Dear Sir,

Have received several letters and the "quarterly" O. H. I was immensely pleased to hear from the old school again and I look forward with pleasure to a continuance of the correspondence. I was sorry to learn that some of the boys have already made the supreme sacrifice, nevertheless, we who are scattered over our out-lying possessions frankly envy our more fortunate brothers - in arms - in France.

Life is very monotonous here at present and there is an absolute dearth of news, so I hope you will pardon my brevity.

I feel certain that the opening of a woman's college marks a bigger and grander epic in old Rutgers, already glorious history.

yours sincerely
Ray. O'Brien
