"Making" connections across campuses: the Rutgers University Art Library Lego Playing Station

Rutgers University has made this article freely available. Please share how this access benefits you.
Your story matters. [https://rucore.libraries.rutgers.edu/rutgers-lib/46833/story/]

Citation to Publisher
Version: No citation available.

Terms of Use: Copyright for scholarly resources published in RUcore is retained by the copyright holder. By virtue of its appearance in this open access medium, you are free to use this resource, with proper attribution, in educational and other non-commercial settings. Other uses, such as reproduction or republication, may require the permission of the copyright holder.

Article begins on next page
BRIEF ABSTRACT: As libraries continue to grow and change in the 21st century, we are seeing outreach, engagement, and innovation becoming a more common language for libraries and their communities. Creating innovative projects and engaging events can help stimulate broader conversations of what the library is or can be. The Lego Playing Station was created to stimulate creativity, innovation, and a broader conversation within an academic library.

WHY THIS IS IMPORTANT
We are more likely to learn & come back when we are having FUN!
Creativity & making can build critical thinking skills and these are applicable to scholarly research.
Creativity, making, & engagement can create community.
Making can be inspiring.
There are lots of ways to create scholarship.

@MCLotts Rutgers University Libraries