Introduction

The Special Collections Department of the Rutgers University libraries has an outstanding collection of New Jersey research materials. A significant part of that collection consists of over 1,600 periodical titles published in New Jersey, which differ greatly in age, size, frequency, scope, content, and degree of rarity. The items covered in this Checklist range from the eighteenth century to the present. A few have been published continuously for over a century; others disappeared after one or two issues. These periodicals reflect almost every conceivable topic that could apply to the state of New Jersey. Agriculture, business, education, health care, and religion are just a few of the many subjects that concerned their editors and publishers, and the extensive subject index following the text documents this well. The periodicals also differ in levels of sophistication, ranging from obscure amateur publications of a few pages and in-house organizational newsletters (usually printed as cheaply as possible, often on newsprint) to large journals of professional quality printed to the standards of fine monographs. With all these variations, the New Jersey periodicals collection helps document the history and culture of the state in a unique fashion. It provides an often neglected, but important, record—many times the only record—of organizations and activities that may no longer exist.

Entries in the Checklist are arranged alphabetically by title. In case of a title change where the numbering remains continuous, the most recent title constitutes the entry (all previous titles are listed in the index). If the numbering reverts back to volume one under the new title, then the changed title is listed as a separate publication with appropriate notations in the text such as preceded by or succeeded by.

Each entry consists of: (1) the title; (2) place of publication (in case of place changes, the most recent locale is used, with previous ones noted in the index); (3) publisher, if not already stated in the title; (4) frequency of publication, if known; (5) degree of completeness (if the time span indicated is complete, nothing appears here; if there are no issues or only a few issues within the time span indicated, the designation scattered appears; if there is a good or nearly complete file within the time span, the designation incomplete appears); (6) time span covered, including volumes, numbers, and inclusive dates, if known (if the periodical is still being published and received at Rutgers, the designation + appears); (7) informational notes containing subject and publishing details where relevant (if the periodical is known to have ceased publication or changed title, it is noted here).

The appendix is a listing of New Jersey cities and towns where periodicals in the Checklist were published. This will enable the researcher of a particular locale to examine all of the items published there.

An extensive index follows, containing an integrated, alphabetical listing of subjects, places, institutions, publishers, and editors. Instructions for using the index are printed at the beginning of that section.

It should be noted that locating and acquiring new titles is a continuous process: New titles appear, and old titles die constantly. Every effort has been made to keep abreast of this activity. It is hoped that periodic updates of the Checklist will be published to reflect these changes.
Acknowledgments

The compiler would like to acknowledge the generous assistance provided by the New Jersey Committee for the Humanities and the Rutgers University Research Council in funding this project. Paul A. Stellhorn, assistant director of the New Jersey Committee for the Humanities, gave much time and energy in evaluating the manuscript. The Research Council provided funding early in the project for typing and editing.

At the Rutgers University Library, Donald A. Sinclair, curator of Special Collections, spent many hours throughout every phase of the project advising and sharing the vast wealth of knowledge that he has accumulated in collecting, describing, and servicing the department for the past thirty-five years. Hendrik Edelman, university librarian, offered encouragement and ideas for funding and publication. Other colleagues, Clark L. Beck, Jr., Edward T. Skipworth, and Thomas G. Knoles, were extremely helpful in locating obscure titles, proofreading, and taking on the compiler's public-service duties during the periods over the last seven years when he was submerged by this project.

E. Richard McKinstry, associate librarian, Printed Book and Periodical Collection at the Winterthur Museum, and collaborator on previous bibliographic tasks, painstakingly read through the entire manuscript. His work resulted in many important suggestions for corrections and additions that have greatly improved the usefulness of the Checklist. The same can be said about the help of a publication committee consisting of Richard F. Hixson, professor of Human Communications, Rutgers University; Reese V. Jenkins, editor of the papers of Thomas A. Edison; Robert C. Morris, head of Special Collections, Teachers College Library, Columbia University; and Don C. Skemer, editor of publications, The New Jersey Historical Society.

At the Rutgers University Publications Office, Hope M. Fead and Marilyn E. Buckingham provided much needed guidance and patience. The design, layout, and printing of this compilation are their responsibility. Each draft of the manuscript was typed by Diane E. Kauffman of the New Jersey Historical Commission.

The compiler is grateful to all of these people for their roles in the finished product and accepts full responsibility for any errors and omissions that have inevitably slipped through.
