

Terms never complied with and so omitted.

Winter Crumbs.
Clarior e Tenebris

Published at Braeburn.
W. J. Atkinson
Editor.

Vol 3rd

February 1877 No 1.

Editorial

The journal Winter Crumbs is about entering its third year of existence, and we are happy to inform the public that - in all departments of its columns it shows unusual vigor and interest.

The committee of publication have ejected E. B. A. from the editorial staff on account of negligence but since she has descended to the ranks of contributor, we promise our columns shall be greatly enriched thereby.

In answer to many complaints about the late issue of this number we beg to state that our volume for 1876 did not open until February, so this is but a few days later in the year, and if the zeal shown by some contributors for this number but continues we shall probably issue more papers.

A rival journal has been begun by the pupils of Mrs. Parks Seminary for which we wish greatest success, but fear that "The spirit of '78" - such is its title - cannot long survive if the fame of Winter Crumbs reaches that region. However let them hope for the best; and aim towards the high point we have attained.