Medical Milestones

New Drug Treats Old Ill

Medical developments that apply to all of us are few and far between. But one was recently announced—a real medical milestone—in the form of a new and superior drug for the treatment of diarrhea, a "disease" that affects young and old alike.

Actually diarrhea is not a disease itself, but is rather a symptom of some gastrointestinal disorder. These disorders may be caused by faulty nutrition, bacteria or virus, or a nervous condition. The latter is the most common offender.

But whatever the cause, the resulting diarrhea, if permitted to continue, can lead to more serious complications, such as severe dehydration or vitamin deficiency.

There are two types of diarrhea: acute, lasting from several days to a week or more; and chronic, lasting for years, with bowel movements sometimes numbering as many as 25 a day. Both can be quite debilitating.

What are the mechanics of diarrhea? After you eat food, it passes through the digestive system by a series of muscular constrictions, over which we have no control. During this passage enzymes are added, and eventually the usable nutrients are absorbed by the blood stream. In the large intestine (the colon) excess water is absorbed out of the waste matter. If, for some reason, these muscular constrictions are speeded up, food passes through the digestive system too rapidly to be properly digested and the excess water is not absorbed.

Before the physician can find and treat the underlying cause, he must treat the diarrhea. His task here is two-fold: he must slow down the speeded up muscular action of the intestines, and he must absorb the excess water. The new drug, known to doctors as Sorboquel, attacks both of these things with specific actions.

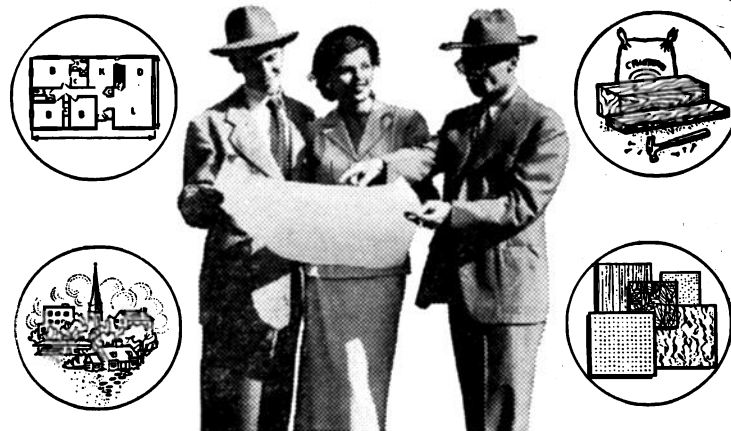

This drug, which is available only on prescription in convenient tablet form, contains a new water-binding agent, polycarbophil, that does not form into a gelatinous mass as it swells, and does not interfere with digestion; and a new anti-motility agent, thihexinol, which effectively slows down the muscular constrictions, and does not affect the secretion of digestive enzymes.

Hundreds of clinical tests showed this product to be superior in the treatment of both acute and chronic diarrheas to any other drug presently available.

Since diarrhea is a symptom of some other illness, it is important that the victim see his physician at the first signs, for prompt action can help prevent more serious complications.

PLANNING FOR A QUIET LIFE

Really effective noise control requires planning for quiet. If you are building or moving into a new home, you have the advantage of being able to start at the beginning. This picture shows a couple talking over noise control with their architect. The inserts illustrate the most important points they will have to consider: (lower left) the location of their home—in a relatively quiet community and as far back from the street as possible; (upper left) the arrangement of rooms—segregating the quiet areas from the noisy ones; (upper right) taking the necessary "structural" steps such as constructing double walls; and (lower right) the use of acoustical materials on ceilings to substantially reduce the build-up of noise within a room and minimize the spread of noise throughout the home.

Tips on Touring

For Outdoor Living

To help you and your family enjoy the great outdoors this summer, the makers of gadgets have come up with some dandy new ones.

Here are some you might want to consider:

For inflating air mattresses, life rafts, etc., there's a pump unit that runs on your car's engine. Remove a spark plug, screw on the unit, idle your engine, and—presto!—air is pumped in while you sit back and rest. Be sure the plugs on your engine are easy to reach and the pump you get fits the plug opening.

To save trunk space when you're carrying an outboard motor, there's an accessory that enables you to clamp the outboard to the lid of the trunk. It's secured by vacuum cups, screw clamps and web safety straps. When you want to open the trunk, the motor can be swung away to rest on the ground.

For campers, there's a combination tool that can be used as a hatchet, hammer, chisel, nail puller, bottle cap remover, saw, screwdriver and spade. It comes with a draw-string carrying case.

A stove that burns canned propane does double duty as a broiler when turned on its side. It cooks with a flameless, red-hot grid. It broils meat as fat drips off. Tilted back, it can be used with cooking utensils.

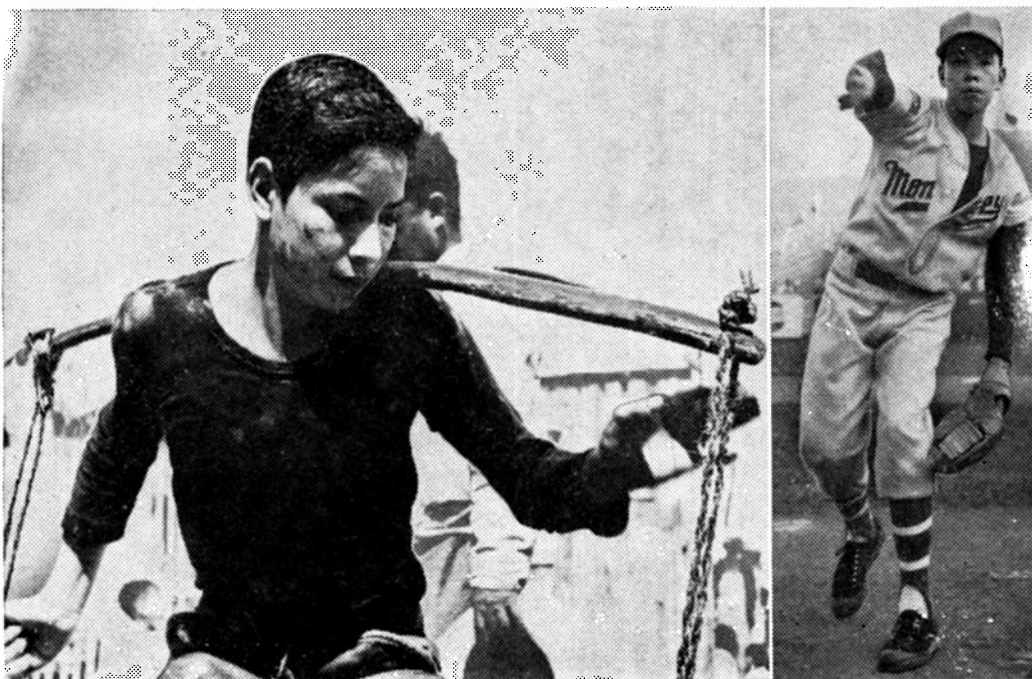

Another cooking device is an electric toaster and broiler with a griddle in the middle. It works off the car battery through the cigarette lighter socket. Toaster pops up, griddle and broiler temperatures can be regulated.

A WILL TO WIN — Angel Macias was one of thousands of impoverished, undernourished "chamacos" or street urchins of Monterrey, Mexico, who were given a first chance to play organized baseball three years ago. Angel, a 12-year-old, ambidextrous 88-pounder became one of Mexico's greatest sports heroes, pitching a perfect game (no batters allowed to reach first base) as Monterrey went on to win the 1957

Little League World Series in Williamsport, Pa. The dramatic and poignant story of how Mexico's "wonder kids" gave the U.S. a lesson in human relations as well as in baseball, will be told on Tuesday, June 14, on the NBC-TV Network in a special 90-minute television presentation of a Mexican art motion picture, "The Little Giants," which had its world premiere this month in Monterrey.

NBC RADIO'S "ANCHOR MEN" — Veteran newsmen Robert McCormick (left) and Morgan Beatty will head the reportorial team covering the 1960 political conventions for the NBC Radio Network. McCormick has been with NBC News for 18 years — as a war correspondent, Washington TV News Bureau chief, and in many other posts. Before joining NBC he was with the Washington News and Collier's for 12 years. Beatty has covered national and international politics for 33 years — 14 years with the Associated Press and 19 years with NBC. He is editor-in-chief and commentator of NBC Radio's "News of the World."

Quips That Pass in the Night

JIMMY DYKES

Athletes have undergone many changes from their previous mores and status. They have turned to business, bowling, and beer (selling, instead of drinking) and generally, their lot is one of affluence. It's a far cry from the pattern and structure of past years.

This is especially so, in the case of baseball players who appear to possess more acumen than those of the previous generation. In one other direction, too, has a radical change been noted: the ability to deliver a funny quip. Perhaps, prosperity has greased the chain-reaction comedy, but unquestionably the players now are able to sock a gag as well as a curve. They provide plenty of funmaking, with these quips that pass in the night — and in the daytime, as well.

One of the baseball men bridging today's era with the past, is Jimmy Dykes who is manager of the Detroit Tigers and who obviously would be required to own a sense of humor in order to hold a job of that sort. He waxes humorous (while offering a serious undertone, too) as he discusses umpires, their foibles and fables.

It is the Dykes opinion that umpires should be seen and not absurd. He believes that he has good reason for his many controversies with the men whose decisions can make or break a team. Certainly, Jimmy has his troubles with the umpires but he feels they — not he — should worry.

Dykes, a big league star for many years and then later, a coach and manager, contends that the problem of the care and feeding of umpires needs more study. "Some sort of relief should be given them," he points out, while not suggesting that they be placed on relief. "When a ball player can't make it in the majors, he is sent down to the minors to learn his trade. Certainly, what's good for the players should be good enough for the umpires.

"If they haven't proven themselves capable of staying up there, why keep them on? Give them a chance to work their way back, but first provide them with the necessary seasoning."

Adds Jimmy: "When an umpire is sent to the minors for such experience, I think it would be humane to let him take his Seeing Eye dog with him."

One of the recent ball players turned quipmaster, is Joe Garagiola, who is a broadcaster and who has made many public-speaking and radio-television appearances in recognition of his funnyman role. He was a Cardinals' catcher years ago and when he came close to the end of his career, he suddenly found himself in this new role with his penchant for the humorous phrase. There was one classic occasion when he was testifying in a Congressional hearing and was asked if anyone ever had tried to tamper with his performance on the field. Commented the irrepressible Garagiola: "Congressman, you're talking to a .220 hitter."

Joe refers to himself as "a tail gunner on a beer truck." The St. Louis author-broadcaster was conducting an interview before a recent game and asked a San Francisco fan to name his favorites. The fan replied: "Sam Jones and the Pope."

Garagiola replied: "That makes us very happy. They're both former Cardinals."

The story was told by Milt Gross about Don Blasingame, also a former Cardinal. When he came to the San Francisco Giants in a trade with the St. Louis Club, he was told that Manager Bill Rigney had told him to "stay on his toes."

"It's not necessary," quipped Blasingame. "The plumbing in our park made the sinks six inches higher than last year."

In the matter of fast answers, a bow should be taken to Al Lopez, Chicago White Sox manager, too. This particular game, he came out of the dugout to remove pitcher Dick Donovan from the box.

Lamely, Donovan remonstrated: "They were all handle hits. I just haven't been getting the breaks."

Replied Lopez, for a bulls-eye: "I don't think the pitcher coming in, will be any better. I'm just hoping he'll be a little luckier."

Colorful ex-pitcher who also has turned announcer, Dizzy Dean declared while doing a play-by-play airing of a Detroit Tigers' game on the "game of the week" broadcast. "Al Kallne has hit in eight straight consecutive games in a row."

Bud Blattner, Dean's partner then, drily asked him: "It that in succession?"

"Yes," Dean replied. "One after another."

Boxing has its funny moments, too. There was the time Billy Conn predicted he would beat Joe Louis, then heavyweight champion of the world, by running around the ring and continuing to run while he wrapped up the decision.

In his own characteristic fashion, Louis reacted with the dactylic comment: "He can run — but he can't hide." As it turned out, he did — he didn't.

HEALTH HORIZONS

Athlete's Foot And What To Do About It

If you have ever been unfortunate enough to contact the fungus infection known as athlete's foot you do not have to be told how irritating it can become. The bothersome disease makes no distinction between the young and old, the poor and rich. Everyone can come down with a case of it since the plantlike fungus is universally present on everyone's feet.

There are general rules of foot hygiene that are important for all who are subject to or have this condition. As for treatment, a new unique method for sustained action of medication called Fungacitin was developed by the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation and has been made available in all forms—liquid, powder and ointment.

Feet that are poorly ventilated, that are surrounded by shoes that do not fit properly, and that are moist and damp for long periods of time are more subject to infection than feet that are better cared for. At one time it was thought that only athletes carried the fungus seeds of the disease and spread them to other athletes while taking showers and walking on shower room floors. Now it is recognized that all persons can cause the spread of athlete's foot through contamination of swimming pools, bathing beaches or any place where barefooted persons congregate.

Since 85 per cent of the population is affected at one time or another, you will probably remember the painful itching which increased in intensity with scratching or just plain exposure to the air, the tendency for cracks to open between your toes. Maybe you even had small blisters break out and raw places between the toes which swelled and made walking an effort. If you did, you were probably not thinking of the causes of the disease... nor were you thinking of the signs to watch for which could tell you that you had contacted the disease. If you had, however, it would have enabled you to seek advice on how to cure it and thereby you could have avoided the painful and embarrassing consequences of a bad case.

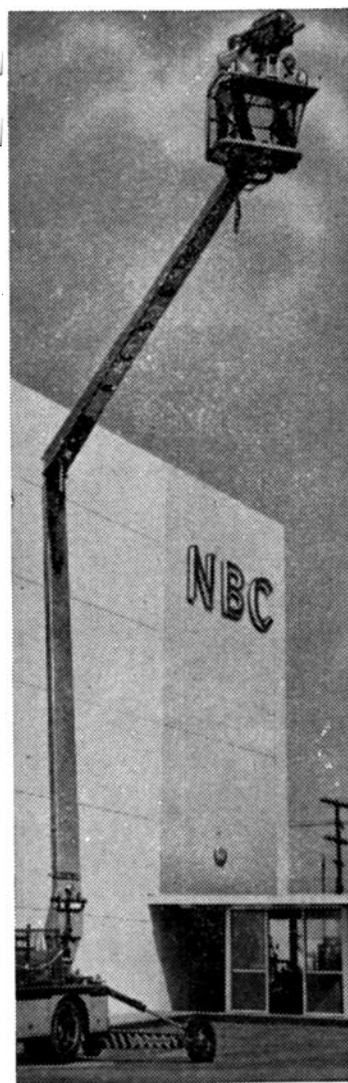

Whether athlete's foot is caused by the wearing of shoes, as some theorists believe, or the fungus itself, certainly the following preventative steps have their place in the avoidance of the disease:

1. Keeping your feet dry and free from dead skin.
2. Wearing shoes that fit well and give your feet ventilation.
3. When showering, be sure to wash between your toes using soap and a nail brush to remove the fungus from under your nails.
4. Dry your feet thoroughly and, especially, between your toes.
5. Change your hose once a day.

Should you be one of those unfortunates who already has signs of the disease, such as an increased dampness between the toes, scaling, itching or blistering, you will find this drug to be most effective in the treatment of the disease.

This effective drug was recently tested by two military foot specialists at the DeWitt Army General Hospital. Treatment of male and female patients with Fungacitin resulted in the complete cure of 76% of the patients suffering from varying degrees of persistent athlete's foot. Because of its anti-germicide and non-irritating qualities, Fungacitin has been found to be an excellent prevention against the disease as well. Dusting of the feet and shoes with the new drug each morning will kill fungi before they have a chance to spread.

EYE IN THE SKY — Towering 75 feet in the air, NBC's hi-reach television camera will be in action at the Democratic and Republican Conventions to provide a bird's-eye-view of motorcades and key figures arriving at the convention sites. The camera is mounted on an articulated boom rising from a mobile platform and has a far range from its high vantage point.

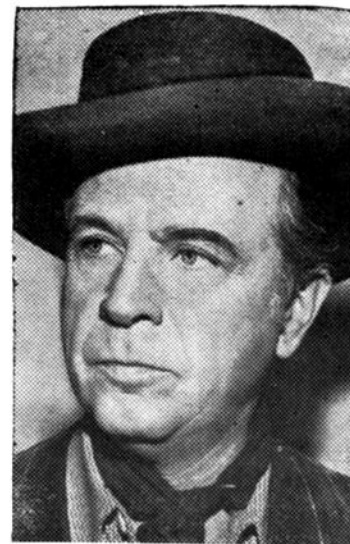

'DIAMOND' STAR — David Janssen stars in the title role of new episodes of "Richard Diamond, Private Detective," half-hour action-adventure series returning to the NBC-TV Network's Tuesday nighttime schedule beginning on June 28. The series is built around the crime-pursuant adventures of a tough, suave, Hollywood private detective.

"It's SUCH a strain on me being married to somebody important—isn't it nice you don't have to worry!"

EARL HOLLIMAN... stars as Sundance in the new western series, "Hotel de Paree," on the CBS Television Network.

DICK POWELL... is host and occasional star of "Dick Powell's Zane Grey Theatre," on the CBS Television Network.

Q: "I'm thirteen and worried that I'll have a bad skin like some of the kids in my school. Is there anything I can do to prevent this from happening to me?"

A: Here are five rules to follow if your aim is a clear, untroubled complexion:

1. Stop worrying. An unhappy mental attitude often reflects on your skin. Some forms of acne are said to be caused by emotional disturbances.

2. Get into the habit of drinking at least three glasses of water a day.

3. Establish good eating habits: regularly scheduled meals, plenty of protein (meat, eggs, fish, milk) fruits, fresh vegetables and an occasional dose of cod liver oil. Avoid too many starches, fried foods, rich desserts and soft drinks.

4. Wash your face thoroughly at least twice a day and give your skin an extra deep cleansing with cold cream. Apply the cream (before you wash) over your entire face, then remove it with tissues.

5. Make sure you don't get overtired. Try to get at least eight hours of sleep every night. Remember, a weary body can never look its best—and that includes the condition of your skin.

POLITICAL PAYOLA

We've all heard about "payola" — a device where, according to the revelations of a Congressional investigating body, disc jockeys obtained large sums of money along with valuable gifts from record companies in return for plugging the product. This, coming on the heels of the TV quiz-show scandals, has left a bad taste in the mouths of millions of Americans.

But there's another form of "payola" that is far more important. Congressman Halleck deserves the credit for calling attention to it. He describes the avalanche of proposed multi-billion dollar spending bills as "political payola". In his words, they "simply hand out the taxpayers' money to buy votes for the next election."

If the "political payola" groups have their way, there won't be a budget surplus. In all probability, there'll be a deficit instead. Then we'll have more inflation — and, ultimately, still more and higher taxes. How does that prospect strike you?

SQUAWK NOW OR PAY LATER

During the decade which recently ended, living costs set new altitude records in this country — a statement which hardly comes under the head of news. Putting the matter more precisely, the average cost of all commodities rose 21 per cent between 1950 and 1959.

But one commodity in virtually universal use resisted the upward trend. It was gasoline. Its costs, minus taxes, rose only 5.5 per cent in the same period.

That may seem like a gross misstatement to many motorists, who know from hard experience that a dollar bill buys a lot less gas than it used to. If you're one of them, remember that qualifying phrase "minus taxes." For the modest rise in the before-tax gasoline price was camouflaged by a 51 per cent rise in gasoline taxes. Today the combined state and federal gas taxes — which are pure sales taxes, all paid by consumers — average 10.12 cents a gallon. The oil industry, obviously, can do nothing about that except collect the money from its customers and turn it over to government.

No luxury, save liquor and tobacco, carries so heavy a tax — much less an absolutely essential commodity. But a movement is afoot to further increase the recent "temporary" federal gas tax which was boosted by another cent a few months ago. The argument back of this is that the Highway Trust Fund through which the current $40 billion-plus superhighway program is being financed, is running in the red. However, it wouldn't be in the red if the money paid to the federal government by motorists was all used for roads. The figures: Last year federal automobile taxes, of which the gas tax is the biggest element, came to $4 billion. But $1.6 billion — 43 per cent of the whole — went into the government's general fund, and was used for non-highway purposes.

The motorist has a thoroughly-justified squawk coming — and he'd better make it heard if he is to escape further gouging.

The Editor Speaks

I have discovered the South Jersey shore, and what a wonderful discovery it was. Now before you start wondering where this fellow has been all his life that he just now has become aware of something that is right under his nose, let me explain my statement. For I doubt that many of you have made a similar discovery.

Ever since I can remember we have been going to the shore every summer for a few weeks. But this was the first time that I went to the shore before the tourist season was in full swing. It was the Memorial Day week-end and what a blast we had!

The beach was a delightful new experience. It was wild, natural, untamed, adventurous, and exciting. There were no crowds, no youngsters crying, no ice cream vendor yelling in your ear, no noise of people drowning out the roar of the ocean, no one running past you kicking sand all over you.

Instead the beach, only sparsely populated, was littered with driftwood and debris tossed onto the white sands by the rolling waves, giving the shoreline a somewhat pioneer appearance. There was charred wood from burning fires of beach parties of nights gone by, something not allowed during the summer months.

The air was cool and the water cooler, but the salt air was fresh and invigorating and the water stimulating. You had the beach to yourself; you could play ball and no one would mind, you could bring a picnic basket and no one would stop you, as darkness approached you could light a fire, toast marshmallows, and frolic on the beach and no one would care.

And then there was the boardwalk with its lights, games of chance, food stands, rides, penny arcades, shooting galleries, and a hundred other amusements. This was the same, but then again it was new, for it's something you never tire of. There's something about a boardwalk that has a fascination for young and old alike. And, believe me, it's very, very hard to walk its length without spending some money.

But, all in all, it was a new experience, and I look forward to going to the shore from now on either before or after the tourist season. That's when you really begin to appreciate its beauty and magnetic appeal.

FOCUS

EAST-WEST — Reports reaching the free world in ever greater volume from the Iron Curtain countries indicate that 15 years of sustained attack by the Satellite states on Christianity and 30 years of such atheistic crusades by the USSR have failed to eliminate Christian mores from the hearts and minds of the people. In all cities of Russia, large and small, churches were filled to capacity in spite of the government's general disapproval of religion. The free world can well be heartened at the manner in which the chained millions of the Communist world have with dignity and forbearance answered the atheistic, decades-long crusade of the Soviet propagandists.

POLITICS — Too often the pressure groups measure the suitability of a lawmaker by the number of times he voted "right" with them. Just as frequently, politicians go before the voters to boast of their "rightness" with labor, the farmer, the veteran, or whoever. It would be refreshing for a change to see a candidate get up and contend that he had tried for the last two or four or six years to vote "right" with the United States. This country will be moving toward real political maturity when men seeking office are judged on this broad plane, rather than by the narrow gauge of service to limited interests. But, for the most part, neither the politicians nor the people they represent seem close today to the threshold of that maturity.

YOUTH — A survey of some nine hundred communities recently revealed that youngsters stand a better chance of living a crime-free life if they come from rural areas, or small cities, than if they are reared in metropolitan areas. All of which goes to prove that the strength of America lies in rural areas and in small towns, where close family ties, and orderly and supervised life, and the basic, traditional values of society, are still more keenly appreciated.

ELDERLY — While a great political effort is being made to establish federal aid for the elderly, an army of senior citizens would deem it a great boon if the compulsory retirement age were raised from 65 to, say, 70. That's all the federal aid they would want.

Free Admission To Zonta Fair

Paterson Zonta Club is holding a delightful country fair on Saturday, June 17. Free admission, free parking, on the grounds, and free side show. The fair is open to the general public and promises to be a wonderful day's entertainment for the entire family.

Rain or shine, the fair will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. offering continuous refreshments for lunch and supper, snack-bars, brimming with home made cakes, ice cream, soda-pop and hot popcorn.

The white elephant booth promises exotic imported merchandise; hand made arts and craft booth will tempt everyone; a garden shop booth, with plants for the home and garden along with gardening accessories will be outstanding among the sixteen booths now being arranged.

President, Mrs. Dorothy Canfield, Chairman

"If Jane had only stopped telling me how to drive . . ."

When anger grips the wheel, safety slips away! Backseat drivers can do a first class job of raising your temper to the boiling point. But hold on! Showing your critic just who's running things may get you into a dangerous situation. 37,000 people died on our highways last year. Many were victims of drivers who, in one thoughtless moment, allowed their emotions to take over the wheel. So keep your head . . . losing it could cost you your life!

The list of books, which changes each month, is especially selected by the National Television Children's Book Committee, a group of four outstanding persons from the children's book field.

NEW PORTABLE MIKE — NBC News correspondent Lee Hall demonstrates what the well-dressed "floor reporter" will wear at the 1960 political conventions — NBC's new portable radio mike which is the most modern development in electronic equipment of this type. Microphone, headset, receiver, transmitter and power supply together weigh only nine pounds, about half the weight of comparable equipment until now. Showing the contrast between old and new, at either side of Lee are desk mikes dating back more than a quarter century.

Hard To Get . . .

Nancy was a peculiar girl.

Pretty and cuddly, young and petite, much in demand and avidly proposed to, she had never been in love and had never felt the remotest inclination to marry.

She was now going on 25, and half a dozen eligible chaps were always bombarding her with flowers, invitations, phone calls and visits. She was genial to them all. She wasn't prissy.

But she wouldn't single out one, and she wouldn't get serious.

Every girl who knew her envied her. Each of them was either eating out her heart over some unattainable male or had attained one and he wasn't what she had looked forward to; yet here was this girl whom all men seemed to want, who had so wide a choice—and didn't choose to choose.

Going out was all right to vary the monotony. After all, most of the fellows she knew were rather good company. Not that they could ever be more than that; but to that extent, they were pleasant enough interludes.

And so she was mildly pleased when she likely have some interesting tales to dish in contrast with the freshwater bromides of the stay-at-home locals. So, when the bell rang and Jennie, the family cook, started for the door, Nancy posted herself in the hall where she could greet him.

Toward her strode a tall, graceful browned and handsome man in the trim uniform of a mate, bearing the insignia of a world-famed fleet.

"Hello—Nan-cy," he called out, in manly, deep voice.

"Clem—so grand to see you," she called, and put out her hand. As he took her little hand in his big, browned one, something ran through Nancy.

This was it!

She had always known she would know it when she met it. Here it was. Electric currents coursed through her arteries. Then she led him in.

She scarcely heard what he was saying—mostly about the old neighbors and school-mates. No prattling about himself, the wonderful places where he'd been, the adventures he'd known . . . And then Jennie announced dinner.

"H'mmm—smells good," chuckled Clem. "They feed us like kings aboard ship, but still it isn't home-cooking . . . and that always appeals to an old bach like me."

A bach! Clem wasn't married, then.

"And you?" he asked. "How do all these home-town fellows let you stay single?"

"Why—I never gave it any thought."

"Oh, come now, Nan. I know they must have and I'm sure they didn't forget to tell you about it."

"Maybe one or two did mention it, Clem. But I wasn't interested . . . What makes me wonder is that all those giddy passenger ladies and all those foreign fascinators have let you slip through."

"Oh, who wants a sailor? Here today and gone with the wind. Girls these days like stationary businessmen with substantial prospects and names painted on glass doors."

Nancy didn't sleep that night. It was too wonderful, too terrible. She was in love. It hadn't taken her a minute. How could she tell him—let him understand? . . . She must . . . This was too big to go by default in the name of maidenly modesty, to be secreted by silence . . . And yet—

He surely knew it already. He had been around, and many girls must have behaved as childishly as she had, and for the same reason, and he could read it . . . Maybe he was laughing about it right now . . . Maybe he—oh, if only he—if such a miracle were possible.

At that precise moment, Clem, dwaddling with hotel ham-and-eggs, was not as keen for food as he had been the evening before.

"What a girl," he mused. "And what a blank I've been not to visualize it. She was always pretty and soft and sweet. But I was too young and too busy with my own little affairs to think about it. I wonder if—but I suppose she's probably got a future laid out for herself. Well, if I've missed the boat I ought to be kicked pretty."

It didn't happen that evening, when Clem came again for dinner, but it did happen the night before he had to leave, to return to his ship. Clem was no absolute amateur with the ladies.

But this was a situation at which he was a complete novice—asking an innocent girl—a girl around whom his heart was draped—to marry him; to give up the comfort and security of her lifelong home, to take to ships, to live in strange places with a rover or somewhere alone for weeks waiting for him.

He was pretty certain of what the answer would be. Probably she would say "No." She might even be angry about it, think him presumptuous for assuming that she'd be a jack-tar's bride. Not that he'd blame her much.

The more Clem thought about it, the more panicky he got. Facing storms at sea was a cinch compared with this, he told himself as tiny beads of cold perspiration broke out on his brow.

He had studiously rehearsed his little speech. He had framed the words carefully. They had seemed so simple and easy as he repeated them over and over again on his way to Nancy's house. But now his mind was in a turmoil. He couldn't remember a single word he had planned to say. Maybe he'd better wait . . . no, he wouldn't! It was now or never.

"Nan," he said, and his voice had the tremolo and timbre of profound emotion. "I must say this—tonight—now. Nan, I know that you—or, hang it—I want to marry you!"

Her arms were around his neck. Nancy's tears were raining on his collar. Clem choked:

"It this—is this—yes?"

She bobbed her head frantically up and down.

"Y-yES!" she sobbed. "Oh, Clem—if you hadn't, you'd have broken my heart . . . I'd made up my mind to confess it to you—but I couldn't . . . Oh, Clem! . . . When?"

"In the morning, honey. Then on our way."

"Oh, I'll never get packed . . . But—I'll make it."

got, quite unexpectedly, a call one afternoon from Clem Carver.

She hadn't seen Clem in years—oh, way back in high school days. She had known him since childhood. But long ago he had gone to sea.

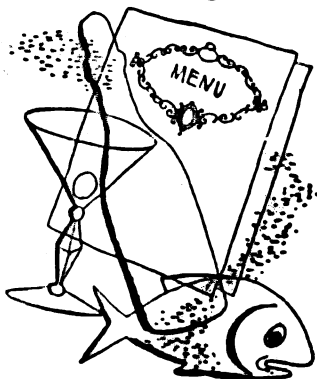

Vague, second-hand news had drifted through in the interim about Clem—he was in China, he was world-cruising, he was shipwrecked off Ireland, he had become an officer on a smart liner—

But never since he had left had he been back home in the inland city of his birth and never had Nancy heard directly from him in that time. The local newspapers had reported that Clem had fallen heir to the Carver farm with the passing of a half-brother. That was probably what brought him back.

Nancy asked him up for dinner. It would be nice to see him again, and he would most

FAMOUS AMERICAN TAVERNS

White Horse Tavern in Newport, R. I.

"Not under the same roof with British Soldiers"

There is a pleasantly cantankerous Revolutionary story about the White Horse Tavern in Newport, R. I., said to be the oldest tavern in operation in America. In 1777, an officer of the invading British army demanded of Walter Nichols, the innkeeper, some rooms in which to quarter his troops. Mine Host Nichols replied:

"Take it all, sir, take it all. Do you think I would permit my family to live under the same roof with British soldiers?"

Nichols and his family moved out but, such were the fortunes of war, that three years later they moved back again to continue hosting the old White Horse which had been licensed as a tavern in 1687 and was probably built fifteen years before that. No building could be more characteristic of colonial Newport. Its gambrel roof, plain pedimented doors, and clapboarded walls that rise from the sidewalk's edge come straight from the eighteenth century. Its earlier, seventeenth century construction is characterized by great chamfered girts and summer beams, a huge pilastered brick chimney and a stairway butted against the chimney in the narrow front hall facing Farewell Street. There is little of that earliest rugged colonial construction left in America today.

Several years ago, the Preservation Society of Newport County bought the old tavern and put it into first class shape, retaining every authentic item of its original construction. It was re-opened soon to continue in perpetuity its venerable career as a tavern.

The re-opening banquet was a feast of nostalgia, re-creating old dishes from cookbooks of yesteryear. Among them was stuffed striped bass, replete with bread crumbs, thin slices of salt pork, and a cup of oysters, all seasoned with marjoram, salt, pepper, cayenne and butter. Another was "apple pastry" whose innards were chiefly apple sauce and heavy cream. And those were the days of heavy cream! Beer, in the custom of the day, accompanied the meal.
