A Cyclers' Map of Camden City—To Be Completed Next Sunday

(Notched lines indicate railways.)

It seems almost a pity to publish a cyclers' map of Camden city on the eve of her apparent awakening from her long period of somnolence in regard to her streets, and when any week may bring improvements that will reverse our present feelings towards her. Still, so many inquiries have been made as to the best and quickest way "to get through and out of" that city that I deemed it advisable to issue a map thereof in which the main eastward thoroughfares, with which we are chiefly concerned, are plainly shown and the others merely indicated by broken lines. Not to reduce it to uncomfortably small dimensions, I have divided it in two halves, the second of which will appear next Sunday. Both being drawn on exactly the same scale, can be pasted together for more convenient reference. A. E.
