INTRODUCTION

The New Jersey Historical Society and Rutgers University possess two of the most important library collections for the study of New Jersey history. Unfortunately, researchers have frequently worked at one place without knowing the holdings of the other. To help remedy this situation this union list of New Jersey annual publications was prepared. It represents the first joint project of its kind between the two institutions.

In preparing this volume the compilers thoroughly examined the entire printed collections of the historical society and, at Rutgers, the special collections and government documents departments of the Archibald S. Alexander Library. Since the holdings of these two libraries are so strong in material for the study of New Jersey's history, it is hoped that researchers will recognize the independent bibliographic value of this combined record.

The union list is divided into sections that cover both public and private organizations. The former includes governmental publications from the municipal, county, and state levels, while the latter is concerned with the publications of a variety of associations and institutions. The annuals of agricultural and civic associations, clubs, health care and social welfare groups, religious associations and institutions, businesses, schools, and trade and professional associations are all considered. For the purposes of this list, an institution has been defined as an establishment organized for public use or for the public welfare, and an association as an organization whose members share common interests or goals.

A few preliminary remarks to familiarize the user with the format, contents, and scope of this union list are warranted. Although most associations and institutions frequently concern themselves with more than one activity, an attempt has been made to categorize each under only one heading. The index, a detailed record of names, places, and subjects, covers each activity and should be consulted if an association or institution is not found readily in the main body of the work. Exceptions to the private/government breakdown occur with schools, state- and county-run agricultural associations, and reformatories and prisons. Rather than appearing under their governmental sponsoring bodies, they are situated, respectively, under Public Schools, Agricultural Associations, and Health Care and Social Welfare Institutions. Religious Institutions are listed by denomination, Religious Associations are broken down into denominational and interdenominational sections, and Schools are categorized by the type of learning institution: private, public, or college and professional. In the State Government section the words New Jersey have been eliminated from the beginning of each entry line. Annuals published by Rutgers and the historical society have been omitted. Almanacs, trade catalogues, and city directories have also been excluded; they are intended as subjects of future joint publications.

It should be emphasized that this volume is a union list rather than a catalogue or bibliography, and that many of the entries record organizations in New Jersey for researchers for the first time. The organization's name, a short title of its publication, occasional explanatory matter, and the holdings of Rutgers (NjR) and the Society (NjHi) are included in the entries. The list is current to 1975 with the hope that it will be updated periodically.

Acknowledgements

The compilers would like to extend their special thanks to the Library Services and Construction Act, Title III program and its administrator, Richard Colucci of the New Jersey State Library, for providing the funds and encouragement to initiate and complete this project.

At Rutgers University, Donald A. Sinclair, Curator of Special Collections, assisted in locating materials and provided valuable advice concerning the content and style of this union list. Clark L. Beck, Jr. and Edward T. Skipworth, colleagues at Rutgers, helped to find annual publications of private institutions and associations. Mary K. Fetzer and Leslie H. Ota, government documents librarians, did the same for New Jersey government annuals.

At The New Jersey Historical Society, Director Robert M. Lunny’s interest, encouragement, and advice are greatly appreciated. The compilers also wish to acknowledge the thoughtful contributions of the Society’s library staff: Don C. Skemer, Cynthia E. Browne, and Robert C. Morris, Librarian.

William T. Kerr of the New Jersey State Library read the manuscript and offered advice on its style and content. The compilers thank Diane E. Kauffman and Paul A. Stellhorn of the New Jersey Historical Commission for helping to prepare the manuscript for publication.
