

A Short
 ANSWER
 To the Tedious
 VINDICATION
 OF

SECT. I.

Am sorry, Brethren, that your own importunitie
 will needs make you guiltie of your further shame:
 Had you sate down silent in the conscience of a just reproof, your blame had been by this time dead, and forgotten; but now, your impetutuous Defence shall let the world see, you did in vain hope to face out an ill cause with a seeming boldnesse. I may not spend Volumes upon you, but some Lines I must:
 enow to convince the Reader of the justice of my Charge, and the miserable insuffi-
