COVER PICTURE:

Rev. John P. McHugh, director of DePaul Regional High School, wishes his student, Cornelia Harrington, good luck in the oncoming Winter Olympics. "Pooch" was honored by her fellow students in a school assembly at which she was presented with some valuable gifts, including a slide projector and camera. Miss Harrington is the only one from this area who will participate in the Olympic Games.

Wayne Girl Ready For Olympic Bid

Cornelia Harrington Hopes To Cut Championship Ice

A determined young ice skater from this area is a member of the United States Olympic team and will be competing in the approaching winter games at Squaw Valley, California. That is no small feat, but even more impressive is the fact that she is the youngest member on the squad — only 16 years of age.

The name is Cornelia Harrington (nickname, "Pooch") and this is a monicker worth remembering, because the odds are that you will be seeing it in print a great deal in the years to come. This indomitable and hard-working youngster owns limitless desire and courage, and she certainly demonstrated these qualities when she landed on the U. S. women's skating team in the Winter Olympics.

That happened last year at Minneapolis when Cornelia brushed off the long odds to win that coveted spot. She had been skating only two years when she made this ambitious bid, was unsuccessful in the early trials but came through in her final bid to finish on top of the 3,000 meters and wound up with the membership on the team. It took a lot of doing, but her refusal to become discouraged after the first three fruitless days brought success on the fourth — and final — day.

The determined Miss Harrington, confident and spirited, hung on to make it and still had time to be a one-girl rooting squad for other girls trying to make it.

Cornelia won out by the hairbreadth margin of one second in her long-distance bid for an Olympic place, certainly a thrilling triumph for the bespectacled 5-foot-2 brunette who only started skating in January of 1957. After failing to make the team in the 500-meters attempt on the first day, the 1,000 the following day, and then in the 1,500 meters, she took the 3,000-meter field in her own "sudden death" finish as she raced the clock for first on the list, thanks to a strong finish.

Miss Harrington lives in Packanack Lake with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Harrington; two sisters, Kathy and Beth, a brother, Tom; and her cousins, Paul and John Robbins. She was born on June 7, 1944 in Tarrytown, N. Y. She is a high school student in Wayne, now in her junior year.

Right now, she is training in California and preparing for the start of the climatic grind when the squad moves to Squaw Valley on February 1. It is a long pull, requiring all the determination and drive which have become Cornelia's trademarks. She is ready to meet the tough challenge represented by the outstanding female skaters from countries scattered all over the globe.

Cornelia is the only representative of this section in the Winter Olympics. An Englewood Cliffs speed skater, Don McDermott, is another New Jersey figure on the scene, but Miss Harrington is the only competitor on the team who emanates from the Paterson sector.

A good student with many outside interests, "Pooch" won her first major skating title two seasons back when she took the state outdoor junior girls' crown — and turned the trick in a snowstorm. She went on to win other state championships, as well as honors in Middle Atlantic, Tri-State, and Eastern championship meets.

The nickname was acquired in simple fashion when she was an infant, because she was as friendly and frisky as a puppy dog, ergo "Pooch". She has been aided along the competitive trail by her father who has spent innumerable hours, training and developing her skating skill from the very start. She requires a lot of grit, patience, determination, and long hours of practice to nurture her skill, but she does so sans complaint.

Explains the senior Harrington: "Everybody in the family has made sacrifices to help Cornelia, and all have been happy to do so. Certainly, Cornelia appreciates it. I guess that's another reason why she never gives up when she is going to work on her skating, whether it's just a workout or a championship race or even a try at the Olympics."

Accordingly, the Harrington gal was not perturbed when she was unable to land that Olympic place in the first four days of the trials. She felt that she never had been trained to be a sprinter and so the shorter distances were more difficult for her. She was last in the field of 31 skaters at the time, but she kept on plugging and when the 3,000 meter trial came along, she was ready and willing.

She just started more slowly than in the previous bids, settled into her normal stride easily and ground out the all-important victory. Now, with a smile mixed with her set determination, she is preparing for the most important assignment of her life. A young life — but a merry scramble.

Safety Record Set By New Jersey Turnpike

The New Jersey Turnpike Authority in 1959 closed its best safety record since operations began in 1951, Joseph Morecraft, Jr., chairman, announced today.

There were 15 fatal accidents in the year in which 20 persons were killed, for a record of approximately 1.46 for 100 million miles of travel. It was the lowest figure ever recorded for the turnpike and compared with 24 accidents and 30 fatalities in 1958, for a rate of 2.42 per 100 million miles. The previous low figure was for 1957 when there were 20 fatal accidents in which 24 were killed, equal to a fatality rate of 1.99.

The improved record is largely the result of a combination of highway betterments, strict enforcement by the detachment of State Police assigned to the highway, a more experienced public and good fortune. Among the betterments was the erection of additional median barrier at selected locations along the 118 mile turnpike to prevent cross median accidents. It is contemplated that such barrier will be erected along the entire 118 mile turnpike as soon as funds become available, excluding the 90-foot median area in the Woodbridge area.

An unusual sign was developed during the year and erected in the center of the median in South Brunswick township designed primarily to alert sleepy drivers.

CD-DC Receives 5 Gonsets; Plans Program

By MIKE BATELLI
CD-DC Public Information Officer

Paterson Civil Defense and Disaster Control radio communications section Sunday morning elected officers and announced plans for 1960 in its reorganization meeting held in CD-DC Control Center, City Hall Annex.

Joseph Puglis, 38, of 159 Martin St., was re-appointed to a third term as section radio officer, in confirmation of his unanimous selection by Paterson CD-DC amateur radio operators as section chief.

Freeholder Director Frank X. Graves, Jr., Paterson CD-DC director, presented Puglis with the first of five new gonsets — portable radio transmitters — the unit will receive under the director's recently instituted program for re-vamping and increasing the section's personnel and equipment rosters.

Freeholder Graves congratulated the new officers and expressed the appreciation of a grateful community to the volunteer amateur radio operators for the many hours of unselfish devotion to civil defense programs.

Puglis announced a survey is presently underway to determine the number of amateur radio operators in Paterson. He said this will permit CD-DC to have information from which to recruit a large radio section reserve unit.

Puglis released his recently devised telephone alerting system which can alert within minutes Paterson's 12 RACES—radio amateur civil emergency service—operators during any emergency. RACES, said Puglis, is the only radio organization which will be permitted to broadcast and receive during national emergencies. RACES operators are certified and licensed by CD-DC.

Planned for 1960 is a "field day operation" in which the CD-DC radio operators set up and perform under actual emergency conditions. Tentative plans set Garret Mountain as the site for the June operations.

Other programs announced by Puglis include a series of public demonstrations to be held on dates soon to be released; and an operation schedule through May, 1960, for two-meter and 10-meter operators.

CD-DC amateur operators participate in weekly live drills on both county and municipal levels. Each Sunday morning, the group joins in the Passaic County Control Station schedule drills, activating the ten-meter county radio net. The local operators are divided into teams of two men who report to the county radio center, from where reports of radioactive fallout are received and relayed to the local CD-DC staff officers.

Municipal level radio tests are held each Tuesday beginning at 7:45 p.m. on the two-meter RACES radio net. During these tests, Paterson operators are contacted from the local control center and after the "call roll" reports relating to civil defense are received at CD-DC headquarters.

Organizational meetings, during which discussions on section programs for improvement and operations will be held, are scheduled for Tuesdays, February 2, March 1 and 29, and April 28, in the CD-DC Control Center, according to Puglis.

Officers for 1960, and their station call letters, include:

Puglis, K2MKV; Sal Buscema, K2MHE; and Roy Pearson, W2FLQ, assistant radio officers; Bob Pelletier, K2KJP, secretary; and John Vitale, K2LUG, service and repair.

Completing the local CD-DC RACES operators roster are: Bob Migliorino, K2YFE; Matt Lesnieski, K2SLA; Bernie Kane, K2SOA; Mike Terminello, K2HVA; Al Leder, K2HRV; Jack Wylie, K2ODI; Irv Diamond, W2BRY, and Norm Glaeser, K2QNC.

Superior Court Judge J. Wallace Leyden (center) administers the oath of office to Bergen County Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court Judge Martin J. Kole for his second five-year term. Mrs. Ruth Kole, the judge's wife, holds the bible.

A well-known elder statesman, invited to address a prominent women's club on the Chinese situation, carefully boned up on the subject and prepared a brilliant paper. Upon meeting the chairwoman, he inquired how the club had come to require a talk on China. "Oh," the lady explained sweetly, "we're having a chow-mein luncheon, and wanted something to preserve the spirit of the occasion."

"I see here," said the husband, glancing up from his newspaper, "that The Ford Foundation just gave away $20,000,000!" "Really?" gasped his wife. "What was the question?"

My neighbor's three-year-old daughter loves dogs. One day while she was playing in front of her home she saw a huge boxer down the street and ran toward him, shouting, "Hi, doggie! Hi, doggie!" The dog bounded to her, stopping just when they were nose to nose. She gazed up at him a moment with a puzzled expression, then breathed, "Hi, horsey!"

"These aren't my snapshots . . . But I'll take them, anyway!"

OVER THREE MILLION DOLLARS A FOOT

The cost of our Federal Interstate Highway System may be boosted again, to the sum of a billion dollars. The Defense Department is insisting that all bridges built for the system have a 17-foot clearance instead of the present minimum of 14 feet. The extra three feet, it says, are needed to permit passage of future missile-carrying truck beds.

The change, if adopted, will cost about $300 million — and that is only the beginning. The men in the Pentagon want interstate bridges already constructed to be enlarged to provide that additional three foot clearance. Such reconstruction would cost an estimated $700 million more — for a total of $1 billion, or a third of a billion dollars per foot!

It is proposed that this money come out of the special highway trust fund. And where will the additional money for that fund come from? Presumably out of the pockets of America's motorists, who already are underwriting the bulk of the fund by paying an average of 47 cents in state and federal taxes on every dollar's worth of gasoline they buy.

Several thoughts come to mind regarding this new proposal. The first is that the highway fund already is stretched to its breaking point. When cost of the road program was hiked from $27.6 billion to $40 billion because of inflation and the addition of 1,000 miles to the 40,000-mile system originally planned, the government declared it could only keep the fund solvent by imposing a "temporary" one-cent increase to the federal motor-fuel tax.

The second thought is: If enlarged bridges are essential to the defense of America's citizenry, why shouldn't their cost come out of the national defense budget?

The final thought is this: Responsible officials of defense agencies admit that nobody really knows the size of future missile-carrying trucks. Discoveries and developments in this field are extremely rapid. Military truck beds of the future conceivably might need more than a 17-foot clearance, in which case another rebuilding program would be in order. On the other hand, miniaturization may make future missiles smaller than prototypes.

Under such circumstances, it would seem to be a good idea, before we commit ourselves to spending that extra billion, to make a thorough "economic feasibility" study. Let's try to find just what actually will be needed, and then determine whether there isn't a fairer way of obtaining whatever funds may be necessary than heaping more gasoline taxes on the backs of America's long-suffering motorists.

The Editor Speaks

A pretty well-off friend of ours came in to visit us recently. She is a middle-aged woman who was left oodles of money and married into a barrel of dough. She told us she was very unhappy — nothing but hard luck.

One of her maids was in bed with the flu and the other would be away for three days because she was on her honeymoon. There was something wrong with the heater in the Lincoln convertible and the car hadn't been washed in a week. Her chauffeur had sprained an ankle and could not drive her to New York to get her four new dresses and new fur coat that she had bought.

It seems that the manager of the establishment she owned did not hire the good-looking gentleman that she had recommended. Her husband had taken the Imperial to the club luncheon and she had hired a limousine with chauffeur to visit us.

As we were discussing these awful things one after the other, another woman who lives nearby came in. She was leaving the city and going back to her parents. Her husband had died the month before of an incurable sickness. She has three children, ages of three, six and eight.

Yet, all she talked about was how thankful she is in having three healthy children. Her immediate plans were to get a job, take in washing and doing curtains up so that she could get the necessary items that her children would require. She told us how they had sold the car and part of the house furniture so that they could pay the hospital and doctor bills.

It was really amazing to see this woman, who only a short time ago, seemed to have everything to live for — a husband, three children, a house of her own, and one car.

After wishing this widow the best of luck, she took leave of us. We sat in silence for a few minutes, meditating just how tough things in life can really be. The well-to-do visitor departed soon after the widow had left. I don't know, but I think it will be a long time before she will talk about her automobiles, dresses and maids again.

FOCUS

CONSTRUCTION — With money being so tight, the current trend in residential construction is downward. The mortgage interest rates have been pushed upward by the strong demand throughout our surging economy for money. But the overall picture for the construction industry is bright. In virtually all categories, non-residential construction is expected to increase again in 1960 due to the expanding programs of plant and equipment investment by American industry.

SALT — Industry sources report that the necessity of keeping highways safe for winter driving is booming the sales of salt. A stockpile of 2.2 million pounds has been set up which is a 10 per cent increase over last year.

DIAMONDS — A record was set in 1959 for diamond sales at $255,180,640, breaking the previous high of $214.9 million in 1957. Gem stones totaled $176.5 million of the 1959 figure, while sales of industrial diamonds aggregated nearly $78.8 million.

CANDY — Americans, apparently not worrying about calories, ate a record 2.8 billion pounds of candy in 1959, according to the National Confectioners Association. But this figure is probably due to the population growth, since the per capita consumption for 1959 (16.4 pound per year) is far below the 1944 wartime record of 20.5 pounds.

SAVINGS — Americans increased their savings in 1959, despite a record spending. Although final figures are not yet available, it is estimated that Americans owned approximately $292 billion in U.S. savings bonds, savings accounts, and life insurance.

AUTOMOBILES — 1959 saw American producers turn out 32 per cent more cars than in 1958. Total output is estimated at 5,583,700 units. The outlook for 1960 is for sales of slightly over 7 million cars, including possibly 600,000 imported automobiles. The all-time record year for car sales, with only 50,000 imported models sold, was 1955, when users bought 7.2 million vehicles.

RAILROADS — Only $152 million equipment trust certificates were marketed by the nation's railroads in 1959, marking the lowest total since 1946 when the total was $125 million.

Spring SONG

By ZITA KLANG

From the dining room Lena Norway saw the green speck grow and grow until it was a sleek ambulance rolling up the tree-shaded road that led to the Children's Unit. Her heart ran out the quicker to meet the small girl sitting huddled and confused in its dark and impersonal interior. A clatter went up about her as the children hearing the car raced to the windows.

"It's the new girl. We know 'cause we saw you fixin' up a room," said one.

"She's just a little girl," she explained gently. "Let us try to make it easy for her here."

The doorbell rang. Mrs. Norway nodded to the rosy-cheeked attendant in the crisp white uniform to indicate that she herself would go to the door.

A burly man with bushy eyebrows and a brisk young woman came in. Trotting at their heels was a child of about seven. She had a small face framed in straight yellow hair that hung in two braids down her straight little back. The eyes she lifted to Lena Norway were brown and enormous and bewildered.

The woman said, "I'm Miss Greer from the Board of Guardian. This is Sara."

"Sara Jane," corrected the little girl. "Mother always calls me Sara Jane."

"Sara Jane it shall be," smiled Lena Norway as she held out her hand. "I'm Mrs. Norway. How do you do?"

"I'm very well, thank you," Sara Jane answered.

"Have you had supper yet, Sara Jane?" continued Mrs. Norway.

"No," put in the social worker. "She insisted upon waiting for her mother." There was a sharp little emphasis on the last phrase.

"I'm glad you haven't had your supper. I waited my supper for you. Now I think you should wash up after that long trip."

Later, Mrs. Norway opened the one-piece of luggage that had come with Sara Jane. As she handled garment after garment, exquisitely hand-sewn and knitted carefully and beautifully darned where the fine materials had seen much service, she wondered when the mother had found time to make these and care for them.

A simple story this one. A gentlewoman, loved and protected one moment, the next widowed with a baby and penniless. There had been nobody to turn to so they had had to find in each other all they needed.

Lena Norway signed the receipt. When Miss Greer and the man had gone, she sat at her desk. Her face brightened imperceptibly as her eyes fell on the framed picture of her son. She had borne only one but in the small rooms that lined the corridors leading out of either side of the day room there were twenty-six of her children.

Girls ranging in age from eight to seventeen. Her job was to try to help them create a balance that would end their confusion and restore them to useful places in society.

Sometimes the groping child found her way back into the sun and then Lena Norway would feel as if she justified her existence. Sometimes the child was removed to

"I never thought of that," said Sara Jane. She added simply, "I like you."

"It's almost lunch time," Lena said.

"I want my mother," Sara Jane cried suddenly.

"Your mother is dead," Lena said softly.

Sara Jane jumped up, ran to where Lena Norway was kneeling, struck her across the face, and fled into the cottage.

For a moment Lena Norway remained crouched over the ripe-smelling earth. Sara Jane's outburst proved that she no longer one of the caged, silent houses that held hands in the valley below. A storm would be unleashed in Lena Norway's breast and she would condemn herself for holding down a job that should have been filled by a psychiatrist.

Each child brought with her a new problem, a different sort of challenge. She could only delve into her own darkness for the solution. There was a soft knock on the door and the attendant's large capable hand urged the little frame into the room and closed the door behind her.

As Lena Norway rose to greet the child she knew that the psychiatry book had not yet been written that could tell how to bring home to this child her mother was dead six weeks. Sara Jane could not cope with sudden death. That morning her mother had been alive and well, had dressed her, prepared her breakfast, kissed her good-bye and told her to be a good girl at school. Her mother would come home soon and that was all there was to it. Except that if Sara Jane did not recognize the truth and readjust herself to it, she would retreat more and more into her kinder world until she was lost beyond recall.

"Do you like your cocoa with a marshmallow in it?" asked Lena Norway.

"I'm sure I will," Sara Jane gravely.

In the days that followed it required more and more effort to urge Sara Jane from her vigil. She did all the little chores assigned her on the cottage but she went about preoccupied, her little face growing gaunt, her ears cocked for her mother's eager footsteps.

One day Mrs. Norway asked Sara Jane to help her with a small garden patch she was planning behind the kitchen.

Sara Jane said, "I don't know very much about gardens, but I'd like to help."

Sara Jane trudged back and forth with pails of top soil, a rake, dug neat little holes for seeds.

"It makes me sad when flowers die," she said.

"It would make me sad too," Lena answered, "but I always remember that for all the flowers that die, others will come up in their places."

was so sure of her mother coming back. Now was the time to find another focus for Sara Jane's hungry little heart.

During lunch Sara Jane toyed with her food and threw surreptitious glances at Mrs. Norway. Mrs. Garson, the attendant, distributed the mail.

"There's a letter for you clear from Washington, D. C.," she told Mrs. Norway, handing her an official looking envelope.

As soon as the children were excused, Sara Jane went to the office door and knocked timidly. Then she turned the knob and entered. Mrs. Norway was sitting at her desk, her head buried in her arms. She was crying.

"Mrs. Norway," she whispered.

Lena Norway looked up, eyes wet with tears.

Suddenly Sara Jane was in her arms. Neither knew exactly how it had happened. On the desk was a letter and near it the snapshot of a boy.

"Is this your son?"

Lena Norway nodded.

"Has something happened to him?"

"This letter. He was a soldier, Sara Jane. He died in action." Her voice broke. "Now I have nobody."

"You have me," said Sara Jane impulsively.

Suddenly Lena Norway released the child and sat up. "He'll come back," she said firmly.

"No," explained Sara Jane. "You don't understand. It's like with flowers. When they're dead, they don't come back. Other flowers come in their place."

Mrs. Garson entered.

"Sara Jane, you should be out in the kitchen drying dishes," she said sternly. "Come along now."

Alone, Lena Norway picked up the picture of her son. His sweet, earnest eyes smiled out to her. He had been fifteen then.

Sara Jane would find her way back by helping someone else. Lena Norway knew that as surely as she knew her son had been a good, courageous soldier.

This Week In AMERICAN HISTORY BY WILLIAM BRODIE

GOLD DISCOVERED IN CALIFORNIA

Gold! The magic word set off one of the most exciting migrations in history — the Forty-Niners to California. The discovery that was to pull hundreds of thousands of people from all parts of the world to the gold fields occurred on the clear, cold morning of January 24, 1848 at a sawmill being built for landowner John A. Sutter, on a branch of the American River in the foothills of the Sierra Nevadas.

James Marshall, a carpenter from New Jersey, and foreman in charge, was inspecting the mill's watercourse when he noticed something shining in the bottom of the ditch. He reached down through a foot of water and picked up a nugget smaller than a pea. Was it gold? He hammered it on a rock. It was soft and didn't break. Gold!

Within a few days Marshall and his excited men picked up several more nuggets. Marshall took them to his boss at Sutter's Fort (now Sacramento) where they were tested and found to be pure gold. Sutter and Marshall wanted to keep the discovery a secret, but the news leaked out. Sutter, later, must have cursed his foreman's discovery, for the gold rush ruined him.

John August Sutter was a Swiss who had settled in the beautiful Sacramento Valley. He had secured thousands of acres of land and was living like a prince in the wilderness. He built a fort, named after himself, ran big herds of sheep and cattle and had hundreds of men working for him.

News of the gold discovery spread like wildfire. Within a few days hundreds of men swarmed past the sawmill into the surrounding area to tear at the ground with picks and shovels. By springtime they were coming from all the California settlements — business men, doctors, judges, farmers. Gold! It pulled them all to the diggings.

Months later, news of the discovery had spread over the United States and across the ocean to Europe. President Polk mentioned the gold strike in his message to Congress in December, 1848. Thousands caught the gold fever. From all points, by every means, they struck out for California.

Wagon trains set out across the western plains, deserts and mountains, risking the wilderness and the long voyage around the tip of long voyage around the tip of South America, while some tried a short cut across the Isthmus of Panama despite its deadly climate. Disease and hardship killed many. By the summer of 1849 thousands of gold-seekers were pouring into the Sacramento Valley.

There was no law enforcement in the gold country at first. Life was rough and raw. The strong and the lucky won out. In the scramble to stake out claims Sutter's land was overrun and plundered. Mining camps with names like Red Dog, Poker Flat, Grub Gulch, sprang up. Gold was plentiful, but not all realized their dreams of wealth. Some struck it rich, while others barely earned a living, and many met with bitter disappointment.

Marshall's great discovery happened just nine days before Mexico ceded California to the United States by treaty. And in September, 1850, California, with more than 100,000 newcomers, was admitted to the Union as the 31st state.

Fortunes were made in the gold fields of California and later in farming and business as land and trade developed. But James Marshall and John Sutter both died poor.
