Dear Dr. Furnas:

The President wants to draft Tracy Voorhoes for the next six to twelve weeks to coordinate the various spontaneous efforts now being made to provide for the Hungarian refugees, especially for those to whom the United States will be giving asylum. In short, he wants Tracy to be something like a guardian of these people until long-range plans can be worked out through the Red Cross or otherwise. Tracy is willing to work wherever we ask him to, but he tells me that he has a commitment to you to act as adviser on foreign research and military development and that he has already postponed this once with your approval to assist on the recent campaign.

As the work which he has undertaken to do for you is of a long-range nature while what we need him for is definitely urgent and temporary, I want to ask you to release him for the present emergency and also to permit him to the extent that may be necessary to use his office and facilities in the Pentagon to meet this unexpected problem, in the solution of which the United States must not fail.

Sincerely,

SHERMAN ADAMS

Dear Tracy:

It is wonderful to have you back in harness again, especially in an operation which requires the tremendous capacity to get things done that you alone possess.

This is my last day in the office. I will be back from Viet Nam--Formosa--Korea--Japan on the 21st of December, and it was my preparation for this trip that prevented my attending the meeting with you yesterday.

I have instructed my people that what you want I also want. I am sure they will do their level best to accomplish whatever tasks you set them.

Dear Max:

Many times since the task of caring for the Hungarian refugees began, I have had reports about the really fine job the Army is doing in carrying out its part. The latest reports have come from the Vice President and Tracy Voorhees.

The favorable comment has to do not only with the efficiency and cooperation that have been demonstrated in making ready to house the large numbers of refugees comfortably, give them excellent food, and provide medical care to them, but also -- what I particularly comment -- with the warmth of spirit with which all this is being carried out.

I need not tell you how gratifying these reports are to me. I would be grateful if you would mention my appreciation to Secretary Brucker also.

With warm regard,

Sincerely,

Your letter to me written after your trip to Kilmer gave me great pleasure and encouragement.

I was also very glad to learn of your television appearance in which you complimented the work at Kilmer. Thank you very much for your interest and for your generous comments.

I do think that it has been possible in the last two months to inject a real warmth of spirit toward the refugees, as well as to establish a good organizational setup, at Kilmer.

The following figures as of midnight February % may interest you:

Total arrivals

24,287

Total departures for resettlement under sponsorship of voluntary agencies

21,778

Total remaining at Kilmer

Our problem there is, I think, solved. There are bigger problems ahead which are not part of my responsibilities, but I do think that they have a bearing on your work as our representative to the United Nations, and I would greatly value the opportunity of talking with you about them.

I thought that you might be interested in a progress report which I made to the President as well as in a report of a survey made by Mr. Hallam Tuck and General Carl A. Hardigg of Hungarian refugee relief problems in Austria. I am forwarding these to you separately.

Please do not trouble to acknowledge this note or the reports.

Lita to President Crossed under TSV February 17, 1957 Dear Sherman: Herewith is a letter to the President terminating by March 1st -- subject of course to his wish and yours -- my temporary post in the White House. While I had some anxious days and nights about the problem during the great influx of refugees last December, I really enjoyed tackling the task, and it is a deep satisfaction to me that the emergency phase of it for which I was called has been met. As an invaluable byproduct, I have been more than amply repaid for my work by the friendships formed and friendships deepened with you and others of the White House staff who have so generously and unreservedly helped me. I shall submit separately a list of the persons -- and corporations -- who have contributed outstandingly to this work and to whose efforts the successful outcome has been so largely due. February 27, 1957

Dear Mr. President:

Last November you asked me to act as your representative in connection with Hungarian refugee relief activities to assure full co-ordination of the work of the various voluntary and Government agencies, and to set up the requisite machinery for this purpose. The understanding was that this assignment was for temporary emergency purposes only. My responsibilities were defined as relating to the movement of refugees to this country and their reception and resettlement, not to the separate problems existing in Austria.

On my recommendation you appointed the President's Committee for Hungarian Refugee Relief as the machinery for the co-ordination of the work of the voluntary agencies generally and of their work with the Government agencies at the Joyce Kilmer Reception Center. To date 27,373 refugees have been received. More than 94% of these have already left Kilmer for resettlement under the sponsorship of responsible religious and other voluntary agencies. The President's Committee has assisted these agencies to the full extent possible, but the major credit for success in this resettlement work belongs to the voluntary agencies themselves and to the warm hearted action of the people of America.

As the above figures indicate, the emergency phase of your refugee program has now been met. The President's Committee has a useful continuing function for a reasonable further interval and will remain active while this need exists. The co-ordination of the work of the various Government departments and agencies in Washington has been effected through an informal group with which I have met at frequent intervals. This work has also now become routine. We are, I believe, now adequately organized to move to the U.S., to receive and to resettle on a routine basis any presently foreseeable number of Hungarian refugees who may be permitted to come.

For the above reasons I shall, subject to your approval, terminate my duties in the White House this week, but shall continue to serve as Chairman of the President's Committee. The Committee will later make its own report to you.

It has been for me a unique privilege to have been able to serve as your representative in this cause in which I so deeply believe and under the inspiration of your leadership.

Yours faithfully,

February 26, 1957

My dear Mr. President:

Thank you for your letter of February 11 regarding the Hungarian Refugee Program and particularly the kind comment in your postscript.

Shortly after coming into office I enlarged and strengthened the Governor's Committee on Refugees. This committee has successfully stimulated the resettlement of about 47,000 persons (approximately 30%) of those who entered the United States under the Refugee Relief Act of 1953.

Immediately upon the rebellion in Hungary the New York State Committee organized a comprehensive program geared to help settle Hungarian refugees. Since the arrival of the first group of escapees at Camp Kilmer we have aided 7,440 Hungarians to settle in the State of New York. This number is 31% of the total that have thus far been resettled in the United States. I think you will also be interested in noting that the State of New York has placed 175 of these escapees as psychiatric assistants and maintenance workers in several of our State institutions where positions could not otherwise be filled.

It was like old days again to work with Tracey Voorhees and Joe Collins. They both have given splendid cooperation in helping to move the Refugees, particularly during the hectic initial period.

The work of General Sydney Wooten in preparing Camp Kilmer for the sudden influx of escapees showed fine planning and thorough execution of a most difficult problem.

I want to assure you that the New York Committee will continue to operate as long as people are permitted to seek refuge in the United States. The many thousands of freedom-seekers who still await an opportunity to come to this country, as well as a great majority of American citizens are depending upon you to energetically pursue your program to help these refugees fulfill their dreams of liberty.

Dear Tracy:

I have your letter of the twenty-fifth and am deeply gratified by the accomplishments you reported in regard to resettlement of Hungarian refugees in this country.

As you pointed out, the success of this program is truly the product of the warmhearted actions of the American people as a whole and of the religious and other voluntary agencies in particular. Their immediate and generous response to this urgent need has been of inestimable value.

l am delighted to know that almost all of these refugees have now gone on from Camp Kilmer to other parts of our land. Thanks to the highly cooperative spirit that has characterized this effort, the remaining elements of the resettlement program will, I am confident, be accomplished without difficulty. I look forward with great interest to the report that you indicated will be made later by the Committee.

As you conclude your immediate responsibilities here, I want to express my sincere appreciation of your large and effective contribution to the success of this program. I know that the coordinating mission you agreed to undertake last November was not an easy one, and I am grateful to you for devoting your time and ability so completely to its successful outcome.

March 12, 1957

Dear Mr. Grahams

Your lead editorial on Sunday about American action for Hungarian refugees is the most constructive and helpful piece of writing on this matter that has come to my attention. Most of the time we all keep our minds so largely on things which are going wrong that it is unusual to stop and take a look at something which has gone right. The latter is what your editorial does so well.

Nobody knew, when it was decided to take in these large numbers of refugees, how they would be accepted by America. The fact that they have been absorbed so readily is indeed an inspiring indication that our country is not lost in materialism but retains, when it understands the facts, a high measure of idealism.

I have already personally brought this editorial to the attention of the U.S. Information Agency as I think the Agency can use it around the world in ways beyond the ordinary routine. Also, I am having copies made to send to a large number of people who have been working on the resettlement of the refugees, and have talked with our public information people about arrangements for much wider distribution of it. I am also enclosing it with a personal letter to the President.

As one who has had some responsibility for these matters, I am deeply indebted to the Washington Post for its most helpful and constructive action.

The real problem before us now is to get adequate legislation passed to stabilize the position of the refugees and to give the President clear authority to act swiftly should another crisis — and therefore opportunity for the free world — present itself. If the Washington Post with its great influence should get vigorously behind the necessity for prompt legislation at least dealing with the refugee problem and later giving us a more constructive immigration law consistent with the spirit of America, I think that this would present another big field for constructive service by the Post.

As to the Hungarian refugees, you might be interested in the following figures as of midnight March 11:

Dear Tracy:

I have never become expert in replying to friends who say thanks so generously to The Rockefeller Foundation. After all, supplying funds for first class enterprises is our business.

As a citizen, I should like to express appreciation to you for your tremendous job as Chairman of the President's Committee. We here at the Foundation reacted almost at once to the distressing needs generated by events in Hungary, and we had some anxious moments during the early period because we saw too little effort to deal with what was certain to be a major problem. I felt much better about it when I heard that you had accepted the chairmanship of the Committee because I recall the perfectly magnificent job you did as a trouble shooter in the Pentagon, notably on finding foodstuffs for the occupied areas.

We have taken on what will amount to a commitment of several million dollars, before we are through, on the Hungarian refugee side. I say this because we knew when we undertook responsibility for several hundred students in Austria that this would involve support for a decreasing number over a period of several years.

With personal esteem and best wishes,

Dear Mardi:

The other night I saw John at the Council on Foreign Relations where Tom Wailes, just back from Hungary, gave a most interesting talk.

As I think you know, I went last month to France, Germany and Holland on a mission for the Department of Defense in connection with European military research and development. Since returning home, we have been working intensely on the report of the mission, and this has just been finished. It is, therefore, only now that I have time to tell you how deeply I appreciated your vigorous and successful efforts to obtain the more than $75,000 contribution from FIRST AID FOR HUNGARY for scholarship funds. Your letter telling me of the final success in this was written just after I left for Europe, and I received it on my return. The funds for these scholarships represent the most acute unfilled need which the President's Committee has in order to complete successfully its job for the refugees. No member of our Committee has made a more vital contribution to our work than you have in obtaining this very generous contribution from First Aid for Hungary.

As matters now stand, I think we can already count on between $125,000 and $135,000 including the First Aid for Hungary gift. However, we need from $150,000 to $175,000 more and I am working on this.

I have had replies from a substantial number of members of the President's Committee approving the proposal in my recent letter to dissolve the Committee on May 15. I hope that you also approve of this.

With appreciation,

Yours faithfully,

Dear Tracy:

I was glad to hear from you although it was not necessary for you to acknowledge my letter.

Fortunately, I think the criticism as to the refugees has now died down, and the impression of clumsy handling of the situation has been composed. It seems to be still up to Congress.

I was very much disappointed we could not lure you out to the country for lunch Saturday, but we will try again.

With all best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Congratulations on your Pulitzer prize. Surely no one could question that this was earned.

I have for a long time made it a practice to read every one of your byline stories so that I know how great a contribution you are making, both to the highest standards of journalism, and to a better awareness on the part of our country and official Washington of the grave problems before us, of our weaknesses and of what needs to be done.

I enclose a copy of a letter which I have written today to Mr. Catledge. Also enclosed is a copy of the proposed Committee report I referred to. For the reasons stated in the letter to Mr. Catledge, I am sending this to you on a confidential basis. I thought I should send it to you as the release will presumably be from the White House and therefore initially a matter for the Washington Bureau.

Please do not trouble to acknowledge this note. I will pass on later any further word.

Dear Tracy:

Although I know the deep satisfaction you feel in the accomplishments of the President's Committee for Hungarian Refugee Relief far outweighs any words of gratitude that I can summon, I nonetheless want once more to thank you personally for undertaking — and carrying through to conclusion so successfully — an extremely delicate and complicated assignment. The American people, as well as the refugees who have been resettled here, are greatly indebted to you.

I have written notes to all the members of the Committee who served with you, as well as the suggested letters to Tom Watson and Henry Ford. I also sent a letter to Secretary Brucker, asking him to pass along my congratulations to the Army and to General Wooten.

Once again, my personal thanks and, as always, my warm regard,

Sincerely,

Dear Tracy:

I was very pleased to get the copy of the release from The White House and the final report of The President's Committee for Hungarian Refugee Relief which was enclosed. The report is short and factually impressive. I was even more pleased to get the little note which you penned and attached to the release.

I am bound to say to you, Tracy, that as I read this report I remembered well our long and pleasant conversation in your apartment some years ago when you outlined to me what you wanted to do with your life from that point forward. I am frank to admit, though, that I had some doubt at that time that you would be able to accomplish your plans without unsurmountable frustrations. Following your activities since that time, regrettably from afar, I am convinced that you have followed your plan to the letter. I congratulate you.

Some time ago we published a report on the accomplishments to date in our Campaign at the University of Chicago -- a report which I did not bother to send to you at that time. It occurs to me that you might find it interesting and I enclose a copy.

Though I am always anxious to see you, I assure you that my memories of our association are very green and very, very pleasant. With warm personal regards, I am,

My dear Mr. President:

Please forgive me for my delay in answering your letter of May 14th, in which you refer to the work of the President's Committee for Hungarian Refugee Relief.

I fear that I have deceived you - or that if I haven't, somebody else has deceived you for me. The fact of the matter is that I was merely the Honorary Chairman of this Committee, and did practically nothing for the enterprise except to be a nuisance to Tracy Voorhees. All of the credit for the good works of the Committee should go to Tracy, Joe Collins, to the men who ran the center at Kilmer, and to the other members of the Committee.

Tracy was extraordinarily effective, and so was Joe; Indeed, everybody who participated in the operation contributed a great deal. I am not entitled to one jot or tittle of the credit - but you should really be proud of the work the Committee did.

I am writing at this length because I want you to fully understand how extraordinarily effective Tracy was, and your thanks to me should be relayed to him.

I look forward to seeing you on Monday. It was so good of you and Mamie to invite Peg and me.

With warmest personal regards,

Ever faithfully yours,

Dear Tracy:

I can not let the opportunity pass without expressing to you the tremendous debt of gratitude all of us in the Department of State have for the work you so recently completed. Coming in as you did a few weeks after the start of the emergency and successfully organizing and completing the tremendous job of receiving and resettling over 32,000 Hungarian refugees, it certainly stands as a great personal tribute to you and to the many people who worked under your inspired leadership.

It will never be possible for the full story of the work of your Committee to be translated to the people in the United States or to the people in the free areas of the world, but I assure you that those of us who worked with you fully appreciate the accomplishments attained. I hope you will accept this both as a personal thanks and also express to other members of your Committee and of your staff our feeling of gratitude.

I deeply appreciate your having written and look forward to association with you in other areas of activity.

Dear Chief:

I have your letter of May 23 which I am passing on to Max Rabb who is carrying on whatever remains of my former work in the White House concerning the Hungarian refugees.

I am deeply disturbed that what on the whole was a good record by the United States is being more than a little tarnished by the failure to accept more Hungarian refugees, which would greatly relieve the situation in Austria, both physically and psychologically. Last night I saw Ambassador Thompson, and he apparently feels very strongly that we need to take 4,000 or 5,000 more from Austria.

I am of course also troubled that since your advice as well as mine as to setting up a small organization to handle the resettlement of refugees in other countries was disregarded, and responsibility was really given to the escapee program in the State Department which is inadequate, we are not doing as well as we should with that work. However, I felt that after having left the White House I could hardly decently go back and try to tell them how I think things ought to be done.

Dear Tracy:

Thank you for your kind note on the termination of the work of the President's Committee for Hungarian Refugee Relief. I cannot let this opportunity pass without indicating that without your personal leadership and drive, particularly during the early days of the special effort for the Hungarian refugees, the program may well have floundered and we would have had difficulties in accomplishing the President's objectives. I believe that this experience with the Hungarian refugee program gives support to the thesis that special emergency programs often require an individual coming from outside the existing government agencies to spear-head the required efforts.
