PINEY GREEN THUMB: LANDSCAPING WITH THE NATIVES

Teaberry (Gaultheria procumbens), a perfect plant for the piney green thumb

by Russell Juelg
Director for Outreach

It's often said that early settlers called the Pinelands region the "Pine Barrens" because they couldn't grow what they wanted in the acidic, nutrient-poor soil. Current settlers often have the same issue. Only now, we're not desperately trying to grow food; we're enjoying the luxury of gardening and landscaping.

It's a struggle, though, because conventional gardening and landscaping in the Pinelands usually requires amending the soil and maintaining an irrigation system to grow exotic plants.

Of course, the Pine Barrens isn't barren. Attractive things grow here. Native trees, shrubs, vines, mosses, herbaceous flowers, grasses, sedges, rushes, fascinating carnivorous plants, and a plethora of aquatic species—they're mostly perfectly happy with the soil. So, why aren't more people using them in gardening and landscaping?

Well, in a nutshell, we may be trying to do what is conventional, rather than what is logical. Acidic, nutrient-poor soils don't support lush green lawns. Acidic, nutrient-poor soils don't support most of the plants being sold in local nurseries. On the other hand, they do support plenty of fascinating, beautiful, and very low-maintenance natives.

The answer to the problems of landscaping in the Pinelands is surprisingly simple. Grow things that like to grow here. Forget about the Better Homes and Gardens look. Do something more imaginative, creative, and distinctive. Be like the Pineys, rather than the Joneses!

The piney green thumb is based on a few simple principles. First, leave things the way nature intended, at least as much as possible and practical. Second, encourage the native plants that are already there, if you want, and discourage the ones you don't want. Third, when you plant new things, plant natives.

Leaving nature alone has enormous advantages. You can save time and money. The wildlife in your area will benefit, because they are adapted to the habitats and foods that native plants provide. And you'll have the peace of mind that comes with knowing you are really helping to preserve the character of this globally significant ecosystem.

I don't know the most effective and politically saleable way to solve New Jersey's budget crisis. It's been easy to attack ideas like raising the freeway tolls or the gas tax to relieve the terrible debt burden past governors and legislatures have built up. It's easy to say, "just cut out the fat!" or "live within our means!" But it's vital to remember that severe and arbitrary budget cuts can also bring severe and arbitrary harms that we cannot undo once the crisis is past.

Governor Corzine's proposed FY 2009 budget includes a draconian cut to the Pinelands Commission's budget. The Pinelands Preservation Alliance is very concerned that this level of funding cutback will lead to permanent harms in the Pinelands. We are asking the Governor and Legislature to reduce the proposed cuts. I hope everyone who cares about the Pinelands will help by telling state decision makers how important it is that the Pinelands Commission not be crippled by unreasonable cuts.

We do not expect the Pinelands Commission to escape further budget reductions next year—even though it has already endured cuts in state support and staffing in recent years. But the proposed budget calls for state funding to the Pinelands Commission to fall by $780,000 for FY 2009. That represents a cut of 23% in funding from the current year level. In fact, the proposed state funding of $2,618,000 for FY 2009 is less than the funding the Commission received in FY 1996. Such drastic cuts are far more severe than proposed for other, comparable agencies. Such drastic cuts will make it impossible for the Commission to do its job in controlling development across one-fifth of the state.

The 23% cut is actually much worse than that number alone suggests.

Unlike most state agencies, the Commission is required to pay its employee health benefits and retiree pensions out of its own operating budget. Most agencies have these costs paid through a separate set of shared inter-departmental accounts that get their own budget allocation. There is no valid reason the Pinelands Commission should not also get to participate in this system. Health care and pension costs are continuing to rise much faster than inflation. This means a 23% cut in state funding will actually translate into more than a 30% cut in the funds the Commission actually has to do its job.

The Pinelands Commission is charged with planning growth and reviewing all development plans for conformance with its strict environmental standards throughout the 936,000 acre Pinelands Area. This job requires highly skilled professionals with the time to review complex policy issues and development plans that range from individual homes to massive commercial and residential developments. As time goes on, and land in the growth zones in and around the Pinelands gets built out, the Commission's job is getting harder, not easier.

We expect the proposed cuts would have three negative consequences:

- The Commission will lose a disproportionate number of expert staff and not be able to replace and train new professionals. This will be on top of the fact that the Commission's staff is already 11% under its authorized levels due to the hiring freeze and tight budgets in recent years.
- Commission reviews will be shortchanged, problems will not always be found and addressed, and bad or poorly designed developments will be approved as remaining staff are simply stretched beyond the limit of what they can do. That is inevitable if there are not enough trained staff for the volume of applications across this huge region.

- Innovative policy changes that are needed to solve the massive threats facing the Pinelands environment today will be put on the back burner or lost in the shuffle of day-to-day project reviews and crises.

When it comes to controlling development, mistakes are permanent. Once a housing subdivision, shopping mall or road is built, it is never going to be unbuilt. The loss of habitat, aquifer recharge and plant and animal life that comes with developing Pinelands forests is a loss forever.

We have proposed the Governor and Legislature do two things: (a) include the Pinelands Commission in the statewide interdepartmental accounts for benefits and pensions, and (b) limit the budget cut to no more than 10% of this year's allocation, which should give the Commission a fighting chance to do its job well during this round of fiscal crisis.

COMING IN JUNE:

2ND ANNUAL STATE OF THE PINELANDS REPORT

In June PPA will publish its second annual State of the Pinelands Report. The report will detail how the specific actions of government agencies and appointed & elected officials either helped or harmed the Pinelands during the previous year, including the Pinelands Commission, NJ Department of Environmental Protection, NJ State Legislature, Governor, mayors, township councils, federal representatives and actions by the courts. The report is released each year during the last week in June to coincide with the anniversary of the signing of the Pinelands Protection Act on June 28, 1979.

Of course there are practical limits to leaving nature alone. Most of us want at least a little patch of lawn, and we have some favorite plants that may require amending the soil on a small scale. Also, it's very important in the Pinelands to make our landscaping "fire-wise." This means keeping some clear space around our homes and not using extremely flammable plant materials (such as pines and laurels) close to structures.

The second principle of the piney green thumb involves getting intimate with the natives. Most people are surprised at how easily they fall in love with the locals, once they get to know them. Women have been known to swoon the first time they notice Pennsylvania Sedge in bloom. Men's heartbeats race at the sight of Little Bluestem backlit by the evening sun.

you have a patch of Wild Lupine just outside your door?

Tinker with these things to suit your tastes. Some shrubs may look better with a little pruning. Some wildflowers will appreciate a little water during a drought. Some things want more sunlight, and some want a little less. Small patches can become bigger and more dramatic with a little cultivation.

Finally, the more we learn about Pinelands native plants, the more we will want new things. Compare the inventory of native plant suppliers with the plants shown in Howard Boyd's Field Guide, and you might be surprised at what you can get. They may be available as seeds, plugs, in pots, or in ball and burlap.

The Pine Barrens is not barren. There's no shortage of native plants that have excellent applications in gardening and landscaping. Using a piney green thumb requires less time and money. It helps to preserve the character of the Pinelands, because it doesn't change the chemistry of the soil and water. It's good for the local wildlife. And it helps us get better acquainted with our own backyard, the surprisingly un-barren Pinelands.

Demonstrations of native plant landscaping are on display at the Bishop Farmstead

Seriously, if you live in a natural area of the Pinelands, you probably already have things that you want in your yard. How can anyone not like Mountain Laurel? What could be prettier than a little bog garden with Pitcher Plants and Sundews? Maybe

Heart of the Pines: A Depression-Era Tour

Date: Saturday, June 7, 1:00 - 4:30 p.m.

Location: Egg Harbor City Historic Society, 533 London Avenue, Egg Harbor City

Speakers: Budd Wilson, historian and archaeologist; Barbara Solem-Stull, author, Ghost Towns and other Quirky Places in the New Jersey Pine Barrens; Joanne Wright, educator

Description: Learn about the impact of the 1930s New Deal WPA (Works Progress Administration) on the people and places of the NJ Pine Barrens. During these grim depression years the federal government hired thousands of unemployed American men to do work to preserve the nation's natural resources. Camps of these workers (Civilian Conservation Corps) were located at Bass River State Forest, Lebanon State Forest, Mount Misery and Egg Harbor City.

Lenape Lifestyles

Date: Sunday, June 22, 2:00 - 4:00 p.m.

Location: Pinelands Preservation Alliance, 17 Pemberton Road, Southampton Township

Speaker: Bill Guthrie, professor of education, Rider University

Description: Bill Guthrie brings the work, play and ceremonies of the Lenape Indians to life in this lively and enjoyable presentation that illustrates the daily lives of New Jersey's residents before Europeans arrived. Dr. Guthrie has studied the lifestyle and material goods of the Lenape Indians for many years and has made five short videos and other teaching materials that incorporate his extensive knowledge.

Photo: PPA
Mansion at Batsto Village, Wharton State Forest

Elizabeth White and the Blueberry

Date: Sunday, July 13, 1:00 - 4:00 p.m.

Location: Whitesbog Village

Speaker: Nancy O'Mallon, filmmaker, The Mighty Humble Blueberry

Description: Take a walking tour of Whitesbog Village, birthplace of the cultivated blueberry, and learn what life was like for the workers at Whitesbog through a visit to the Interpretive Cottage, Agricultural Museum and Elizabeth White's home. The tour ends with blueberry picking, a summer treat for guests.

Black Doctor of the Pines & His Family

Date: Saturday, August 2, 2:00 - 4:00 p.m.

Location: Corson Poley Center/Burlington County Historical Society, 451 High Street, Burlington City

Speaker: Francine Still Hicks, the great, great granddaughter of Dr. James Still Description: Learn about Dr. James Still, the Black Doctor of the Pines, a man who gave of his soul and spirit to become a great healer. There were 18 children in the Still family, some who have continued to contribute to the longevity and legacy of the Still family.

Optional: Short walk to Underground Railroad Café.

Railroading in the Pines

Date: Saturday, August 16, 2:00 - 4:00 p.m.

Location: Neighborhood Arts Center, 64 Hanover Street, Pemberton Borough

Speaker: Paul W. Schopp, historian

Description: Almost 175 years ago, the first primitive railroad penetrated the portion of New Jersey known as the Pine Barrens. Did the entrepreneurs who built these railroads achieve their objectives? What impact did this revolutionary transportation modality have on the Pine Barrens, its industries, and its residents? Historian Paul Schopp will explore these questions and others as he explains the history of railroading in the Pines.

Optional: Guided tour of Pemberton Train Station and guided walk of the Rail Trail in Pemberton.

Working the Cycle

Date: Saturday, September 13, 1:00 - 3:00 p.m.

Location: Tuckerton Seaport, 120 West Main Street, Tuckerton

Speaker: Jaclyn Stewart, Director, Jersey Shore Folklife Center at Tuckerton Seaport

Description: Examine the cycle of seasonal occupations practiced in the Pine Barrens and along the New Jersey shore. This program includes a gallery talk in the Seaport's "Working the Cycle" exhibit. You will learn how this tradition carries on today through historical research and artifacts and current fieldwork conducted by the Jersey Shore Folklife Center. Meet baymen currently working on the water and in the Pines.

Optional: Boat tour of Tuckerton Creek.

Optional: Walking tour of Tuckerton Seaport, boat-works, decoy carving shops, clam and oyster houses.

Unearthing the Industrial Past: An Introduction to Archaeology in the New Jersey Pine Barrens

Date: Saturday, October 11, Noon - 2 p.m.

Location: Brendan Byrne State Forest

Speaker: Scott Wieczorek, archaeologist, Louis Berger Group

Description: Since colonial times, New Jersey's Pine Barrens have been host to a vast array of historic and cultural treasures. Communities such as Batsto, Whitesbog, and Woodmansie, and Red Oak Grove developed around industries like the smelting of bog iron, blueberries, coastal salt works, paper mills, and saw mills. Over the past few decades these industries and their communities have been slowly disappearing from local memory. This program focuses on the story of one forgotten industry, the Pine Barrens clay industry.

The Mullica River & the Forks

Date: Saturday, October 11, 2:00 - 4:00 p.m.

Location: Batsto Visitor Center, Wharton State Forest

Speakers: Robert Auermuller Jr, Superintendent, Batsto Park; Dale Denda of the Affair at Egg Harbor Historical Society; Timothy Hart, Executive Director, Tuckerton Seaport; and Thomas Farner, noted historian.

Description: Learn about the key role of the Mullica River and the Forks in the American War of Independence. Includes a discussion of the raid on Chestnut Neck October 1778 and the defense of Egg Harbor (Tuckerton) between Captain Ferguson and Casimir Pulaski. Also includes the story of Benedict Arnold and the court martial resulting from his alleged use of government wagons to transport his belongings.

Optional: Guided bus tour of Chestnut Neck, Batsto, Forks, and Affair in Egg Harbor (Little Egg Harbor).

A Revolutionary Tavern in the Pines

Date: Saturday, October 18, 10:00 a.m. - Noon

Location: Wells Mills County Park [Route 532, Waretown] and on-site visit to Cedar Bridge Tavern [Old Half Mile Road (off Route 72), Barnegat] following lecture.

Speakers: Tom Farner, local historian, author of New Jersey in History: Fighting to Be Heard; Tim Hart, president of the Stafford Township Historical Society and executive director of the Tuckerton

Seaport; German Georgieff, chief park naturalist, Wells Mills Park (Ocean) County Park

Description: A little-known, colonial tavern with a 200-year old bar tucked in a corner of its main room is still nestled within the Pine Barrens. Besides its remarkable longevity, the tavern was the site of what some historians consider to have been the last "battle" of the Revolutionary War. Tom Farner, Tim Hart, and German Georgieff together tell the story of Cedar Bridge Tavern: its origins, its life as a tavern, and its recent acquisition by Ocean County. After the talk take a tour of this extraordinary "Revolutionary Tavern in the Pines."

Come Earnest Homeseekers: Ethnic Settlements in the Pines

Date: Wednesday, November 12, 7:00 - 9:00 p.m.

Location: Pinelands Preservation Alliance, 17 Pemberton Road, Southampton Township

Speaker: Mark Demitroff, Pinelands geographer

Description: Large tracts of desolate land became accessible for development schemes when railroads began to criss-cross the Pine Barrens during the mid 19th century. Immigrants, beckoned by dubious promises of prosperity and independence, settled upon modest garden plots offered at bargain prices. This presentation commemorates the meaning of place for German, Italian, and Jewish settlers who sought security by taming an impoverished wilderness while overcoming social intolerance during a eugenics movement.

3RD ANNUAL NATIVE PLANT SALE

by Becky Free

PPA held its third annual Native Plant Sale on April 20th. This year we offered a Members Only Preview Sale on April 18th from 3:00 to 6:00 p.m. Both events were a great success. We sold over 1,100 plants native to the Pine Barrens and/or South Jersey. Thank you to all who attended and purchased plants. PPA is grateful for the support of Pinelands Nursery, which provided the majority of plants for the sale. Thanks also to RareFind Nursery in Jackson and to Fernbrook Nursery in Chesterfield for supplying plants. We could not hold this event without the help of PPA's staff and volunteers—thank you very much for working so hard on this event!

Gardeners came early to get the best selection

We sold 423 plants at our first ever Members Only Preview Sale on Friday. Including sales from Sunday, the total number of plants sold this year was 1,142 (compared to 763 plants last year).

Popular plants species this year included New York Aster, Sweet Pepperbush, Sheep Laurel, and Sand Myrtle.

Getting a head start on a "piney green thumb"

After expenses, PPA cleared approximately $3,394, all of which goes towards supporting our mission. In addition, merchandise sales at the Visitor Center exceeded $1,000 over the course of both days.

On a related note, PPA's new Gardening with Nature: A Guide to Native Plant Landscaping in the New Jersey Pinelands will soon be available. This 8-page guide will include a background on native Pinelands plants, the benefits of using them in landscaping, alternatives to lawns, advice on how to create wildlife habitat, and a handy plant list of common natives that are commercially available (includes common and scientific names, blooming period, soil preference, sun/shade and height). Call (609) 859-8860 to request a copy, or stop by the Bishop Farmstead.
