.

The film moves swiftly through the era of the piston-engine aircraft — climaxed by the non-stop, long-range DC-7C.

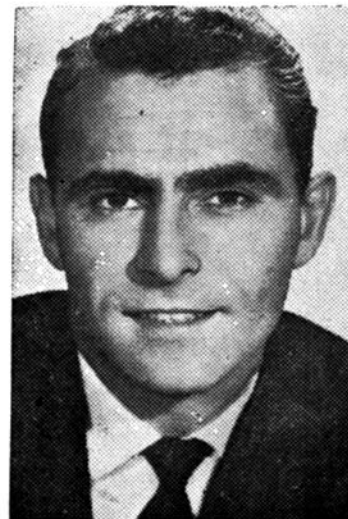

Then comes the jet age. The film follows Man's Creative Spirit in a sweeping dance through the DC-8 factories of Douglas Aircraft, the Coronado factories of Convair, and Sud-Aviation's Caravelle plant.

The way the jet engine works is then explained through a spectacular ballet. And the final portion of the film shows what jet flight means to today's travellers in terms of time saving and new travel pleasure.

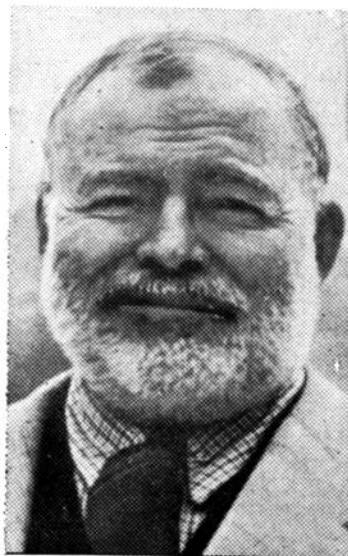

The film was eight months in production, with camera crews working at such widely-separated points as Los Angeles and San Diego in the United States Derby in England; Toulouse, Paris and Melun in France, and in Scandinavia.

CAPITAL SPENDING

This year, according to an estimate of the Commerce Department and the Securities and Exchange Commission, U. S. business will have invested $32.8 billion in new plant and equipment. It has been forecast that such outlays will rise by 18 per cent in 1960 to $39 billion.

The Splintered Clue

By PHILIP KETCHUM

The old man had been crippled with arthritis, confined to his bed, but he had put up a fight with his murderer. As evidence of this, the bed stand had been knocked over and on the carpet were the splintered fragments of a drinking glass. Jorgensen stood in the doorway, scowling as he glanced around the room. He asked one of the detectives who had come with us to pick up the broken pieces of glass, being careful of the larger pieces. "We might find some fingerprints which will help us."

The dead man's name was Johan Bond. He had lived in this rooming house with his granddaughter, a rather attractive girl by the name of Mary. He hadn't been a very pleasant person, according to Edith Mobridge, the landlady. Wealthy enough to have afforded hospital care, he had refused it, insisting that Mary look after him. His wants consumed most of her time day and night. And Mary Bond, though engaged to a nice young man named Howard Tyler, and fretting at the postponement of her marriage, had put up with it out of obligation to him, as her only relative.

After only a few minutes in the room where Johan Bond had been killed, we went back downstairs to the parlor where the two other roomers, and Edith Mobridge and her son and Mary Bond were waiting. There were tears in Mary's eyes. Arthur Mobridge, the landlady's son, was whispering something to her. He was a tall, thin man, about twenty-eight, pale and dark eyed and nervous. The other two roomers, both middle aged men, were standing close together.

"Tell me about it again, Mrs. Mobridge," said Jorgensen.

"I was in my room reading when I heard something fall," said Edith Mobridge. "A moment later I heard running footsteps going down the hall, toward the back window. The door to Mr. Bond's room was open. I hurried that way and got there just at the time Mr. Pierce and Mr. Latham came up the stairs. We looked in and saw —" She broke off, shuddering.

"How long ago was that?" asked Jorgensen.

Mrs. Mobridge lifted her hand to the side of her face. She looked across the room toward the clock. She said, "Three hours ago. It was almost nine."

Pierce and Latham were the other two roomers. According to what they had previously said, they had been playing chess in the parlor, had heard the crash of the bedstand as it fell, and had then gone upstairs to see what had happened. Mary Bond and Arthur Mobridge had been on the front porch, talking.

Jorgensen drew me aside. "Any ideas, Bill?"

I learned long ago not to try to out-guess Jorgensen, but I asked, "What about this man Tyler, the man Mary Bond is engaged to?"

"You mean," said Jorgensen, "that Tyler could have put a ladder up to the window, entered the house, killed him, returned the ladder, and escaped?"

"He wanted to marry the girl," I pointed out. "He couldn't while the old man was alive."

About this time the two officers who had been sent to round up Howard Tyler, showed up with him in custody. And before any question could be asked, Mary Bond rushed to his arms. When this happened, I watched Arthur Mobridge, but beyond scowling, he showed no other emotion.

Tyler was younger than Mobridge, maybe twenty-two and rather good looking. He kept his arm around Mary while he answered Jorgensen's questions. He said he had been alone in his apartment all evening, but could not prove it. He admitted he had been pressing Mary Bond to marry him in spite of her grandfather's objections.

"I've felt at times like killing him," he admitted. "But I didn't do it. I swear I didn't."

Jorgensen questioned everyone again and everyone alibied everyone else with the exception of Tyler.

"What do you think now?" Jorgensen asked me.

"Someone's lying," I suggested.

Jorgensen nodded his head. He said, "Come on, Bill. Let's go upstairs and break a glass."

We went upstairs to the room in which Bond had been strangled. The lab men were finished with it and Bond's body had been picked up, the bed stand righted. Jorgensen found a drinking glass in the kitchenette which was similar to the one which had been broken. He set it on the bed stand and pushed the bed stand over. The glass was pretty thick. It bounced when it hit the carpet. It didn't break.

Jorgensen tried his experiment again, and then again, and a fourth time. The glass still didn't break.

"Try throwing it at the carpet," I offered.

"That's what I'm thinking of," said Jorgensen. "But first, let's take a look in the other rooms up here."

"What are we hunting?" I asked.

"Glasses," said Jorgensen, grinning.

I didn't get it. I shook my head, puzzled, and watched while Jorgensen made his search. After a time we went back downstairs. Everyone looked at us as we came in. And you could sense the tension in the room. Pierce and Latham were scowling. Mrs. Mobridge leaned back in her chair, her fingers laced together, but she wasn't at ease and her sharp eyes stared at Jorgensen. Her son stood near her, leaning slightly over her shoulder. Mary and Howard Tyler were near the window.

Jorgensen is never one to fool around and play a scene for all it's worth. He goes straight at his job. "Mrs. Mobridge," he said quietly, "what time is it?"

The question seemed to startle the woman. She caught her breath, lifted her hand to the side of her face, stared across the room at the clock and answered, "Why—why it's one-twenty."

"That's right," Jorgensen nodded. "but you wouldn't have had to pull at the side of your face if you had been wearing your glasses. Where are they? I saw the case in your room."

"I—I often don't wear them," said Mrs. Mobridge.

"No," said Jorgensen, "for you are near-sighted. That gesture, lifting your hand to the side of your face and pushing back the skin to change the shape of your eye, is dead giveaway. People suffering from astigmatism often do that when they don't have their glasses. It increases the range of the vision."

Mrs. Mobridge moistened her lips. "But—but I don't understand. What does this have to do with—"

"I think your glasses were broken when you struggled with Mr. Bond, in his room," Jorgensen continued. "The bed stand was probably also pushed over. You knew the sound of it might bring someone running up the stairs. You didn't have time to pick up the pieces of the broken lenses, or perhaps you were too blind to find them. You broke the drinking glass on the floor, thinking with more glass to hide the broken lenses. Of course, it won't work. Optical glass can be distinguished from ordinary glass. Now tell me this. Why did you kill him?"

Mrs. Mobridge took a deep breath. Her mouth opened and closed, as though in an effort to speak. Every bit of color had drained from her face. And suddenly she slumped over in a faint. I expected her son to drop to his knees at her side, but he didn't. Instead, he backed away, then made a break for the door. He didn't make it.

"Was the son in it, too?" I asked Jorgensen, later.

"In a way, he was," said the detective. "They really had a clever plan. They knew, through Mary Bond, that Tyler wouldn't have an alibi for that evening and Arthur Mobridge kept Mary occupied on the porch while her mother finished off the old man. That gave him an air tight alibi. Young Tyler was such a logical suspect, they didn't worry about an alibi for Mrs. Mobridge."

"And the motive?"

"The old man's money. Arthur Mobridge as the good friend of Mary, would have stood at her side and comforted her after the arrest of Tyler, eventually moving in to take Tyler's place. Of course, it might not have worked out that way, but the Mobridges thought it would."

"And if the drinking glass had not bounced?"

Jorgensen chuckled. He said, "Speaking of glasses, let's go to the tavern across the street and buy a couple, filled to the brim. Can you figure that one out, Bill?"

I grinned and said I could.

MARCH OF DONIPHAN'S THOUSAND

One of the most amazing long marches in all military history began on December 12, 1846 at Valverde on the Rio Grande in New Mexico. It was to become known as the "March of Doniphan's Thousand."

Alexander William Doniphan was a lawyer by profession and the son of a Revolutionary soldier. He was living and practicing in the frontier state of Missouri when in May of 1846 he organized the 1st Regiment of Missouri Mounted Volunteers for the Mexican War. Doniphan, then 38 years of age, was elected colonel of the regiment.

Doniphan marched his men to join General Kearny's "Army of the West" in New Mexico. After the capture of Santa Fe Doniphan was ordered to defeat the Navajo Indians who had been raiding New Mexican settlements and force them to sign a peace treaty. That accomplished, the regiment's new orders were to go down to Chihuahua, Mexico, and join up with General Wool's army.

By mid-December Doniphan's regiment was assembled at Valverde where some 300 traders with their wagons had been waiting for a military escort to move south. With the traders and their teamsters and 100 newly arrived men from Santa Fe Doniphan had about 1200 rough and ready riflemen, enough, in every man's opinion, to "whip anything this side of Chihuahua." Off they marched to the south.

On Christmas Day Doniphan's men defeated a force of Mexicans at the battle of El Brazito near El Paso, which they occupied. There they stayed until February 8, when they resumed their march southward to Chihuahua with 17 new men and a battery of six small cannon.

They moved across the dreaded desert, a wasteland where water-holes were few and far apart. Whenever they came to a water-hole the men filled everything possible, even their sword scabbards, with water, letting their blades hang naked at their sides. By day they trudged through deep sand. They suffered from the winter cold sweeping across the bare desert in piercing winds. At night their camps were cheerless, for they seldom had wood for fire. One soldier's description of a night's halt was, "no food, no fire, no sleep, very cold."

After a three week's march from El Paso they met a Mexican force of 3,000 troops before Chihuahua. In a sharp struggle that lasted three hours, known as the battle of Sacramento, the Mexicans were driven from their positions with heavy loss and Chihuahua was captured. Doniphan's men lost one man killed and eleven wounded.

Despite his smashing victory, Doniphan was in a "ticklish" position. He was completely out of touch with his government or the American army. In time he managed to get a message through to General Wolf far away at Buena Vista. "My position is exceedingly embarrassing," he wrote. "Most of the men have been in service since last June, and have not received one cent of pay. Their marches have been hard — they are literally without horses, clothes, or money — nothing but arms and a disposition to use them. They are volunteers, wholly unfit to garrison a city."

Finally orders came through from General Taylor in Monterrey for Doniphan to leave Chihuahua and join the main American army. On April 28, after 59 days of occupation, Doniphan's men moved out of Chihuahua to begin another long march through enemy territory, with "arms as their only passports." They reached Buena Vista and then Monterrey safely, acclaimed as the legendary marchers and fighters from Chihuahua.

From there they moved to Matamoros at the mouth of the Rio Grande, and thence by boat to New Orleans. There, still "rough and ready" and as ragged as ever, they received their discharge and first pay. By July of 1847 "Doniphan's Thousand" were back in Missouri, having completed in a year nearly 6,000 miles of perilous marching and fighting.
