INTRODUCTION

THIS BIBLIOGRAPHY is a record of 449 publications which reflect and define New Jersey's involvement with liquor.

In America and elsewhere, alcohol as a drinkable has been of social, economic, medical, and moral interest for generations. During the 19th and early 20th centuries there was much agitation against it, as well as some effort in its defense. The subject of temperance, and total abstinence, was belabored frequently in sermons and lay addresses which sometimes invoked the Bible's authority, pro or con.

Many organizations were formed to promote temperance, liquor control, treatment of "inebriates" and, increasingly, prohibition. Earliest of these in New Jersey apparently was the Sober Society (1807) of Allentown. Statewide were the New Jersey State Temperance Society (1834) and New Jersey State Temperance Alliance (1871). There were also state and local affiliates of several national organizations, such as the Sons of Temperance (1846), International Organization of Good Templars (1867), Daughters of Temperance (1840's), and of course the Woman's Christian Temperance Union (1874), which still has a modest existence.

Prohibition, as a solution to the liquor problem, was promoted vigorously by the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey, along with church groups and the various temperance societies. Opposing prohibition were speeches or writings of some prominent Jerseymen, including Dwight W. Morrow, Hiram Maxim, former governors (Griggs, Edwards, Edge, and Stokes), even a few clergymen. Also in opposition were many publications of the Manufacturers and Merchants Association of New Jersey—which was probably a creation of the Newark brewers.

During the brief existence of national Prohibition, 1919-1933, the no-liquor laws were widely violated in New Jersey. Despite conscientious efforts by a few agencies to enforce them, New Jersey was regularly known as a "wet" state. Police and politicians were often corrupt or indifferent, and the general population was more or less indifferent as well. With little effort at concealment, "speakeasies" operated in large numbers, and rum-runners regularly unloaded their cargos from ships along the Jersey shore.

This compilation is the product of extensive searching in a dozen well-equipped libraries* and a number of other sources. While the publications described here are both representative and numerous, further such items doubtless exist. It has not been possible to visit all the libraries in the state, and (with a few shining exceptions) mail inquiries addressed to some of them have not been productive. Most have not been answered at all.

A personal detail: The compiler has a special interest in, perhaps affinity for, this subject. He was born 1916 in Kansas, where prohibition had existed more or less successfully for thirty-some years, of parents and grandparents who were firm temperance supporters. Both grandfathers, one-time drinkers, had been converted to the cause by the example, and gentle nudging, of their wives. The Pennsylvania father of one is said to have become an excessive drinker following the early death of his wife, and to have shortened his life thereby. He only lived to be 70 but his son, my temperate grandfather, was a sturdy fellow who died reluctantly at 98. A consequence of abstemious living, no doubt.

"Entered according to Act of Congress ... 1860, by Frederick Stone."
Caption title: "Trial of George Acker, for the murder of Isaac H. Gordon, near Montville, in Morris County, N.J., on the 18th day of October, 1859."
Letterpress (incl. port., map, and imprint) on covers.
"From my lonely cell I submit these, my sober second-thoughts, to the public, hoping that it may avail something for the support of a wife and four children left in poverty, and that it may be a warning to young men to beware of evil associates and of everything that can intoxicate."—cover.
"The honest rumseller's advertisements": p.[52]. Anti-liquor parody.
This is something of a temperance tract. The trial testimony was full of detail about excessive drinking, and Acker's confession—obviously written for him (he was illiterate) by some temperance activist, probably a minister—belabored his resultant alcoholic episodes.
3. THE ADVOCATE. A NORTHERN NEW JERSEY TEMPERANCE WEEKLY. Paterson, N.J., 1890?- weekly. NjR (v.2, no.45, June 14, 1892, imperf.)

"Official organ of the Sons of Temperance, Paterson, N.J."

From William Nelson sale Illustrated Catalogue of New Jersey Memora-bilia, etc. (1915), no.971: "The Alarm Bell; Vol. I. Nos. 1-9, inclusive. Alfred Gibbs Campbell, Editor and Proprietor ... Said to be all ever issued. A monthly journal devoted to the suppression of Rum and Slavery, published for the modest sum of twenty-five cents per annum. The initial number appeared on July 4, 1851, followed by issues in August and September of that year, and May, June, July, August, September, and October of 1852. Contains a black list of names of Patersonians who recommended tavern licenses in April-June, 1851, ‘many of them heartily ashamed of their acts;’ Resolutions of the American Anti-Slavery Society; contribution on Woman Suffrage, &c. Owing to the editor's outspoken utterances, he often experienced trouble in getting out his paper. In one number he says,—‘Our former printer ... has declined to print our paper any longer; but there are other presses in town. 16. [BENEZET, ANTHONY] 1713-1784. The mighty destroyer displayed, in some account of the dreadful havock made by the mistaken use as well as abuse of distilled spirituous liquors. By a lover of mankind ... Trenton: Printed by Isaac Collins, 1779. 48p. NjHi NjR

20. BLOOMFIELD, N.J. CITIZENS. Bloomfield, April 11th, 1884. Dear Sir. [Bloomfield, N.J., 1884] broadside. 27.7 x 21cm. NjR "Heretofore, through the connivance of public officers and the apathy of the masses, it has been notoriously impossible to obtain the enforcement of the laws designed to restrict the traffic in intoxicating drinks ... Will you attend a meeting to be held on Tuesday evening, April 15th ... in the First Presbyterian Church, to listen to some statements in reference to the illegal selling of liquors in our township and to confer with other citizens as to the best method of restricting it?"

21. BLOOMFIELD TEMPERANCE SCHOOL, Bloomfield, N.J. The members of the Bloomfield Temperance School propose raising a fund for the purpose of providing a room for their use. In aid of this fund they are making preparations for a fair, to be held February 22d, 1886, and will be thankful for donations ... [Bloomfield, N.J., 1886] broadside. 14 x 21.5cm. NjR At the end are names of eighteen young women, most unmarried. Attached is a printed communication from (Miss) E. L. Biddulph. "I beg leave to call your attention to the enclosed circular, and would say that, it is our purpose to publish a paper in connection with the fair, and we would like to secure short advertisements for a few leading houses in your line of business ..."

22. BLOOMFIELD TEMPERANCE SOCIETY. Constitution of the Bloomfield Temperance Society. [n.p., 18—] broadside. 30 x 19.2cm. NjR Looks to be from about the 1840's, or earlier. "Whereas incalculable evils have resulted ... from the improper use of distilled liquors; and whereas the sin of Intemperance is now jeopardizing ... thousands of our citizens ... the friends of order [etc.] ... in the Congregation of Bloomfield, resolved to form themselves into a Society for the promotion of temperance ... This Society shall be denominated the Bloomfield Temperance Society, Auxiliary to the American Society for the promotion of Temperance."

Follows a dispute in the Asbury Park and Ocean Grove newspapers as to whether Methodist ministers should support political candidates other than those of the Prohibition Party.

Boole was a member of the church's New York East Conference. "I came to this 'city by the sea' for rest from nervous prostration, and not for controversy ... Certainly I did not suppose Prohibition would need my voice for its support in Asbury Park and Ocean Grove where three weekly papers profess to endorse it ..."

43. CITIZENS' EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, NEWARK, N.J. To the voters of the city of Newark. The laws concerning the civil Sabbath are openly violated in this city by the prosecution of various forms of prohibited traffic ...
The liquor dealers of the city, who are the principal offenders, have formally declared that they will strike down every candidate for office who will not pledge himself to comply with their demands. These demands include not only the defiance of existing laws, but their repeal and the removal of all restrictions upon Sunday lawlessness, crime and disorder ... One [candidate for mayor] was nominated with express reference to catching the saloon vote ... Only one candidate in the field for the Mayoralty distinctly represents the demand for such a Sabbath as the law assures. Wm. E. Pine ... A vote for him is a vote for good government ... 44. CITIZENS’ INDEPENDENT TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION, BRIDGE-TON, N.J. An appeal to the voters of Bridgeton. The present is a critical time for Bridgeton. Never in the history of our city has the subject of prohibition of the liquor traffic been so pressed home to the hearts and consciences of thinking men. The election which will be held next Tuesday is of unusual interest and importance, as on the result thereof depends the existence of bar-rooms and drinking saloons in Bridgeton. The names of Eli E. Rogers, William S. DuBois and Daniel Bacon appear among the nominees for members to city council. These men are pledged to vote against licensing any person to sell liquor as a beverage in the city of Bridgeton. Do not vote for any unpledged men. The Citizens’ Independent Temperance Association hereby appeals to you to vote for these men for the following reasons ... It will save you money ... It will save Bridgeton’s good name ... It will save the young men ... It will save the home ... Kindly prepare your ticket, put it in your pocket, and vote early in the morning. The Citizens’ Independent Temperance Asso. [Bridgeton, N.J., 1884] broadside. 21.5 x 13cm. Jjf

45. CITIZENS TEMPERANCE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, BRIDGETON, N.J. To the voters of Bridgeton! The past six years have witnessed an unparallel period of prosperity in the city of Bridgeton ... The deposits in our banks, subject to check, have increased ... Again, we believe the standard of morality is higher today than it was six years ago. The moderate drinker is fast losing cast in society, while the drunkard is not recognized among respectable people ... In the election of councilmen to manage the business affairs of our city, we should be neither Democrats, Republicans nor Prohibitionists. We therefore appeal to you as citizens to lay aside your party affiliations, and vote for councilmen solely with reference to the best interests of our city ... We leave the intelligent voter to decide on Tuesday next whether we shall have rum, moral, physical, and financial ruin to many of our fellow citizens, an increase of crime, misery, pauperism and degradation, or an increase of prosperity, peace, plenty and happiness to the great mass of our people. Which will you choose? By order of the Citizens Temperance Ex. Com. [Bridgeton, N.J.,

"Published at the request of the Society."

49. CONSIDERATIONS on the customary use of spirituous liquors. By a philanthropist. Also, A treatise on their manufactory, &c. By Mentor ... Burlington, N.J.: Printed by David Allinson & Co., 1811. 15,[1]p. NN

50. [COOPER, DAVID] 1725-1795. An enquiry into public abuses, arising for want of a due execution of laws, provided for the suppression of vice, in the state of New-Jersey: calculated to draw the attention of the executive authority, and people at large, to the necessity of an united exertion, that may produce a reformation ... Philadelphia: Printed and sold by Hall and Sellers; also sold by Isaac Collins, printer in Trenton; Thomas Redman, in Haddonfield; and John Redman, in Salem, 1784. 22p. NN

Deals considerably with the liquor problem.

Introduction signed (p.4): J. H. C.

"To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Newark": p.[5]-6. Petition of April 8, 1853, by "a Committee named at a mass meeting of the German citizens of Newark, held ... for the purpose of remonstrating against the severity of the laws and ordinances relative to the keeping the Sabbath ... Resolved, That the German citizens of ... Newark appreciate the motives and perseverance of certain of their fellow citizens in favor of the temperate and innocent use of pure and unadulterated spirituous liquors ... Resolved, That we hold the exclusive use of water to be noxious to the system, and the temperate use of good spirituous liquors, such as beer and wine, as also the innocent amusements afforded us in our beer and wine saloons, as indispensable to our well being, and demonstrated ... by physicians and chemists ..."

On the night of Aug. 7, 1855, some of Newark’s Germans were enjoying a ball on the upper floor of Putnam House. A group of young men, after some hours "on the town" and no longer sober, sought access to the temporary bar inside. At the demand for an admission fee a scuffle occurred, in which the proprietor (Bauer) was stabbed.

"The truth is ... the responsibility for this homicide ... belongs much to persons who cannot be accused. Dated (p.191): January 10th, 1821.

Account of seven weekly meetings "concerning the morality of distilling [and selling] ardent spirits." The seven participants were a doctor and five men of different faiths, including a Quaker and two Methodists, one of them a local preacher with some interest in a Sussex County distillery. The other was Julia Ann's maternal uncle "Matthias Methodius," a lay member of the Methodist Church, who somewhat managed the discussions.

The writer rendered all names pseudonymously—e.g., the locale, "one of the principal towns of New Jersey, (in which town I reside, with my widowed mother,)" whose home was the place of these meetings. She was a young woman experienced in shorthand and proofreading. "I had often assisted my father, who was a printer" (apparently alcoholic). "Ardent poisons have slain the husband of my mother's youth and choice—they have removed from my vision the once most affectionate father."

"Dedication to the venerable Gulielmus Waterdrinker. My dear Great Grand-father."—p.[3]-5.

From the William Nelson sale catalog (1915), no.797: "A curious little book on temperance edited by one whose name is undoubtedly a pseudonym, and published at a place the true appellation of which is also disguised, but is either Newark or Trenton, very likely."

"There are a great many Prohibitionists in each of the old parties ... If all these could only be brought together they would make short work of the rum evil ... Both [parties] have a large rum vote which they are unwilling to alienate ... License surely has been tried long enough. Let us have something more efficient. And the way to get it is not to dally with the old parties any longer, but vote PROHIBITION."

The Grand Division met four times yearly, in January, April, July, and October. Three were quarterly meetings. The fourth (in October through 1853, in January from 1854) was its annual meeting.

Reports of the meetings usually were published separately (continuously paged 1849-1852, several also in independently-paged editions), but combined "for the year ending January" 1854-1868 in an annual publication
(some or all of the April proceedings were published separately as well).
